In 1957, Dr. Koliner revived the society known as Chi Epsilon Mu at the University of Pennsylvania. This society had its origin during the 1930's but was abandoned during World War II. After Chi Epsilon Mu was revived, Dr. Koliner came to Villanova and began to form Villanova's Chapter of Tau Beta Pi. In October, 1960, Dr. Koliner, along with three assistants, went to Lehigh to present their petition to the Tau Beta Pi Association. This marks the beginning of Villanova's Chapter of Tau Beta Pi and on February 11, 1961, a banquet was held for the installation at Villanova and for the initiation of the first members.

The first two members, both deceased, are: Fr. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., who was the first member, and his teacher, J. Stanley Morehouse, for whom a monument stands near the Chemical Engineering Building.

The last of a two part series

Draft Counseling Guide Clarifies Situation

By MIKE GIAMMARCO

What's ahead after a vague harbinger called registration? Part I of this series analyzed the situation, its possible causes, and implications.

A California lawyer named R. Charles Johnson has analyzed all the aspects of dealing with the draft. He's released his accumulated knowledge of over a decade in a new book entitled "Don't Sit in the Draft." It's being distributed by Nolo Press, a ten year old publishing company dealing mainly with self-help law books.

Johnson was drafted in 1967, and served during the Vietnam conflict until late 1970. His duties were heavily concentrated in draft counseling. His experience eventually led him to earn his law degree and apply it to draft law. He's practiced for the past ten years, specializing in draft and military law.

Johnson returned to counseling, much of it free of charge, and often represents military cases at the same expense. He has appeared on numberous radio and TV shows offering his advice, but only now has his dedication and knowledge been harvested into paperback form.

"Don't Sit in the Draft" is a long-awaited draft counseling guide. It's clear, quite easy reading, and pleasantly laced with Johnson's subtle humor. It offers more than just enjoyable reading. It's a comprehensive analysis of how to get your way with the system, tips on strategies, an in-depth look at the process itself, and a generous supply of advice and alternatives.

Johnson clarifies specific areas of concern by offering the A to Z's about classifications, deferments, exemptions, fitness standards, and tactfully appealing Draft Board decisions. He offers advice on the correct and legal methods of namipulating the system to your own advantage.

Johnson, above all, wishes the public to know that they hold an arsenal of options, most virtually unknown to the average draftee.

A startling statistic shows that 45% of those reporting for induction fail their physicals! The medical aspect alone leaves a countless number of loopholes to be utilized by the wary draftee. It's really just a matter of knowing your rights and obligations. There are scores of exceptions, exemptions, and exclusions which could permit many uninformed individuals to simply "slide-by."

The book was compiled by an insider, a man who not only knows the system, but was a functional part of it. The book lacks only confusing legal jargon, and complex material. It is written for the layman, and is aimed at those directly affected by the draft.

To receive a copy (240 pages, $6.95) contact: Nolo Press attn: Trudy Ahlstrom, P.O. Box 544, Occidental, Ca. 95465 or call: (707) 874-3105.

A startling statistic shows that 45% of those reporting for induction fail their physicals.

Campus Clip

Jeff Page Photo

Gale winds ripped off a branch which crashed into the cemetery near the main chapel on Wednesday morning. A chunk of the tree had to be removed to allow students to use the walkway.

BILLY NOVA

Develop Skills

With continued emphasis on the trend toward acquiring practical experience in higher education, it was announced today that the Villanova University has arranged internship opportunities for students in Washington, D.C.

According to Dr. Albert Dorley, coordinator of the program, internships are available in Congressional offices, Executive agencies, Public Interest organizations, and Judicial agencies as well as in many other areas of interest such as the environment, consumer affairs, journalism, communications, the arts, business and labor, to mention only a few.

Internships have become an increasingly popular component of students' curricula as they provide an opportunity to integrate academic theory with practice in an applied situation. In addition, internships enable students to develop professional skills, explore career options, participate in professional setting and discover strengths and weaknesses in their academic backgrounds so that they may better prepare for the future.

Internships also provide students with an extraordinary opportunity for personal development with the wealth of political, historical, and cultural attractions available in the nation's capital.

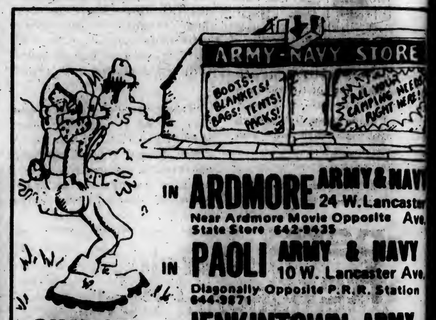
The internships are being handled by Dorley and have been developed in conjunction with the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives of Washington, D.C., a non-profit educational agency which develops the individual placements and provides internship placement, supervision, evaluation, academic seminars, housing, assemblies with outside speakers, and other support services for students for college and universities throughout the country.

While on an internship for a full term, students remain enrolled at, and receive academic credit from Villanova University based on evaluations performed by WCLA staff and faculty in Washington and facilitated by Villanova's campus liaison with WCLA.

Interns are juniors, seniors or graduate students. Placements are available in a wide range of interests and are appropriate for majors in any discipline.

Students interested in pursuing the possibility of an internship in Washington, D.C. should contact Dr. Dorley at 102 Vasey for more information. The deadline for the return of applications is April 1, 1981 for the fall semester program.

It seems that the WKWC editors are taking a lot of heat these da... so we'll take it back . . . James Taylor is not getting paid at all . . . now please don't be mad at us any more . . . did anyone read the letter t... the editor last week about the stolen Mentzer plaque . . . we really outd... ourselves last week . . . tell us something . . . why would the award wi... ner want to steal the plaque anyway? . . . it seems that the Villanova... has lost its subscription to our news service AP (Amoroso Press) . . . does anyone remember that this week is the one year anniversary of th... leak in the Connelly Center . . . there will be a party in the Field Ho... pool to celebrate . . . no Fitz, we're not going to say anything else abo... football . . . we learned our lesson . . . sure . . . we would like to thank maintenance for finally clearing the snow from the sidewalks . . . oh . . . thanks anyway . . . and speaking of cleaning, the photography lab in Sullivan is being replaced by a new laundry room . . . we guess that th... Dean of Men's office needs some more space to clean its dirty laundry . . . we hear that Good Counsel will look like a morgue with all th... flowers being delivered for Valentine's Day . . . it's dead there all the time anyway . . . will somebody please stop and let Miffy go to the bathroom? . . . rumor has it that the Connelly Center is adding a new room . . . the Harcum room . . . instead of being equipped with tables and chairs, it's equipped with beds and satin sheets . . . WKWC . . . who knows, who cares.



CHARGE!
Most Major Credit Cards Honored

IN ARDMORE ARMY & NAVY
24 W. Lancaster
Near Ardmore Movie Opposite Ave.
State Store 642-9435

IN PAOLI ARMY & NAVY
10 W. Lancaster Ave.
Diagonally Opposite P.R.R. Station
644-9871

IN JENKINTOWN ARMY & NAVY
705 Greenwood Ave.
On Bogo Parking Lot 884-9441

IN WAYNE ARMY & NAVY
158 E. LANCASTER 293-9632

LET YOUR CONCEPT BE OUR MUTUAL PRODUCT

Any & All Needs Considered
All Work Custom Printed By Photographer

Consultation and Tutoring in All Photographic Areas Available
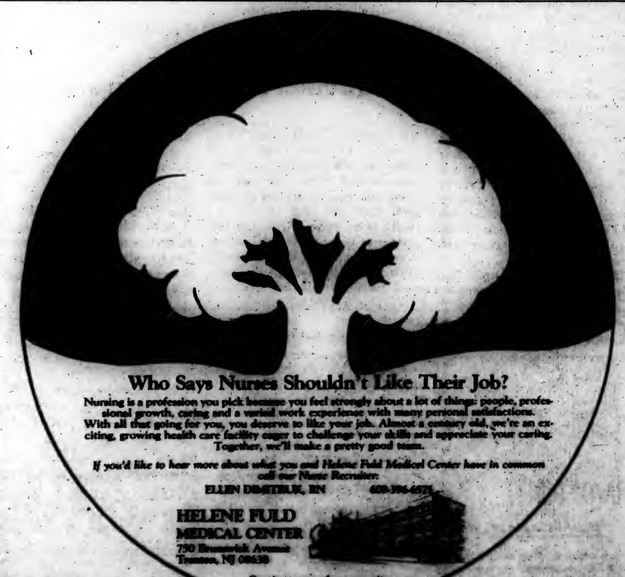
Call 642-2244 Weekends
Or Leave Name and Number During Week

20% DISCOUNT
With College I.D.
at
The Junior League Thrift Shop
604 Lancaster Avenue
Bryn Mawr, (across from Bryn Mawr Acme)
on all non-consignment items during the month of February
525-8513



Who Says Nurses Shouldn't Like Their Job?

Nursing is a profession you pick because you feel strongly about a lot of things: people, professional growth, caring and a varied work experience with many personal satisfactions. With all that going for you, you deserve to like your job. Almost a century old, we're an exciting, growing health care facility eager to challenge your skills and appreciate your caring. Together, we'll make a pretty good team.

If you'd like to hear more about what you and Helene Fuld Medical Center have in common call our Nurse Recruiter.

ELLEN DEBRUIN, RN 609-396-6171

HELENE FULD MEDICAL CENTER
750 Brunswick Avenue
Trenton, NJ 08638

Growing to serve the community

HUP

Where The Action Is!

Clinical Nursing Showcase '81
OPEN HOUSE
Wednesday, January 28, 4 to 8 p.m.

SILVERSTEIN PAVILION

HOSPITAL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

Come and talk with the nurses who help make HUP one of the finest hospitals in the country.

Refreshments & Tours & Exhibits & Souvenirs
Free Parking

Informal, informative, refreshing.

Find out for yourself what nursing is like in a major teaching hospital affiliated with North America's first school of medicine — big city, college campus, great benefits.

COME SEE US!!

FOR MORE INFORMATION
CALL/NANCY BLAKE, R.N.
662-2607

HOSPITAL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA
3400 SPRUCE STREET
PHILADELPHIA, PA 19104

"My Funny Valentine"

By LAURIE ALMEDA

Carmen settled on a weathered bench whose condition defied the playful sounds which radiated from the ferris wheel it faced year after year. Carmen's downcast expression betrayed her regard of the spirited sounds too.

The creeping feeling of being scrutinized by an unknown presence drew her attention away from the hardened gum flattened on the pavement. Sitting at the other end of the bench was a young man looking cheerful and inquisitive.

"You're somewhat of a curiosity in these parts," he said with a smile. "Most people enjoy themselves when they're at an amusement park."

Carmen presented the man with the best evil eye she could muster, and resumed her surveillance of the gum.

"Well I know sometimes people of our age must restrain themselves so as not to look foolish, but aren't you taking it a little too far?" he said, slightly irritated.

"Let me introduce myself — you may be inclined to be friendlier to someone you're acquainted with. My name is Galantin."

This time Carmen yielded a smirk as she inquired, "Galantin! What kind of name is that?"

Galantin shrugged his shoulders and responded with a smile, "My parents gave me the name of a saint with hopes that I might follow the ways of the blessed."

Carmen giggled as she extended her hand, "My name is Carmen, it is a pleasure to meet you sir."

"That's much better!" exclaimed Galantin. "I become upset when I see an unhappy face in an amusement park. What is so dreadful that even an amusement park can't offer a remedy?"

"Well for one thing," stated Carmen matter-of-factly, "it's Friday the 13, which has never been a day that makes my list of the best top ten. Also, my boyfriend and I broke up this morning."

Galantin's smile faded from his face as he said, "and tomorrow is Valentine's Day. That is a legitimate reason to be down in the dumps."

"I thought so," replied Carmen, whose gaze had returned to the gum.

"Well, come on," Galantin said as he pulled Carmen to her feet, "the best way to beat the blues is to fight back."

"Where are we going?" Carmen questioned in an exasperated voice.

"The most obvious place to go when you've been jilted," Galantin answered.

"The top of the observation tower so I can jump?" questioned Carmen sarcastically.

"That's the silliest thing I've ever heard," remarked Galantin. "We're going to the Tunnel of Love of course."

"I'll tell you about the origins of Valentine's Day," Galantin said quietly as the little boat bounced away from the dock.

"That seems appropriate," replied Carmen, "fill me in on what I'll be missing."

"Most people believe that Valentine's Day was established in honor of St. Valentine," began Galantin. "Actually, there were three St. Valentines who became martyrs somewhere after 250 AD. Not much is known about these saints; but there are a number of theories as to how the name Valentine came to be linked with the day on which sweethearts exchange symbols of love."

"There was a belief in Europe during the Middle Ages," continued Galantin, "that birds began to mate on Feb. 14."

"Another theory goes back to the time when the Romans celebrated the feast of Lupercalia in Feb.," Galantin persisted, "In a box were put the names of young men and women. Names were drawn from the box, and a young man would become the sweetheart of a young woman for the next year. Christian clergy objected to this custom and subetituted the names of saints for the names of the young people. For the next year, the youth spent their time attempting to emulate a saint, instead of courting a sweetheart."

"Kids never get to have any fun," commented Carmen.

"Since the name drawing occurred on Feb. 14, the day of the saint, it became Saint Valentine's Day," continued Galantin. "This custom eventually faded away; but the custom of giving presents continued. Later, it was the custom for only the young man to give a gift to the young woman. Once the postal service was established, the custom of sending valentines to sweethearts appeared."

"I still don't understand completely how Feb. 14 happened to be named the day of the saint," stated Carmen.

"I think I might have left one thing out," said Galantin casually. "The Normans had a Galantin's Day named after a saint, whose initial "g" was often pronounced as "v". This led to something of a confusion as to the name of the saint being celebrated. The final settlement happened to be Valentine."

"So that's the saint you're supposed to emulate Galantin," responded Carmen. "How did St. Galantin become connected with the day birds choose their mate?"

"Oh, well, Galantin has another meaning too," Galantin muttered.

"What's that?" questioned Carmen with an engaging smile.

As the two walked towards the exit sign of the park, Galantin responded, "Actually, it's a quite simple connection. The Norman word Galantin means a 'lover of women'."

Spend an afternoon at Keystone Race Track.

*Only $1 admission to all levels
*FREE General Parking

Come on out to Keystone Race Track. With these coupons and $1 you get admission to all levels of Keystone's fully enclosed race track. Free general parking.

1:30 PM Post time every racing day starts Sunday, February 15. For information or luncheon reservations, call (215) 639-9000. No racing Thursday.

Directions: Located on Street Rd. (Rt. 132) between I-95 & U.S. Rt. 1 (Roosevelt Blvd.)

KEYSTONE RACE TRACK

Pennsylvania Law admits persons 18 years of age. Minors 10 to 17 admitted when accompanied by parent or guardian.

Present at Booth A
ADMISSION COUPON
Now thru Feb. 25,1981
This coupon and $1 admits one to Keystone Race Track on above dates only. No racing Thursdays. Not transferable and not for sale.
KEYSTONE RACE TRACK ( )
Post 12:30 PM—1:30 Post starts Feb. 15.

Present at Booth A
ADMISSION COUPON
Now thru Feb. 25,1981
This coupon and $1 admits one to Keystone Race Track on above dates only. No racing Thursdays. Not transferable and not for sale.
KEYSTONE RACE TRACK ( )
Post 12:30 PM—1:30 Post starts Feb. 15.

FREE INTRODUCTORY CLASSES!

DANCENERGY!

We choreograph beautiful bodies.

Dancenergy is a professionally choreographed program of dance and exercise for fitness and weight control, for both men and women. Utilizing the most successful aerobic techniques, Dancenergy is performed to exciting contemporary music. Choreography is updated periodically to maintain your interest. and shape and tone every muscle in your body. It's fun. It's invigorating. And most important of all, Dancenergy works!

CLASS NOW FORMING!!!

DOUGHERTY HALL'S WEST LOUNGE

MON. and WED. 6—7 P.M.

All University Students, Faculty, Staff, Friends and Family are welcome. Register at the Connelly Center February 16th, 18th, 20th from 11 A.M. — 3 P.M., or at class. For more information, pick up a University II course booklet or contact the U II secretary at 645-7989.

Players Unite

By KATHY GERRITY

There's a newly formed organization at Villanova that is geared toward developing and perfecting techniques in improvisational theatre while dealing directly with community interests.

The Contemporary Improvisation Players is a unique acting troupe headed by Kathy Gerrity and Bob Sands, who have organized a group of students, who are interested in workshops and performances. Besides working in their own behalf, the players have also donated time to a fellowship program in Wayne. The group has also worked along with Villanova's Honor Program.

The Improvisation Players have performed for Campus Ministry and were an active part of the Hunger Awareness Week shows. In the near future, they plan to visit such places as the Children's Hospital and nursing homes. Also, the group is presently developing a show on "campus life," to be performed at Villanova on April 2.

The Contemporary Improvisation Players are presently seeking new members for the performance on April 2. Anyone interested in trying out for the group may sign the list outside of the Vasey Theatre office. Tryouts will be held on Tues., Feb. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in Vasey room 13. There are no set requirements for tryout besides a devout interest and dedication to acting.

the Villanovan Classifieds

HELP WANTED FOR SUMMER CAMP
Summer camp for retarded near Lake Placid, now hiring. Campus interviews arranged. Write 2575 Troy Rd., Schenectady, NY 12309 or phone 518-783-1233.

OVERSEAS JOBS — Summer/year round. Europe, S. America, Australia, Asia. All fields, $500-$1200 monthly. Sightseeing. Free info., write IJC, Box 52-PA8, Corona Del Mar, CA 92625.

The editor of LYNX magazine would like to apologize for not including Mike Giansrco in the fall semester's poetry staff listing.

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 705-9989.

MAY I HAVE THIS DANCE?
U. of Penn grad. student seeks ballroom dance partner who would enjoy such dances as the Viennese Waltz, the Tango, and even the Hustle. Some dance experience preferred, but not necessary. Call Jim, 349-9593 after 8 p.m., Tues. or Thurs.

The W.G.O. (Woodman Groupie Organization) is now looking for new members. For more info. write to: W.G.O., Box 1855, Kennedy Hall.

WANTED: Stutterers for experimental study. Temple University Speech Department, $10 per hour. Call 787-1874 or come to Weiss Hall, Columbia and 13th, Philadelphia, 1st floor. Ask for Nelly; she will make appointment.

Fresh Cut Flowers 94¢ Bunch Year Round

Red Roses $9.95 doz. Except Holidays

J.P.'s ARDMORE SUNOCO STATION

Lancaster Ave. & Woodside

Ardmore, Pa. 19003

GENERAL AUTO REPAIRS

FRESH CUT FLOWERS & PLANTS

PHONE

642-9145

(DMG) -1
The Phone call 2 years ago and even years before that .... and then .... Affair, Atlantic City, Apricot-Sours, Bikes, BlueGrass, Blue Spitfire, Circle Diner — midnite chats, Chopstix, Champagne, Cooties (tee hee), Cats (vo, snab, tex), Camping, Chinese Food, Cross-Country to California (81 or 82), "Downstream", Egg Rolls, Feb. 3, Flea Mkts., Greyhound, Jimmy Buffet, JR, King's College, Lite Beer, McDonalds, Myrtle Beach, New Years Eve, NJ Beaches, The "Orange Peel", Picnics, Phone Bills, The Pool, The Rock Machine, The Scupper, Villanova, Valentine's Dance, Walk around the block .... Just some of our great times these past 2 years. Here's to a life of more of them. Happy Valentine's Day.

♥ Love always, Dee (DMG) -2

To P.P.,
Thanks for a year of TRUE happiness!! Here's hoping there's LOTS more. Happy V-Day.

Love, C.B.

Rob C.,
If you could only know how much I care about you. My never dying love will always be yours.

Truly yours, M.A.

Ace —
I love you and I am not letting go.

♥ Paul

Hey Joey,
For you this Valentine's Day I just wish I could be . . .

Pat Benatar

Dear Devon Seven,
Even though your "chocolate-covered bananas" can't stand up to our "little sprout" — be our Valentines anyway!

We love yas,
The "GoFours"

Dear Bri-bear,
Happy Valentine's Day, Honey! WIN'T- L of L- ILY FE-E!

♥ Love, CC

To Sheron, Christine, Mary Anne, Anne, Amy, Kathi, Laurie, Kerry, Cindy, and Dawn; you've fought me off so far, but how long can you last?

Love, W.G.C.

To Old Gold:
When I asked you to give me a break in person, I didn't mean this. All I can think now is that love endures all things. I hope so! Happy Valentine's Day, Babe!

Someone who cares.

John,
I surely love you
For you know its true
But your "roomy" Sam has got to go
Or I'll never talk to you.

Love, D. Hubby

P.S. I'm not "Genc-ing" around

Sully — The Stag Man
I love you truly
Yes, I really do
Especially the sediments that you bring —
For I can't wait
Until that special date
For as a Stag Man you are King.

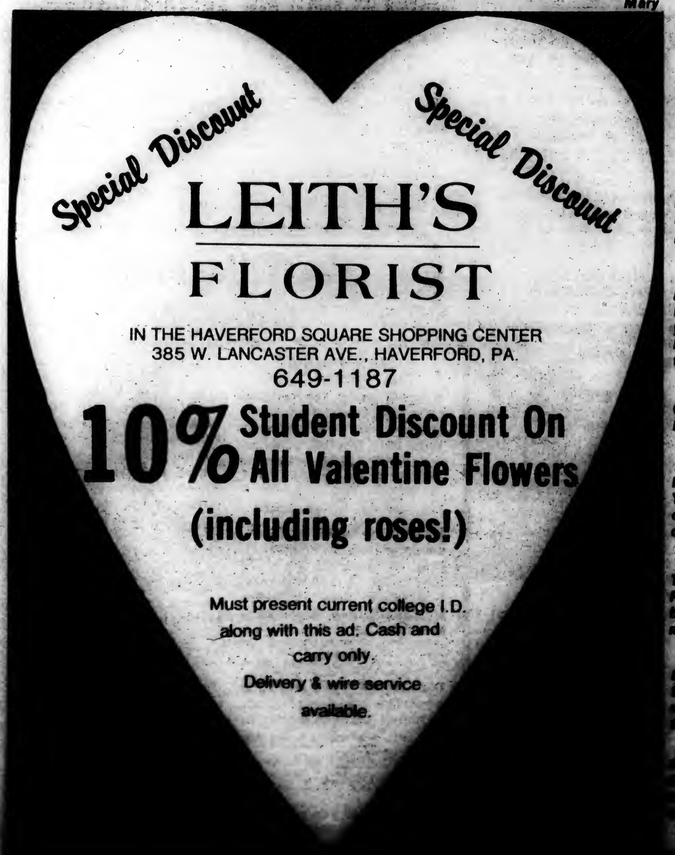
Love, Sammy

Dear Denise,
Happy Valentine's Day. I love you.

Love, Steve

Karl and Tom, you Guys!
You're two of the neatest people I know. I love you.

Mary



Dear C.I.S.,
Can't wait for the day when your initials will make you a spy.

Love always, C.P.A.

Boston Boys
and Mr. Scissors,
Sorry we kept y'all up — hope y'all had a blast. It takes three minutes to take it off?

Cornealius

To the skinny lush in 43 Sheehan,
Happy V-Day! You deserve all the roses and CHAMPAGNE in the world. Someday right?

Roomie

Jim,
To the special times we've had, let's not forget them . . . .

MG

St. Mary's 207 & 202,
Thanks for the fantastic times in the passion pit.

"Sensuous" Women

Joe,
To our growing love . . . .

Je t'aime

Trixie,
Let's celebrate a few hostages for Valentine's Day. There's forty-five to go — can they all be as good as Robert Blucker?

B.L.

Joel —
I can not make myself lovely — or loved — with pretty words, but I'm trying.

Shelagh

My Dearest Creep,
Thanks for making this little girl the happiest she's ever been. I love you.

La Sua Innamorata

Dear Karen,
Happy Valentine's Day. May the love between us continue forever.

Love, Ed

Dear Mogie,
Roses are red; Violets are blue; But my favorite color is purple.

Love, Karl

Marianne,
I'm really happy about us and you really mean a lot to me. Everything will only get better.

♥ Love, Robbie

Cindy,
Love, from me to you.

Love always, Joe

Patti,
You're one in a million chance of a life time and boy, do I feel lucky! Thanx

Love, Annie

T.V. Star Wanted!
Possible San Francisco booking (cheerleaders need not apply).

F&R Stars Inc.

Dear Toobe,
Sorry we missed out "mucho amour" at the 180 days. Happy Valentine's Day!

B.M. and Matt

Dear "Bambi",
Can't have a valentine's day without you. Love ya!

Love, Bambi's Mom

Dear Bri-bear,
Happy Valentine's Day, Honey! WIN'T- L of L- ILY FE-E!

♥ Love, CC

To Sheron, Christine, Mary Anne, Anne, Amy, Kathi, Laurie, Kerry, Cindy, and Dawn; you've fought me off so far, but how long can you last?

Love, W.G.C.

To Old Gold:
When I asked you to give me a break in person, I didn't mean this. All I can think now is that love endures all things. I hope so! Happy Valentine's Day, Babe!

Someone who cares.

John,
I surely love you
For you know its true
But your "roomy" Sam has got to go
Or I'll never talk to you.

Love, D. Hubby

P.S. I'm not "Genc-ing" around

Sully — The Stag Man
I love you truly
Yes, I really do
Especially the sediments that you bring —
For I can't wait
Until that special date
For as a Stag Man you are King.

Love, Sammy

Dear Denise,
Happy Valentine's Day. I love you.

Love, Steve

Karl and Tom, you Guys!
You're two of the neatest people I know. I love you.

Mary

Boston Boys
and Mr. Scissors,
Sorry we kept y'all up — hope y'all had a blast. It takes three minutes to take it off?

Cornealius

To the skinny lush in 43 Sheehan,
Happy V-Day! You deserve all the roses and CHAMPAGNE in the world. Someday right?

Roomie

Jim,
To the special times we've had, let's not forget them . . . .

MG

St. Mary's 207 & 202,
Thanks for the fantastic times in the passion pit.

"Sensuous" Women

Joe,
To our growing love . . . .

Je t'aime

Trixie,
Let's celebrate a few hostages for Valentine's Day. There's forty-five to go — can they all be as good as Robert Blucker?

B.L.

Joel —
I can not make myself lovely — or loved — with pretty words, but I'm trying.

Shelagh

My Dearest Creep,
Thanks for making this little girl the happiest she's ever been. I love you.

La Sua Innamorata

Dear Karen,
Happy Valentine's Day. May the love between us continue forever.

Love, Ed

Dear Mogie,
Roses are red; Violets are blue; But my favorite color is purple.

Love, Karl

Marianne,
I'm really happy about us and you really mean a lot to me. Everything will only get better.

♥ Love, Robbie

Cindy,
Love, from me to you.

Love always, Joe

Patti,
You're one in a million chance of a life time and boy, do I feel lucky! Thanx

Love, Annie

T.V. Star Wanted!
Possible San Francisco booking (cheerleaders need not apply).

F&R Stars Inc.

Dear Toobe,
Sorry we missed out "mucho amour" at the 180 days. Happy Valentine's Day!

B.M. and Matt

Dear "Bambi",
Can't have a valentine's day without you. Love ya!

Love, Bambi's Mom

Dear Tom,
Thanks for taking my special Valentine. Our years together have been my best. We'll have another great weekend and I promise not to spill the drinks if you promise to drink the water. I love you and loving you too much is just enough.

Lisa

Happy Valentine's Day to the V.U. Powerlifting Team and my coaches — Thanks for everything guys!

Love, Meg

Wendy,
Happy Valentine's Day to my most special Valentine! (Always and Forever).

I Love You, Mark

Guess you wouldn't know unless I told you . . . But . . . I Love You. Annie just look at yourself, what else would I do?

Dear AB,
Annie, Boo, CBS, Carol, Carrie, Col, Corky, Denise, Ellen, Fish, Gailmarie, Ginny, Jeany, Jess, Karen, Kelley, Lynda, Mary, Mickey, Monica, Nancy, Nap, Patty, Paul, Peg, Poz, Renee, Resa, Rich, Rose, Shorty, Skippy, Sue, Tim, Tony, Vez, Vicky, and Walt. See Someone Cares, Happy Valentine's Day!

Love, Cupid

Henry,
Someday, (Sunday?) Everyday and Everynight will be a thirty-eight. I can't wait, Happy Valentine's Day!

Love, Sue-Bee

Dear Sweet,
For this special Day, I have to easily say, I love you in every way, with each and every passing day!

Forever, Pumpkin

Harpo —
Look to the future and not to the past to find the things you want to make last.

Love, D.

To My Princess —
Thank you for being my love and giving me your smile. Stay forever in my heart.

The Prince

To a rare and beautiful person,
Cheer up. The world's not that bad. Just take a look behind you. "SPLAT"

With love, The Unicorn

P.S. — Revenge is sweet but I still love you.

Dear MTH,
Thanks for all the memories. You've taught me what life is really about! Happy Valentine's Day.

Love, F.C.

Dear PNH,
You're my honey A-M-A-N-B-. Because I love you.

GUF

Ginger,
Let's trip the light fantastic and click our heels forever! P.S. No Shoe Fitter for my Valentine!

Love, Fred

All My Sisters —
Terry, Lucy, Donna, and Ginger. Happy Valentine's Day to my favorite ladies.

Your Big Brother Jerry

My Lifesaver,
Happy Valentine's Day! Thank you for the fantastic last year and five months! I love you . . . forever.

Pumpkin

Jane,
The best thing about our third Valentine's Day is that my love for you is even greater than our first.

Happy Anniversary!

Dondi

Dear JM,
Here's to drinking
Anywhere, any day! ♥
I have lots of fun
When we go out to play.

But most of all,
Here's to you and me,
Our times together
And what we soon may see!
No?

Happy Valentine's Day,
All my love, BE

Dear Jane,
Here's a Valentine's wish that comes to you,
From someone who is far away and blue.
And it comes to tell you on this day,
You're thought of often, and loved in every way!

Love, Jim

To all the Lucky
Sallies of February —
Wishing all of you a very loving Valentine's Day!

Affectionately,
Your secret admirers!

P.S. There's alot of you out there . . . and you'll never know.

Dear CMG,
Well, you're back at school and I know its not the same as Partying in Paris while drinking champagne. But if you had a choice with whom would you rather be?
a gay Frenchman?
or a hoonman like me?
Happy Valentine's Day!

Love, CPF

HUNK —
Let's steal away! Happy Valentine's Day.

Love, Piece

Females,
Need a Valentine's Lover??
Call, 527-5529

Dear Shoo,
If your Lancers' on ice, my dinner's in the oven — but . . . only if you'll be my Valentine.

Love, M.S.

BALLOONS
FOR THAT SOMEONE SPECIAL AT VALENTINE'S DAY.

DELIVERY EXTRA

CASH & CARRY

Love

Hey Tiger:
Never forget Easter '80, Valley Forge Park, Sept. 13, Budget Lodge. Who's getting married? I love you sweetheart!

Chili-Bean

S.A.D.,
When I think of you, I think of a mirror and a handkerchief. Set them up — knock them down.

Love, A. Friend

John —
Happy Valentine. I'll buy you a teddy bear for your lonely nights.

Love, S.

To Gramps,
Mommy, Uncle Will, Aunt Lisa, Aunt MaryJane, and Pam, Happy Valentine's Day!

Lots of Love, Baby

Dearest Bobby,
I love you even more than I miss you. Hugs and kisses. All my love always,

Terry

Dear Rock,
"Ain't gonna be no rematch" cause 9/12/25 and really wanna. Happy "V" DAY!

Love, The Face

Mary,
Thank you again for teaching me the meaning of a true friend. With much love,

Tom

Canu,
You're the top drawer.

Love forever, Cindycin

Mimi C,
I dream a dream, help make it true. My heart's with you. Shoot those hoops. Be Mine.

To celebrate another "first" together and to hope for many, many more. Please wait for your teddy bear.

Love, Vicki

Wij,
I pledge my love to you!

Butts

To my Sweetheart Stefanide,
Roses are Red; Violets are Blue; You are mine; 'Cause I Love You!

Love, Guess Who

A.J.,
Will you always be my Valentine?

With Love Always, T.L.

Happy 5th Anniversary. We Won. Remember A.C. Big Buses, big stakes and big suitcases. Happy Valentine's Day. Got a Map?

Rich

flowers by Bill

841 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PA. 19010
(215) 525-4121

Bill and Nancy Giangiulio

Snappy,
Rollerskates, Puppydogs, and Sunny days at the shore. All this shared with you, I couldn't want anything more!

Love, P.F.

Dear "Tragic Flaw",
I'm so glad you're "such a bunny"! Happy Valentine's Day!

Love, Cookie

To Jeanne Clarke,
Thinking of you on Valentine's Day.

Distant Admirer

To: The Guys in 612,
You better call your dog in!!

The Girls in 610

Jellybean,
I love you . . . more right now.

Forever, Pumpkin

Dear Magoo,
Each day of this past year you've been the greatest Valentine — right down to carrying my books! How about a few more years — forever — yours,

Curly hair!

Dear Michelle,
You are a dream come true and my love for you will last forever. HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!

Love always, Curt

Dear Nosey Balm,
You didn't have to be a guard to lead our sub. Be my Valentine.

Love, QBD

To the blond and man's best friend in 612,
Short sheets are good for elves but not for "tall" dogs.

Love & pats, Two in 610

Dear M.H.,
Have a "WILD & WET" Valentine's Day! Watch out in the "Shower" for W.W.!

Love ya, "GQ"

Happy Valentine's Day to Delorey 101, Jimbo, Joe, Rusty, Dan & Kevin. We luv ya!

Amy, Eileen and Trish

To the boys in 612 —
5:30 wake up calls are a no-no punishable by alligator snatchings and snowball fights.

Love, The girls in 610

♡♡♡♡♡

Dear Pat,
I wish there were another man
as wonderful as you.
A barefoot boy with cheek of tan
and such a poet, too.
You know that I'm a baseball fan
A mere stolen base I rue —
But when I see your smile so wan
my heart is stolen too.
Not the faintest falling, flying ball could match you, mirror on the wall.

Love, Pat

To my little Munchkin:
I will always love you.

Matt

P —
Buy me a pair of your Jordache and it's yours, and the rest, too!

Love, D.J.

P.S. — IOU41BDAY — UCOD

Byron,
Seems like ages since we were. I got your note; nice words. Butterfly was for the rotten review.

Love.

'to my valentine'

Sweetheart Special

Dinner For Two $19.95

SIRLOIN CLUB STEAK OR KING CRAB LEGS.

Including: Salad Buffet, Vegetable and Beverage.

"A Surprise Gift for the Ladies"

A cozy relaxed atmosphere featuring delicious ribs, steaks and seafood.

Offer Good: Fri. 13th and Sat. 14th 5:30 - 9:00 PM

Reservations Accepted

UNION PAGE

Villanova Union Presents

St. Patrick's Gala Concert!

The Fabulous Clancy Brothers

with Robbie O'Connell

Special Guest - COZY MORLEY

SUNDAY, MARCH 15 8:00 P.M.

FIELD HOUSE VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

Lancaster Pike, Villanova, PA

RESERVED TICKETS: $7.50 $8.50

TICKETS AVAILABLE

- ☐ TICKETRON LOCATIONS
- ☐ MAD'S, Ardmore
- ☐ WANAMAKER'S, Downtown, Phila.
- ☐ LYNNE MUSIC, Drexel Hill
- ☐ SHERRY'S, Downtown Phila.
- ☐ BAG & BAGGAGE, Wilmington, DE
- ☐ ALL STAR TICKETS, Woodbury

MAIL ORDERS:
Check or Money Order Payable to Jennifer Production, Inc. Suite 208, Ardmore, PA 19003
Send Stamped Self-Addressed Envelope

A JENNIFER PRODUCTION Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

$1.00 OFF FOR THOSE WITH VILLANOVA I.D.

the Union extends to You a very Happy Valentine's Day!

Ski French Montreal

OVER SPRING BREAK!!

5 DAYS AND 4 NIGHTS

$149.00 Quad Occupancy

$30.00 Lift Tickets

INCLUDES:
Heated Pools
Saunas
Nightly Entertainment
10 Lifts
26 Trails
City Tour

TODAY IS DEADLINE!! TO SIGN UP IN THE TICKET OFFICE.

BIG SCREEN T.V.!

"AUDIENCES WILL SIMPLY CHERISH 'BREAKING AWAY'."
Richard Schickel, TIME MAGAZINE

BREAKING AWAY

PG COLOR BY DeLUXE ©1979 TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX

Tomorrow at 3:00 PM in the West Lounge.

Basketball Coverage
V.U. vs. U. Conn.
Monday, Feb. 23
7:30 in the West Lounge.

21 Year Old Comedy

B.Y.O.B.

On Thursday, Feb. 19 at 8:00 there will be a special B.Y.O.B. Music will be provided by the stage crew from 8-9 and 10-11. Comedian Steve Skrovan of New York, will be performing from 9-10. Tickets are $1.50 and available in the C.C. Ticket Office.

Coffee House
featuring
Beppy Wallace
Friday, Feb. 13
8:00
Belle Air Terrace

THE BIG EVENT IS COMING

UNION PAGE

UP ON THE ROOF

WHENEVER I SEE YOUR SMILING FACE

MOCKINGBIRD

A FORCE IN CONTEMPORARY MUSIC FOR MORE THAN A DECADE. . .

JAMES TAYLOR

Wednesday, February 18, 1981 at 8:00 P.M. in the Fieldhouse

Tickets available in the Connelly Center Ticket Office are $10.50 & $8.50 w/I.D. For more information please call the Union Office at 645-7280.

FEW TICKETS STILL AVAILABLE

SWEET BABY JAMES

YOU'VE GOT A FRIEND

University II Registration

Feb. 18, 19, 20 marks the days of registration for all University II courses. Come to the main lounge of the Connelly Center from 11 AM to 2 PM. Fee is $1.00.

*Course description booklets available in the Union Office.

Congratulations to

ROBERT SEAMAN, TOM BEVILACQUA, JIM ARRISON, AND BILL GUERIN.

Who placed third in the Regional College Bowl Tournament held last Saturday at Temple University!

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES

THE TIN DRUM

A brilliantly imaginative allegory, it is the story of a young boy of extraordinary will; confused and terrified by the adult world of sex, violence and Hitler's using Nazism.

"One of the best cinematic translations of a major novel ever made."

Sunday, Feb. 15, 1981 at 7:30 Cinema.

THE TIME MACHINE

A [illegible] of the century scientist invents a time [illegible] which lands him in the year 802, 701, there [illegible] a gentle race of people who are terror[illegible] a civilization of grotesques upon the creatures.

[illegible] Award winning special effects!

[illegible] Tuesday, Feb. 17 at [illegible] in Cinema and [illegible]

NOW SHOWING

Friday, Feb. 13, 1981
7:00 and 9:30
in the Cinema
[illegible]

COMING SOON

The Blues Brothers

Thursday and Friday, Feb. 19 and 20, 1981
7:00 and 9:30

Somewhere Past the Rainbow

Unaltered Star

By AMY MacLACHLAN

Blair Brown is a bright, talented actress who is fast climbing the ladder to stardom. She is presently involved in a promotional tour for her latest release Altered States, including a stop in Philadelphia, for a press conference which representatives from the Villanovan attended. Ms. Brown has also appeared in the movie One Trick Pony, with Paul Simon; a T.V. mini-series entitled Captains and the Kings; and has made guest appearances on the T.V. shows, The Rockford Files and Marcus Welby.

When asked what types of roles she most enjoys, she replied, "Well, Sissy Spacek always gets interesting roles — for example, her Loretta Lynn in the Coal Miner's Daughter. Also, the type of character in Girlfriends — that appeals to me. Women are still rarely the protagonist. The slot of leading ladies . . . of WASP women, doesn't offer many opportunities, they can't really do anything."

Who were your role models when you were younger?

"Well, I didn't really have any. I never considered acting. My parents were very worried when I decided to. But I was head strong and they knew it, so they let me go. It broke my heart sometimes. I came into the business very innocently. I thought that everyone was in it for the art. I was wrong. The business part is so nasty but in comparison the art is so much nicer."

When you are not acting, what do you do?

"I'm just a bum, I hate to work out. I go to the movies quite a bit, sit in restaurants with my friends. I read a lot."

In Altered States, Ms. Brown had the opportunity to work with director Ken Russell. Mr. Russell is famous for his willingness to take enormous risks to achieve spectacular cinematic effects. This is what led to his reputation of being one of the most innovative and imaginative directors in the film industry.

The subject of Mr. Russell was approached at the conference.

When you were originally cast by another director, and later found out that Ken Russell had been hired instead, were you worried?

"No, I was excited, because he's so dangerous. He's upfront."

What was it like working with him?

"We disagreed a lot. Sometimes I'd be right and win, and sometimes I'd lose. He expects the best, and he gives it. He asks for more and more, unlike other directors who expect you to play the role as you did at the audition and that's all. He is very liberal, he sees people as people and not masculine or feminine. It's nice to do things the way you do in life, why should you change for the movies? The film maker is the benevolent dictator, he's the only person who knows the way the movie is being made."

What was your most enjoyable scene in Altered States?

Blair Brown of Altered States.

"The scenes at the beginning when we were trying to pick each other up. Also the breakdown at the end, even though they are more straining, I enjoy the acting part. Wading in the whirlpools was fun too. It gives you the chance to pretend you are in real peril even though you know that you are quite safe."

Finally, how does it feel to be dealing with Altered States after so long a lapse between completion and release date?

"I feel very satisfied with the movie so I don't mind. Anytime you finish a movie and then see it for the first time, you are swamped with feelings of failure, you want to go out and get plastic surgery. Friends are always embarrassed when they see you on the screen or the stage, but strangers aren't. That's the artifice, the beauty of it."

Ms. Brown felt that Altered States was the best experience for her so far in her career as an actress. She has just completed Character Divide with John Belushi which she referred to as a witty character study.

Review

State of States

By SHARON WINTERS

Altered States is one man's journey to find the key to his own happiness, only to discover that he had it before he ever began.

Although the story is rather simple, various incarnations of the ultimate search have predated even the now ancient Bluebird of Happiness, the visual images in States make the trip with the main character worthwhile.

The unorthodox doctor, the main character in the film, wants to find the truth from the source of life. He desires to go back to the primordial beginnings to ferret the true soul of mankind.

His search begins in solitude: a womb-like tank filled with water where he is cut off from the outside world. The sensory-deprivation tank only whets his imagination to pursue his objective.

William Hurt plays the crazed doctor delightfully well. Hurt is very human, one can relate to his search and even cheer him to victory. Yet, the character he plays is alien enough that one marvels at his insistence to achieve satisfaction despite the potential costs, death and destruction.

The film has its failings in that Hurt has to tell the audience and the other characters that he is crazy. He has to constantly remind everyone because outside of his experiments he seems to be quite normal. The dialogue, then, must capture and maintain the character that we never see outside of the experiments. In fact, Hurt seems to be almost totally unaffected emotionally by his laboratory efforts.

The real star of States is the visual experience surrounding the experiments. The special effects that make Hurt's visions come to life are worth the price of the film.

The "miracle" of special effects creates a scenario of wonder and wit. The inner reaches of Hurt's character become known through a series of dramas that unfold in his mind for the audience to see via modern science. All that Hurt is, was, and wants to be, become spectacular visual swirls of color, symbol and metaphor, vibrant in intensity and motion.

Altered States is a pleasurable, fascinating film. The imagery alone, could cause some audience members to ponder philosophical concepts that are alluded to in the film. Others may enjoy the pursuit of the goal. This reviewer reveled in the dialogue of one scientist in the film who refused to believe the preliminary findings of Hurt's experiements. The scientist suggested that the procedure should be tried again; notices could be posted for a college student subject!

THEATRE ON CAMPUS

Vasey Stages Search

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

"I'm extremely sorry," says Konstantin Trepliov the tortured playwright in Anton Chekov's play The Seagull. "I forgot that writing plays and acting are only for the chosen few, I'm poaching on other people's preserves . . ." When Treplio's audience in The Seagull are assaulted by fumes emanating from his stage, they are outraged that they, too, should be forced to take part in his production, that they should become part of his play. Embarrassing it is, to have come to see an illusion acted out from the careful distance of the raised stage, only to have reality seep past the open curtains to actually touch them.

If a play can test the limits of its stage and an audience can endure that initial imposition, however, quite a bit can be learned about the nature of the play, and its ability to present reality in the form of illusion. This is the experience of Six Characters in Search of An Author, directed by Irene Baird, playing at Vasey Theatre February 11-14, and February 18-21.

Six Characters at Vasey, from the outset, is a play which prods the audience by calling attention to the articulateness of the stage. Characters walk casually onto the setting, stage hands hammer at the scenery, a prompter paces back and forth crying "We're late already," music blares from a speaker suddenly at the side of the stage.

When John C. McKevitt, playing the nervous and tempermental Director, walks onstage and looks out at the audience, he seems a bit disturbed by them, he hesitates, and then leans forward to speak to them. Later in the play, a boy points a gun at members of the cast, and then hunches back and pans it against the audience as well. Consistently, the play steps over the artificial line we have drawn to separate the people from the playactors.

As is customary, scenes of another play are interspersed in the Six Characters story. The choice here of The Seagull is not irrelevent. Trepliov, in Chekhov's play, is looking for ways to change the theatre. "New forms are what we need, and if we haven't got them we'd be a sight better off with nothing at all," he says.

In its production and fine direction, Six Characters speaks of new forms. But the basic questions it asks are so simple, and age-old. The theory that a character can be a more real form than a person has been posed since Plato's time. And the questions about theatre itself have been asked throughout the history of the stage.

Maureen Lynch, playing the vivacious Stepdaughter character cannot contain her laughter seeing an actress attempting to play her part, and one can't help but wonder if every actor doesn't sometimes feel his character laugh at his failure to capture its essence.

When McKevitt, exhausted at the end of the play laments "an evening wasted on people who couldn't exist," one wonders if every director doesn't feel that same resignation when the characters he tries to present do not come alive for him.

Six Characters at Vasey succeeds because it makes the audience wonder, it forces them to ask the questions. After all, they are part of this play too.

Poet Previewed

Gonzalo Rojas, Chilean poet and author of numerous literary works and books of poetry, including La miseria del hombre (1948), Contra la muerte (1964), and Oscuro (1977), will be on the Villanova University campus Monday, February 16, for a talk and reading of his poetry. The program will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the VIP Room of the Field House.

Professor Rojas, who lives in Chile, has been in the academic world since 1947. He was the founder of the Spanish department at the University of Concepcion in Chile and introduced the study of theory of literature at the University of Valparaiso, also in Chile.

His appearance at Villanova is sponsored by the departments of modern languages and literatures and romance languages.

Dorms

(Continued from page 3)

$52,088.88, in 1979-80. "We don't charge for all the damages," noted Trucks. "There was $1800 in vandalism we didn't charge last year because we had no way of knowing who was responsible."

According to Trucks, an estimated $60,000 will be

The Wailers Urge 'Uprising'

By PAULA C. GARELL

Songs have always served as aesthetic guises for portraying human nature and conflict. Uprising, by Bob Marley and The Wailers, is an album with special synthesis of music and message.

Marley's songs combine the distinctive reggae beat with his sometimes bitter lyrics about, "We" (Jamaicans) and "Dem" (our society and its lost faith). In that unique calypso voice, Marley wails of our misdirected efforts-away from religion and toward war and decadence.

In such songs as, Real Situation, and We and Dem, Marley displays his fears that the only solution for us is self-destruction. Man has lost his faith, and all that's left is "nation war against nation."

Some of his songs may seem very pessimistic, since it is our culture that he is describing and condemning, but there is more to his songs than despair. In fact, the main drive in his songs is the hope and strength of his people. Yes, the Zion Train is coming because they are Forever Loving Jah.

The entire album, from the cover to the last word and note, is filled with strength and quiet confidence in their faith. No matter how harsh the words, they are all sung in the same easy-going rhythm. This rhythm seems to evoke feeling and movement from deep within the body. It is a spiritual uprising.

Although the songs do not praise our "high society," they are inspirational truths nonetheless. Marley writes of our insatiable desires, and of our preoccupation with gaining the material world while carelessly losing our souls. He gives confidence and strength to his people to keep their faith for fear of the alternative. Yet, we too can benefit from these experiences and observations — if we listen.

Bob Marley and The Wailers sing songs of survival. Oppression overcome by unyielding belief in themselves and the "Almighty."

'We've got a life to live
They say only, only
Only the Fittest of the Fittest shall survive
Stay alive'

Could You Be Loved, and Redemption Song exemplify their convictions to emerge triumphant in spite of our technological and seemingly valueless world.

"Emancipate yourselves from mental slavery,
None but ourselves can free our minds."

Ry Goes Down Smooth

By PAUL BERN

Ry Cooder's latest release, Borderline, is a masterpiece of Rhythm and Blues. Cooder employs other musical styles such as Tex-Mex and, of course, rock and roll, resulting in a music totally different than its parts.

The first song is an old R and B tune, 634-5789, and it fits Ry's musical style like a glove. His feel for the oldies sound is undoubtably rooted in the likes of Robert Johnson, Skip James, and Hoddie Ledbetter, but the music he creates would appeal to any R and B enthusiast, young or old.

Speedo, another vintage tune, exemplifies Ry's personal love for Gospel music. Bobby King and other vocalists support Ry's contention that Gospel is the most potent form of singing. Although Speedo is a "laid-back" number, Cooder's vocals make it kick.

Cooder is the type of musician who doesn't play a song merely to keep himself occupied; he believes that music should absorb the environment and sensibilities that make it work. Down in the Boondocks is just this type of song. The simple story of a home-town boy fits Cooder's maxim: "Fun music — none of that subtle s--t."

On the flip side, Ry changes his style just a bit, relying more on the Tex-Mex sound, though never completely leaving Rhythm and Blues. A strange combination to be sure, but as on his Chicken Skin Music album, Cooder proves that he can combine Mexican accordionists with Black Gospel singers and still win Grammies.

(Continued on page 16)

Careers in Banking

The time is just right at Irving Trust for high achievers

If you've been a high achiever in college and want recognition of that fact in the career you pursue, Irving Trust may have the ideal opportunity you seek.

Since our founding in 1851, we've been one of the nation's leading banks. Today, our operations and career opportunities are worldwide. In addition to our banking offices in New York, we do business throughout the nation and in more than 120 countries, serving as bankers to major commercial and central banks, governments and leading corporations.

A career at Irving Trust means assuming meaningful responsibilities right from the start. Explore our openings in Accounting, Auditing, Bank Operations, Computer Operations, Corporate Profitability, Economic Research and Planning, International Credit, International Customer Relations and Personal Banking. A minimum of six accounting credits is preferred for most positions; but apart from Finance, Accounting, Business and Economics majors, we would welcome interest from Liberal Arts, Computer Science or Math majors.

To find out how your skills might match our needs, be sure to see our Representative who will be

ON CAMPUS TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17

For an appointment, sign up at the Placement Office, or, if unable to schedule an interview at this time, please write directly to:
Jean M. Bennett, Manager, College Recruiting.

Irving Trust Company
One Wall Street, New York, NY 10015

Irving Trust

Attention Villanovans
BEST
CENTRAL PARK
WITNESS
MONDAY NIGHTS: Drinks Half Price
Appearing Monday Night: SYN

AUGUSTINIANS

"HOW CAN I MAKE MY LIFE WORTHWHILE?"

One way may be to live within the Augustinian Fraternity. When you come to live with us, you observe and participate in our community life for several years before making a final commitment. You observe that we are a religious community following the charism of St. Augustine and "that together and with one heart in brotherhood and spiritual friendship, we seek and worship God and that we labor in the service of the people of God." We serve in colleges, high schools, parishes, foreign missions, campus ministries, retreats, hospitals and military chaplaincies.

WANT MORE INFORMATION? CONTACT:

Reverend John P. Stack, O.S.A.
Villanova University
P.O. Box 328
Villanova, PA 19085
(215) 525-8812

Name
Address
City State Zip
School or Class Age
Phone

Parsons Deals a Card

By ROBERT McGOVERN

You'd think that a man who engineered such masterpieces as Abbey Road, Dark Side of the Moon and Year of the Cat (the latter two which helped their respective masters be rocketed into the prominence they now enjoy) would be content enough with those achievements, but Alan Parsons felt that he had just a little bit more to offer to the world of contemporary music. So, in 1976, after months of collaboration with Eric Woolfson, The Alan Parsons first Project, Tales of Mystery and Imagination was released. It, along with the follow-up release, were the first steps in a series of innovative works. However, the next two releases saw The Project falter a bit, despite the fact that they contained some strong Top 40 material which helped the group attract a different aspect of the market.

The Turn of a Friendly Card now returns the group to the creative plateau they had previously achieved. Before we go any further, however it is very important to note that The Project is just not all Alan Parsons; but also co-author Eric Woofson, an assemblage of some of the finest studio musicians to be found today and on the latest effort, The Munich Chamber Opera Orchestra. Of course, true evaluation is not what's in the liner notes, but what's in the vinyl. There exists, most definitely, an urge to dig deeper.

As all previous Projects have been, this is also a concept album. The current topical obsession is gambling and the life of the gambler. It not merely observes cards and dice, but applies their influences to life itself. The idea breaks no ground philosophically (certainly the metaphor has been made, a hundred times before), but it's one that has not previously made it to vinyl, at least not in this proportion.

Games People Play displays the group's ability to successfully combine fast and slow classical elements of music with rock ones. It is not surprising that this song has surfaced as the albums first single (Time seems to be the next logical choice. More on that later). It has all the elements needed to make a song popular, Styx-like keyboards throughout and the guitar work during the instrumental break combines the best of Pablo Cruise/Dire Straits licks.

The opening track, May Be A Price to Pay, begins the album as any dramatic presentation would with an overture combined with Elmer Gantry's striking vocal delivery to add an air of intensity. Unfortunately this is his only vocal appearance on the album.

Time, as mentioned above, seems to be commercially accessible. It is very mellow, danceable and like Nothing Left to Lose, Eric Woolfson's other vocal lead, vaguely reminiscent of pre-Dark Side of the Moon Floyd.

Side Two contains two very good instrumental compositions, The Gold Bug, which thematically would fit in well with the Tales album as it is the title of one of Poe's lesser known short stories, and The Ace of Swords; both of which sound very much like part of the soundtrack to a movie.

The core of The Project's presentation on gambling and the abuses thereof offers no insights to cure oneself of the disease, but only sings that may help one to monitor their descent into this abyss of obsession. It may all seem trite, that is, out of the context of The Project's fusion of music and words to make them one in the same. Or maybe a bit much for those who carry no such worship within, but a pilgrim must follow in search of a shrine, as he enters inside the cathedral . . . Open up the gates of the church and let me out of here.

Tomlin Gets Small

By SHARON CONNERTON

Laughter reigns; Lily Tomlin is queen. In her crowning achievement, her recent movie The Incredible Shrinking Woman, Lily Tomlin successfully includes the audience in the process of her coronation. Through her unique comedic ability, Lily Tomlin, aided by Charles Grodin and Ned Beatty, humorously reveal the crowning glory any individual deserves when they face the daily hazards of life.

Representing the populace, Lily Tomlin portrays a pseudo-typical housewife, Pat Kramer, bombarded by the hazards of pollution, corruption and commercialization. She declares war when a chemical reaction between commercial products and pollution creates a biological imbalance in her body which causes her to shrink. During this shrinking process, Pat Kramer's daily battles continue to grow.

Magnified by her diminishing size and her increasing fame, Pat Kramer's struggles to continue her pseudo-typical life fail. Her household duties become "too much" for her and she is finally resigned to living in a doll's house. In addition, when she appears on T.V. to tell the world her story, the pressures of Big Business restrain her; her story goes untold.

Back at home, her disco queen maid accidently throws her into a garbage disposal. She is assumed dead; the world mourns. She is not dead, however, but kidnapped. She has been kidnapped by the Organization for World Management which wishes to create a serum from her body to shrink the world. Locked in a hamster's cage, Pat Kramer is assisted by a gorilla and a clumsy lab technician in her attempts to escape. She succeeds. Her story is told and she shrinks out of view. Again, the world mourns, but she is still not dead.

Though not a cinematic masterpiece, The Incredible Shrinking Woman succeeds in the field of comedy. The comedic styles involved range from pun to slapstick, from satire to situation, incorporating the full spectrum of humor. Furthermore, the characters are two-dimensional which adds another dimension to the quality of the humor. Thus, not only is Lily Tomlin crowned by the vices of this world within the movie, but also crowned by the audience for her multiple performances in it. Because her diversity enables her to assume several roles simultaneously, Lily Tomlin is The Incredible Shrinking Woman.

Cooder

(Continued from page 16)

The Way We Make a Broken Heart is as Tex-Mex as 634-5789 is R and B. Cooder likes to keep the country boy in himself, no matter what he is playing, and this song comes right from his heart.

Ry returns for a short time to R and B with Crazy 'Bout an Automobile, but demonstrates his ability on the slide guitar throughout. This song is the best combination of all Ry's musical tastes, and can only be described as magic.

The title song (jam actually) is so diversified that it is next to impossible to pick out every genre of music represented. All that can be said about Borderline, the song and the album, is that Jim Keltner, Tim Drummon, Reggie McBride, Jesse Harms and obviously Ry Cooder must have had divine inspiration to be able to mix Hawaiian, Tex-Mex, R and B, Rock and Roll and many other musical forms not to create another Tower of Babel.

Beat Inflation!!! LEATHER BOOTS 15-20% OFF IN STORE STOCK ONLY — FRYE

LEATHER PENNY LOAFERS

25% OFF 25% WITH AD
SUPER DISCOUNT
•NETTLETON •BEAR TRAPS
•OLD MAINE TROTTERS
•FOOT JOY •COLE-HAAN
•BERNARDO •BOSTONIAN
•ANNE KLEIN WATCHES
In Stock or Special Order

TENNIS SHOE SALE (WITH THIS AD)
Women's Tretorn Canvas $19.99
Fred Perry Lee Tennis' $32.99

DISCOUNT PRICES ON
PONY • BROOKS • PRO KEDS • DAUMEN
HERMAN SANTA ROSA HEELS • OLOF
GRADEY • KID POWER • TIRED
ETONIC • GRASSHOPPERS • NEW BALANCE
BARNARD • INDIAN & CANOE SHOES

70% OFF
SOME STYLES

DISCONTINUED DOCK-SIDERS

If you're really in love... nothing's going to stand in your way.

"One of the best films of the year." —Andrew Sarris, VILLAGE VOICE

"One of the most enjoyable movies of the year." —Pat Collins, GOOD MORNING AMERICA

"Richard Dreyfuss is first rate. Amy Irving is equally good." —Charles Champlin, LOS ANGELES TIMES

"An out-and-out crowd pleaser that should captivate audiences on a grand scale. In Richard Dreyfuss and Amy Irving it has the most appealing of romantic teams . . . the chemistry between them is exceptional. Lee Remick is outstanding." —Kenneth Turan, NEW WEST MAGAZINE

"Exciting, authentic, and a great deal of fun . . . an honest love story." —David Denby, NEW YORK MAGAZINE

"Richard Dreyfuss, Amy Irving and Lee Remick give wonderful performances." —Joel Siegel, WABC-TV

The Competition

COLUMBIA PICTURES Presents
A RASTAR/WILLIAM SACKHEIM PRODUCTION
RICHARD DREYFUSS
AMY IRVING LEE REMICK
"THE COMPETITION"

SAM WANAMAKER Original Music by LALO SCHIFRIN

Clark Dives Towards Nationals

By BILL BECK

In the history of the diving team at Villanova, the best diver to come along in years is sophomore Paul Clark. Having transferred from the University of Pittsburgh after one semester, Paul became eligible to dive for Villanova in September of 1980. Paul has an impressive record this season; he has carried 10 firsts, four seconds, and two thirds in both the required and optional sections of the diving competition in the Villanova dual meets.

Paul, a theater major and native of Radnor, Pennsylvania resides at home. He comes from a large family of divers, and became interested in diving in 1968. Currently, Paul is under the instruction of Brother and Coach Tim Clark, and said that, "Tim treats me like the rest of his divers, when he judges me though, he tends to score down." He stressed how well his brother coached and what a good job Tim has done helping fellow divers Mark Feldner and Carl Sparano. Paul also gets some coaching from his father who was once a diver at the Univeristy of Pennsylvania.

Paul Clark — Charlie Guida Photo

Out of eight divers in the family, Paul and sister Mary Ellen are the only two who have continued in diving competition. "She is a good little diver," commented Paul about his sister. He said that Mary Ellen is wanted by numerous colleges and universities. Mary Ellen, presently a senior at Radnor, was the 1979 National Junior Olympic Champion.

In twelve years of diving Paul has accumulated many titles. Having traveled all over the United States, Paul has entered many of the National AAU meets. In 1975 Paul went abroad to West Germany to compete in the Mid-Atlantic West German Meet and placed second overall. Paul consistently placed in the National Junior Olympics and in the Junior Nationals until he reached his 18th birthday. He earned second place finish in the 1978 Junior Nationals. Paul also placed in the 1978 Pennsylvania State Diving Championships his senior year in high school. That same year Paul was named Middle-Atlantic Athlete of the year.

Hoping to add to his title, Paul will be competing on March 13 and 14 at Cornell in the Collegiate District I and II Regions. Paul added, "I don't know what my chances are at regions, I have a shot at it, I have a lot of work to do in my dives before the meet. I must place in the top four in order to qualify for the nationals." The NCAA diving nationals will be held in Austin, Texas on March 26-28. Coach Geisz added that, "Paul is a good diver, he has an excellent chance of attending them."

ENGINEERS & COMPUTER SCIENCE GRADS
MEET PSE&G
DISCOVER POWERFUL CAREERS!

Public Service Electric and Gas is the third largest utility in the nation, providing a dependable supply of power to nearly 6 million people. Our commitment to excellence, innovation and optimization have created opportunities for ELECTRICAL, and MECHANICAL ENGINEERS, as well as COMPUTER SCIENCE GRADUATES.

Our representative will be on campus

Wednesday, Feb. 18

Please stop by your placement office and register for a convenient appointment.

PSE&G
Public Service Electric and Gas Company
80 Park Plaza, Newark, New Jersey 07101
An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080
773 E. Lancaster, Villanova

Price is Great...

BAUSCH & LOMB Soft Contact Lenses
Soflens $59*
*OFFER APPLIES TO LENSES ONLY

But not price alone!

At Dr. Soffer the low price is just the beginning of the Good News...

With This Student Coupon
Free
with Your Purchase Prior to Feb. 15, 1981
3 Month Supply OF BAUSCH & LOMB LENS CARE SOLUTIONS

Including Our "See for Yourself" 30 Day Money Back Guarantee

Discover the Dr. Soffer Difference
279-0431
217 W. MAIN ST
NORRISTOWN

Dr. Soffer OPTOMETRIST

FREE PARKING

The "Dr." is Your Assurance of Quality Eye Care

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118

CONESTOGA CLEANERS
907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010
LA 5-3431
PLANT-ON PREMISES
SAME DAY CLEANING
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

Imagine yourself designing the radars that sweep the skies of the free world.

You can do it at Hughes Radar Systems Group. We created the radar system for the Space Shuttle and pioneered "quiet" radar and signal trackers.

We offer one of the finest continuing education programs in the country and a world of other benefits.

Imagine yourself at Hughes.

We'll be on Campus, February 19th

See your placement office for an appointment

At Hughes, your future is limited only by your imagination.

HUGHES
HUGHES AIRCRAFT COMPANY
RADAR SYSTEMS

Hughes Aircraft Company, Radar Systems Group, P.O. Box 92426, Los Angeles, CA 90009.

Behind the Scenes at Sports Information

By MIKE HEALEY

Ever wonder how all those statistics, box scores, and little tidbits of interest about college sports get into the local and national newspapers?

Well, they certainly don't just appear out of nowhere, nor do they come from the sky. Someone has to set the groundwork, and that is where the sports information director (S.I.D.) comes into play. At Villanova, this occupation falls into the very capable hands of Ted Wolff, who, along with his assistant and staff, provide the news media with all the sports publicity they need, and then some.

During a recent chat with Ted, it became rather apparent that the roles of the S.I.D. are varied and numbered. One thing is for certain however, to define an S.I.D. exactly is nearly impossible.

"An S.I.D. is a jack-of-all-trades and the master of none," remarked Ted. "You're into so many things at the same time, which is the fascinating part of the job," he added, "but also the part which provides the most headaches."

Ted stressed that, "The biggest priority I have is to get the best sports publicity out on the varsity and club sports at Villanova." This includes writing releases on individuals or teams which will be sent to newspapers, arranging television interviews, issuing brochures and pamphlets to promote athletics.

There is never a dull moment in the life of an S.I.D. — the barrage of phone calls, reporters, and appointments never ceases. As Ted explained, "It's a job of priorities, and sometimes you just can't get it all done." Fortunately for Ted, along came Assistant S.I.D. Craig Miller, and although the workload is still enormous, it's more bearable now.

Sports information at Villanova is made less difficult by one thing, "We're blessed with such successful athletics at Villanova that it makes my job much easier," commented Ted. "We don't have to sell the athletes, they sell themselves."

Perhaps it is the title "Sports Information Director" which leads people astray, often they have misconceived notions about what an S.I.D. actually does. For example, it is not likely that Ted will know what time the gym is opened or where a coach is. "The classic misconception," Ted believes, "is that S.I.D.'s write every story that appears in the paper. Although we write, we don't write for the papers, we supply them with information."

Thanks to Sports Information Directors like Ted Wolff, colleges and universities like Villanova get mentioned in all forms of news media. S.I.D.'s form the basis upon which sports journalists write and speak. It is a job which often goes unnoticed, but is instrumental nevertheless. Unnoticed, not, according to Ted Wolff, "a creative job and that's what I love about it."

From L.-r. Assistant S.I.D. Craig Miller, secretary Pam Hurley and S.I.D. Ted Wolff. Charlie Guida Photo

Coach Perretta

(Continued from page 20)

The discipline of the Wildcats is obvious. There is a 30 second clock in women's basketball so offensive patterns must be run with precision. The shot selection of the Cats is almost always excellent. The defense, which lapses at times, is tough when it counts. Evidence to this was the fact they did not allow a high powered Pittsburgh team to score in the last three minutes of that game.

As the season winds down Harry Perretta's Wildcats are peaking at just the right moment. There is an important game against Cheyney State Monday night at the Field House. A win in that game would probably give Villanova the home court advantage in the eastern regional of the national tournament.

Whatever the game though, Harry Perretta will be running all over the side of the court. "I don't get ulcers that way," quipped Perretta. He will also be yelling frequently. More importantly, or maybe because of it, Perretta's Wildcats will play enthusiastic-disciplined basketball. That is the mark of a good coach, and Harry Perretta is that.

AUDUBON EQUESTRIAN SCHOOL

INDOOR RIDING FACILITY - BEGINNER THROUGH ADVANCED
DAY AND EVENING APPOINTMENTS AVAILABLE
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
15 MINUTES FROM CAMPUS

AUDUBON EQUESTRIAN SCHOOL
2629 EGYPT ROAD
AUDUBON, PA. 19403

GLORIA CASCARINO
PRESIDENT

668-6956
or 687-0163

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES

BAUSCH & LOMB SOFT CONTACT LENSES
$59.00

• EYE EXAM $25.00
Includes Health Check, Lens Fitting, Follow-up Care.

• CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00

• THERMAL UNIT $35.00

• ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00

One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.

CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520

ARDMORE WEST SHOPPING CENTER
ARDMORE, PA.

22/23 OPTICAL CENTER

Pirates Buried by Wildcats

By JIM FEMIA

Wednesday night was Senior Appreciation Night and the Villanova Wildcats outlasted the Pirates from Seton Hall, 67-63. Seniors Alex Bradley, Tom Sienkiewicz, Jim Knoebel and Luis Pagan were all honored, along with their parents, during pregame ceremonies. But even more important to the seniors, at least Knoebel and Pagan, was that the four would be on the court for the opening tap, something that Knoebel and Pagan have never been a part of at Villanova.

Coach Rollie Massimino jokingly stated, "It's been kind of a tradition around here. Hey, maybe we should have let them stay in there; we were leading 4-0." Pagan, who has seen little playing time this season, scored four of the first six Villanova points and played strong defense along with the rest of the starting line-up, holding the Pirates scoreless for the first 3:23.

The opening 11 minutes proved to be all Villanova, as the Wildcats outscored their opponents 22-10. Alex Bradley seemed to be in old form hitting two 15-foot jumpers while the rest of the scoring was well distributed throughout the rest of the line-up. At this point, the Seton Hall defense stiffened and their zone offense began to go to work.

"They executed the zone offense as effectively as anyone we've played all year," stated Massimino. "They're very patient when they have the ball and they make good shots," continued coach.

Thanks to a jumper from Dan Callandrillo with just four seconds left in the half, the Pirates overcame a 12 point deficit and went into the locker room tied with the Wildcats, 34-34.

Seton Hall coach Billy Raftery stated, "To beat Villanova you have to stop Stewart Granger from penetrating and keep Alex Bradley off the boards." Seton Hall succeeded in stopping both Granger and Bradley as Granger netted only one field goal and Bradley could only manage two rebounds.

Tom Sienkiewicz, who had a jittery first half, settled down in the second half and began hitting his patterned 15-foot baseline jumper, and the Cats broke on top 48-44. But the tough zone offense of Seton Hall, led by 6-9 guard Howard McNeil and Dan Callandrillo, the fifth leading scorer in the Big East, matched Villanova basket for basket.

"We couldn't trap McNeil and Callandrillo is a super penetrator," remarked Massimino. "Playing against a 6-9 guard, as good as McNeil is, is a tough thing to defense."

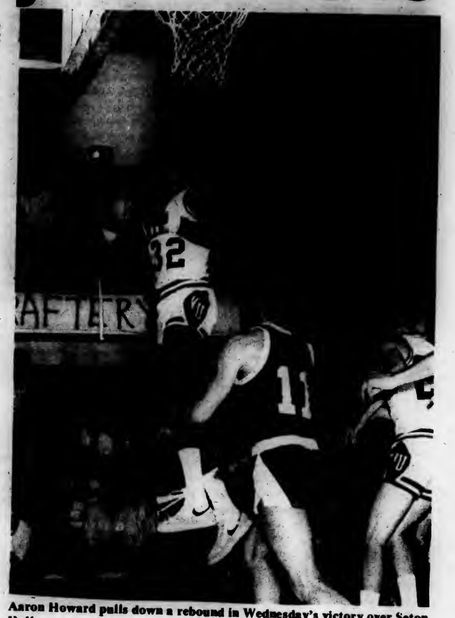
Villanova went into a four corner stall with four minutes left to play but Sienkiewicz surprised the Seton Hall defense and went in for an unmolested lay-up. After a Pirate basket, Villanova again went into their stall and Sienkiewicz again found a crease in the defense and scored on a solo drive. Two John Pinone foul shots with :09 remaining sealed the victory for the Wildcats.

Pinone and Sienkiewicz each had 16 points while McNeil led all scorers with 17.

"Down the stretch we did the things we had to do to win," explained Massimino. "Billy's (Raftery) done a great job with this team. This Seton Hall team is a very good team. They have three All-New Jersey players who all know how to play."

Both coach Massimino and Raftery agree that anyone can win the Big East but Boston College is the most impressive. Raftery feels, "BC has great depth which always keeps them in the game. Coming in with fresh players is an important role."

Villanova's record now stands at 14-7 while Seton Hall's record dropped to 8-12. The Pirates have now lost four Big East games by a total of 10 points. They have lost two one-point games to Villanova and Georgetown and a four-point game to Boston College.



Aaron Howard pulls down a rebound in Wednesday's victory over Seton Hall. Ben Stanziale photo

Announcement

Tickets for the Villanova-Georgetown game scheduled for the field house on Saturday, Feb. 21 can be exchanged for Palestra tickets at the Villanova ticket office. The game is still scheduled to start at 3:15.

Feb. 17 — Syracuse, Palestra — 290 tickets
Feb. 21 — Georgetown, Palestra — 5,000 tickets
Feb. 28 — St. Joseph's, Palestra — 75 tickets

The Week in Sports

MEN'S SWIMMING

The Villanova men's swim team split a pair of meets last week. In the first meet, Villanova splashed past the Temple Owls, 68-45. In the contest with the Naval Academy, the Wildcats were outmatched 65-48. Swimmers Tod Russell and Rob Kownurko gave outstanding performances in both meets.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Villanova hoopsters crushed the host University of Maine basketball team, 68-48. John Pinone gave another tremendous performance as he scored 17 points and ripped down 11 rebounds. Sophomore Stewart Granger added 15 points and six assists to the Wildcat onslaught. Senior Alex Bradley returned to the victorious Wildcats, and added nine points and six rebounds.

WOMEN'S TRACK and FIELD

The women's track and field team lived up to its outstanding reputation at the Princeton Women's Indoor Relays this weekend. The team gained a first, a second, and a third place in the eight event meet. The relay team of Jennifer Whitfield, Pat Bradley, Lisa Marco, and Suzanne Shea finished first in the two-mile relay, and third in the distance medley relay. Their medley time of 11:47.7 qualified them for the National AIAW's. Peggy Stewart placed to a second place finish in the high jump with a five foot eight [illegible]

MEN'S ICE HOCKEY

The Villanova ice hockey team split a pair of away games this past weekend. On Saturday, the Cats fell behind early, rallied to come within one goal, but fell short at the end, falling to the Cadets 4-3. St. John's was the next stop for the Icecats. Again falling behind in the early going by a score of 2-0, the Cats this time regrouped to pull out a 6-4 victory. Stars on the weekend trip were Tom Curran with three goals, Chris Mancuso, Tom Margiotti and Chris Grennon.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

The women's basketball team moved one step closer to the top in the country by crushing St. Peter's, 80-59. Lisa Ortlip became the highest scoring woman in Villanova history, adding 11 points. She now holds the Villanova record for both scoring and rebounding. Other stars in the St. Peter's game were Stephanie Vanderslice, 16 points, and Mary Beth Gibson with 13 points.

MEN'S TRACK and FIELD

Brian Dalatri, Villanova shot putter, qualified for the IC4A's with a 54-7-1/4 throw Sunday at the Princeton Relays. Rodney Wilson placed first in the 60-yard hurdles, establishing a new meet record with a run of 7.33. The distance medley relay team, composed of John Bergese, Jim Adams, John Hunter and Sydney Maree, qualified for the NCAA's taking first in 9:44.76.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

The Villanova women's swim team topped their record to 7-3 by defeating Widener College by a score of 89-32. Beth Metzger was the only double winner for the Watercats as she won the 50-yard backstroke, 31.15, and was a member of the 200 medley relay, which finished first, timing 2:05.61.

Lifters Place Third in States

By JERRY VENTRESCA

What is Pennsylvania powerlifting without Kutztown State College? It's like California without sunshine or Texas without oil. As long as the Pennsylvania State Collegiate Powerlifting Championships continue, so too will a successful Kutztown powerlifting squad. At least that seems the trend from the past six years.

For the third year in a row and fourth of the last five, Kutztown has won the state title, this year at the Field House on Sunday. Following Kutztown's 52 points were Temple (34), Villanova (29), Lafayette (16) and a host of other teams, featuring a total of 130 lifters. For Villanova, its performance was one better than last year's fourth place finish.

Although Wildcat Coach Joe Slabinski thought his squad of mostly juniors could have finished second, he was content with the placing of his team, noting last year Lafayette beat out Villanova for third while this year the reversed happened. "They've (Lafayette) improved, but we've improved too," said Slabinski. "All our (lifters) are coming back, except for (Brian) McKenna and (Mike) Vecchione," concluded the former V.U. powerlifter.

At 132, Kutztown once again registered a title winner in Tony Thibault. As in the 123 weight-class, a Villanova lifter was edged out of a higher placing. Thibault and Nova's Dan Capece each totalled 467.5 kilos (1074-1/2 lbs.), but Thibault weighed in at 129 pounds to Capece's 131. However Capece is also headed to the nationals and did set a new Villanova record in the squat.

Villanova's first title winner was junior Matt Durst at 148. Durst's 570 kilos topped runner-up Temple's Doug Parise's 547.5 and also broke the Villanova total record. Durst also broke the state squat record by 12 pounds.

Wildcat Captain Brian McKenna (615 kilos) captured the 198 weightclass by besting Kutztown's Mark Sabatino (597.5 kilos) and Phil Lasorda (585 kilos). Although McKenna did not yet qualify for the nationals, one meet remains to do so. However, Sunday he was satisfied achieving his goal for the day. "I came here today to win," said McKenna, "and after four years all my dreams have been met."

At 242, Villanova's John Jefferson, in setting two state records in the deadlift and total weight (bench press, squat and deadlift), edged out Kutztown's Jeff Pammer, 752.5 kilos to 750. "The team couldn't have taken first, because of Kutztown," said Jefferson, "but we did well too."

Everyone was pleased with Sunday's meet. "The strong spirit of support by Villanova and all the teams, the sportsmanship, made me proud to be a lifter," said McKenna. Going out as captain of the 1980-81 Villanova squad, McKenna said, "I've been proud to be captain for these guys and its been worth it; I'd do it again. Defeat has produced determination (on the club) and although we've lost, we've also gained; we know what the goals are for the future."

Joe Lucas placed fifth in the 275 lb. class and set a new state mark in the bench press at 446 lbs. He also qualified for the national competition, which is to be held in Kutztown in March.

Tracksters Set World Mark

Paige and Relay Team Shine at Millrose Games

By KERRY LYNCH

Last Friday night at the 74th Annual Wanamaker Millrose Games several Villanovans achieved great success. Anthony Tufariello won the 600 yard run and in so doing realized another goal in his senior year comeback.

Tufariello followed Philadelphia Pioneer Mike Solomon for most of the race but broke at the gun to victory-by-a-stride in 1:09.7. Tuf explained that he tried to take first before the gun but didn't worry when he couldn't get ahead on his first attempt "I tried to pass him with one and one-half to go, but it just wasn't there. I knew I'd pass him by the gun lap."

Coach Pyrah said Tuf "looked great, he's back in form" and explained "anytime you win a feature race in the Millrose Games you are beating the best athletes."

Tufariello came back later to run the third leg of a record breaking relay team. The fearsome foursome of Marcus O'Sullivan (1:51.8), Kevin Dillon (1:52.8), Tufariello (1:49.9) and John Hunter (1:50.4) ran the two miles in 7:24.9, establishing an 11 lap track world record.

O'Sullivan paced the lead-off leg and had an ever so slight claim on first when he handed off to Dillon. Dillon ran out front but the crowd hung on at his shoulder. Tuf broke the race open, handing the baton to Hunter with several yards insurance. Hunter ran a perfect anchor; the runners behind him looking at an ever widening gap that grew impossible to challenge.

The relay team saw O'Sullivan and Dillon posting personal bests and beat the world mark established in 1975 by another Villanova team. Coach Pyrah said the victory and subsequent record was "amazing, a super race" and pointed out that three members of the team actually weren't half-milers.

Competitors in the 1,000 yard run had to wait patiently as Don Paige, Villanova alumnus, was introduced by a list of his achievements and honors. Adding another victory at the 1981 Millrose Games, Paige now claims a world record. He won the 1,000 yard run in a come from behind, sprint for the finish, world record 2:04.9.

In the same race, Mark Belger, also a Jumbo Elliott prodigy, had to settle for third place and another loss at the furiously fast feet of Paige. However, Belger appeared undaunted, told Paige that he "owed him one" and added "He constantly wins, but I think he's constantly afraid, too, 'cause he knows when he runs against me, he's not going to get away with an easy time." Paige explains "I think there still is a rivalry."

Several events and a standing ovation for Paige later, Eamonn Coghlan, ex-Wildcat, took the line hoping for a fourth victory in the famous Wanamaker Mile. And win it he did in a quick race in which favorites, such as Steve Scott, didn't even figure. Coghlan broke his own Millrose record, clocking a 4:53.0. As Coghlan took his victory lap he too received a standing ovation from the capacity crowd who made it quite clear that Villanovans were their favorites.

Seniors Sydney Maree and Amos Korir competed in the 5,000 but were unable to match the blistering pace of Suleiman Nyambui and Alberto Salazar. Myambui set a world record as Salazar smashed the American record while Maree finished ninth and Korir tenth.

Rodney Wilson placed fifth in the 60 yard hurdles among a list up of Olympians and world and American record holders.

Carlton Young led his heat in the 500 yard run through the first two laps but fell behind, finishing in 57.5.

Tufariello's observation mid-way through the meet best described the performances of past and present Villanovans in the Millrose Games. "We're doing very well ... as usual."

Profile: Coach Harry Perretta

By BOB CONWAY

Coaching a Division I basketball team is not always enjoyable. There are many personalities that must be blended together to form one unit. There are strategies that must be devised and practiced so victories can be achieved. There are parents and fans who will disagree with every single move you make. It is out of this environment that the effervescent Harry Perretta thrives.

Perretta, who at 23 was the youngest head coach of a women's varsity team at Villanova, has turned the women's basketball program around in three years.

In Perretta's first year the Wildcats had a 17-8 record. Perretta was rewarded for turning Villanova around (they were 6-11 in 1977) by being a finalist as small college AIAW "Coach of the Year."

Last year Perretta turned Villanova into a Division I school. Even with the much tougher schedule the Cats finished at 20-5. They won their first 16 games and spent five weeks in the top 20.

So far this year the Cats are proving that not only do they belong in the first division, they are reveling in it. Under Perretta's firm hand the Cats are 17-4. The 17th victory was a big one over highly rated Pittsburgh. That win puts Villanova very close to reaching the top 20. Something that has eluded them this year due to early season losses.

During the Pittsburgh contest Perretta was his usual self. By half-time he was perspiring profusely. He was off the bench constantly yelling encouragement and instructions to his team. This game was not the type of game that keeps emotional coaches off the bench. Pittsburgh down nine at the half grabbed a point lead (56-55) with three minutes left to play. Pittsburgh would not score again. Lisa Ortlip hit two clutch free throws to put Nova ahead by two with 1:52 left, but the game was not iced until Nora Bernhardt sank two more free throws with two seconds left. Finally, Perretta could relax.

Coach Harry Perretta

Perretta's relaxed state did not last too long. Two days after beating Pittsburgh, Perretta was putting his squad through a grueling two hour practice. His coaching philosophy is based on enthusiasm and discipline. Perretta in his exuberant style said, "I am very happy at Villanova. I love to teach the game of basketball." His enthusiasm has carried over to the team. Senior Mary Beth Gisbert who remembers when things were not so great her freshman year said, "Things are so different now. It is like a whole new world."

(Continued on page 18)

Women Top Pitt

By STEPHEN FALLON

Saturday night, at the Villanova Fieldhouse, 300 basketball fans were treated to a contest who saw the Wildcats edge the Pittsburgh Panthers 60-56.

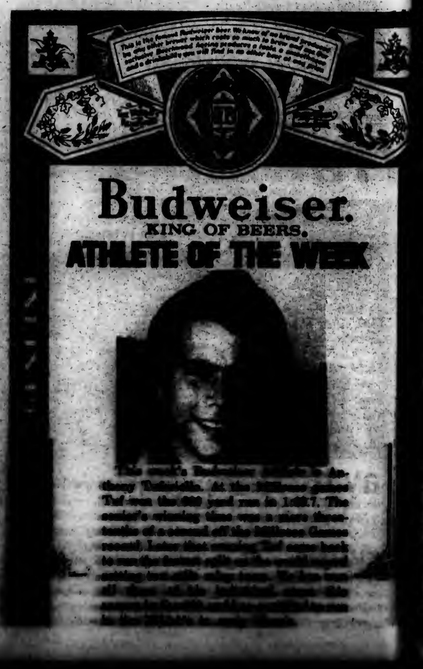
Thanks just the same, but Villanova Coach Harry Perretta would much rather have had a game similar to the one the last time the Cats took on Pitt. That first meeting, in the Dial Classic, saw Villanova roll to a 77-55 victory. This time around the Panthers adjusted with a man to man defense which, according to Perretta, "Just didn't give us any fast breaks."

Despite the Panther's new defensive alignment, the Wildcats were able to maintain firm control of the game throughout the first half. Realizing the superior bench strength of the Cats, Perretta installed a tenacious press which forced twelve Pitt turnovers and physically wore down the opponent. This fatigue surfaced with seven minutes remaining in the half when Villanova began a streak where they outscored Pitt, 15-5. Most of the offense was supplied by Kathie Beisel and Lisa Ortlip, who combined for 21 first half points and enabled the Wildcats to carry a 36-27 lead into the lockerroom.

Pitt came out ready to play in the second half and the pestering defense helped the Panthers cut the deficit to 38-35 after just three minutes of play. The tempo for the rest of the game was set, as Pitt struggled back always within striking distance but unable to grab the lead.

Pitt was able to stay close with good defense but was aided by poor shot selection by Villanova as well as a lackluster 30% field goal percentage. Then with three minutes remaining, Pitt's Carol Dugan hit a jumper from the corner to give the Panthers a 56-55 edge. That, however, was the last peep from Pitt as Villanova connected on five straight free throws from Stephanie Vandentine, Ortlip, and Nancy Bernhardt to pull out what the Pitt Panther termed, "A hard fought victory."

The women are now 17-4 and are holding onto fifteenth place in the Eastern Division of Women Division III basketball in the country.



the Villanovan

The VILLANOVAN will not be published next week due to mid-term examinations.

Vol. 56, No. 19 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | February 20, 1981

Tuition Hikes Approved

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

The University Board of Trustees has given its approval to increases in tuition for 1981-82 ranging from 12 to 16 percent.

In a meeting last February 10 with the Administrative Budget Committee, the Trustees also authorized a 12 percent hike in room and board fees and an 11 percent average boost in faculty and staff salaries.

Assistant to the President, Mr. Edward Murray — Jeff Page Photo

Commerce and Finance Dean Alvin Clay, who chairs the Senate Budget Committee, pointed to the desirability of early negotiations for faculty and staff contracts as a justification for the Board's action on the budget, which came more than a month before Senate consideration of it.

"It's important to get faculty contracts out early. It (the Board's approval) was done as an accommodation to see that the faculty and staff contracts weren't delayed any further," Clay said. He explained that contract bargaining began in February in order to give teachers time to seek positions at other schools, should they choose to do so.

Edward V. Murray, assistant to the President and chairman of the Administrative Budget Committee, concurred with Clay, stating that the administration had to have a degree of certainty on the increases before it bargained on the contracts.

Should they not be altered, the tuition hikes will lead to greater disparity in costs among the undergraduate colleges and the law school. Tuition for students in the Arts & Sciences and Commerce and Finance colleges would rise 12 percent, from $3830 per year to $4250, while Engineering and Nursing students would see their tuition fees rise 14 percent to $4395, as compared to $3890 this year. Tuition for Garey Law School would rise the most, from $3890 to $4512, a 16 percent increase.

Room and board fees under the recently approved increases would rise to $2772 per year, a 12 percent rise over the current $2475.

Murray blamed "double-digit inflation and the ever rising cost of energy" for the increases, which are steeper than in recent years. He added that the larger increases for the Engineering and Nursing colleges were a reflection of the higher costs incurred by those schools, pointing to the energy consumed by engineering equipment and the lower student-to-faculty ratio necessary in nursing education.

Originally the Administrative Budget Committee planned to propose tuition increments ranging from 11 to 15 percent, but during a meeting of that committee and the Executive Com-

(Continued on page 2)

Liquor License Status Clarified

By JOEL F. RENZO

In an interview on February 17, Father John Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life, responded to questions in an effort to dispel a number of "misdirected" statements which appeared in the February 5 edition of the Suburban and Wayne Times.

According to Deegan, the crux of the article, written by Ruth Tallmadge, sidesteps the University's position on the actual transfer of a commercial liquor license and emphasizes a number of issues which are of little significance in the proposed usage of any such license.

Statements given by state and local officials allege that in establishing a private concern, under the auspices of the Belle Air Corporation, the University is violating legal stipulations that call for a full-time public operation.

But, it has never been the intention of the University or the Belle Air Corporation to establish such an operation, according to Deegan. With this, rumors of the opening of any "proposed" Rathskeller were also laid to rest.

The planned use of any license issued would be to legalize the dispensing of alcoholic beverages at catered affairs in the Villanova Center of the Connelly Center. These functions, including Alumni gatherings, faculty banquets and proposed senior-year functions, would be greatly enhanced in the event that the "proposed" license is actually issued.

The Connelly Center — Ben Stanzale photo

At a Board of Directors meeting, held on February 16, it was decided to seek further legal clarifications of the license in order to avoid any ambiguity as to the legality of any further applications of the license.

It is the intentions of the board to avoid any difficulties that the Liquor Control Board (LCB) may encounter if it were to inspect the location of the establishment and find discrepancies in operating procedures.

These are the reasons given for continuing legal consultation. In the event that the difficulties incurred while pursuing the license outweigh any improvements of the catering operations of the Connelly Center, the procedures for issuing the license will be terminated.

Tranquil. . .

Taylor

... James Taylor performed in the Fieldhouse on Wednesday, February 18. For a review of the concert, see page 12.

Trying

... in an effort to simulate an emergency, students will have to go through the normal housing lottery. For information on the lott[illegible] page 8.

Minority Statistics Viewed

By VINCE HAUSMANN and MARIANNE LAVELLE

Villanova's director of admissions presently foresees no "drastic change" in the school's racial makeup, although as reported in the Chronicle of Higher Education this month, Villanova's 2.3 percent minority student population ranks the lowest average for schools this size in the state.

"I don't see it as a problem," said Rev. Harry Erdlin, admissions director. "I don't think we will ever have a large percentage of minorities. Maybe we will go as high as three percent."

According to a 1979 report by the University Senate Social Action Committee, the national average percentage for enrollment of black students was 11 percent in 1977. Villanova's current black student population totals only 1.6 percent of total enrollment.

"Our location is against us," said Erdlin. "Look at an area with a heavy black population, like Northeast Philadelphia. Why should those students come here? It's a hassle for them to get here, they have to traverse the city, public transportation isn't good, and they could go to institutions that are a lot cheaper like Temple or LaSalle.

When asked if attempts are made to convince those students of the advantages of Villanova, Erdlin said, "We go out there, but not to any great extent. What would be the point of it? It's too much of a problem for them to get here."

Rev. John O'Rourke, speech communications teacher and recruiter for Villanova in the Philadelphia area said "We've covered all the schools in the city."

He remarked that "the blacks with enough money go away to school, and those who can't go away go to other schools that can make better offers.

"We're looking for the answer to correct the thing. It's embarrassing to see the numbers, but what can you do with personal choices and other schools outbidding us?"

However, Edward Collymore, director of the University Social Action office said "If we would have to view it as mandated, then they would make the concerted effort. If someone were to say we'd need more minorities, it would increase."

When asked of the purported problems Villanova's location posed, Collymore asked, "What about the Pittsburgh area, New York, Washington? The minority population doesn't have to come only from Philadelphia."

Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for Academic Affairs, sees the situation as a three-part problem.

(Continued on page 4)

Budget Cuts to Affect Students

By BETH WHITE

If President Reagan's proposed federal budget cuts are approved, federally-financed programs like Social Security will not be the only ones affected. The federal funding of educational aid programs, like BEOG, SEOG, and the governmental underwriting of the state and private bank loans, will also be curtailed. And since three-quarters of the nation's college students depend on some type of financial aid, college enrollments may be declining as a result.

Bill Schilling, director of Financial Aid at the University of Pennsylvania, projects that, "With the increased need of students and the decreasing availability of federal money, more of the burden for financing a college education will fall on the students." Schilling explains that besides the also be a cut back in the Guaranteed Student Loan program (GSL). "The loans are available to students because the government guarantees that it will pay back the loan to the bank if the student defaults. The government also subsidizes the interest," continues Schilling, "so that the student pays no interest during his/her education, and then pays a lower interest rate after graduation." In other words, the government pays the difference between the 9% interest rate the student pays and the going interest rate (about 19%). A recent study released by U.C.L.A. notes that one out of every five college freshmen had a federally guaranteed student loan in 1980.

In order to fight the rising costs of higher education, students around the nation have formed COPUS (Coalition of Private University Students). David Pittman, the president of the local chapter at Penn, explains that the organization was founded as a lobbying group to fight legislation backing the proposed educational funding cuts.

Calixto Marques, chief of the Program Review Branch of the Office of Student Financial Assistance for Region III (which includes Pennsylvania schools), states that, "Needier students will be hurt most, but it will affect all students." He continues that "Some middle income families receiving some aid, but if the funding is cut, that aid would be eliminated entirely."

Villanova's Tuition to Jump in '81-'82

(Continued from page 1)

mittee of the Board of Trustees, the 12 to 16 percent figures were agreed upon.

On top of the 11 percent salary increase for faculty and staff, an additional 1-1/2 percent increase was authorized to, in Murray's words, "increase faculty salaries in areas which had gotten out of line in comparison to other schools."

Commenting on the budget figures and possible reaction to them, Murray said, "I think our budget increases will be in line with those of other schools. I don't anticipate any greater dissatisfaction this year as opposed to last year."

According to Murray, the Senate will receive the final version of the University's fiscal 1982 budget in time for its March meeting. After consideration by that body, he sees the Trustees formally approving the budget sometime in April.

As a whole, the 1982 budget will call for close to $50 million in spending, Clay estimated. "It appears at this time that there will be no deficit or surplus," he noted.

In reference to past Senate responses to tuition increases, Clay stated, "In my four years on the Senate I don't think there has ever been a major problem involving them.

The Senate is expected to examine and debate the finalized version of the budget at its March gathering.

fyi (for your information)

Russian Art Film

A film on the life of the Russian artist Marc Chagall will be shown in the Cinema on Monday, Feb. 20, at 4, in conjunction with the Chagall exhibit which runs through Feb. 27 in the Art Gallery.

Swim-A-Thon

Come support the swim-a-thon sponsored by DKN benefitting leukemia research. From 12 to 6 on Saturday, March 14, at St. Mary's pool.

Sunshine Day

It's that time of year again when you'll have a chance to spread some sumshine and brighten the life of a Shut-in child.

The 3rd annual Sunshine Day will be held on Saturday, April 25. Volunteers are needed as well as people with entertaining talents — clowns, singers, musicians, or anyone with enthusiasm and interest.

For more information, there will be a meeting on Tuesday, March 10, at 7 p.m. in Tolentine 215 or stop by the Social Actions Office, 121 Tolentine Hall.

Planetarium Show

The Planetarium show "Spring Star Watch" will be presented Friday, February 20 at 8 p.m. at Villanova's Planetarium (4th floor Mendel).

Engineering Career Conference

On Tuesday, Feb. 24, the Engineering Joint Council will sponsor the Twelfth Annual Career Conference. The program begins at 1:30 p.m. with a seminar directed toward the freshmen. At 2 p.m. a film on engineering careers will be shown and at 2:30 p.m. engineers with various degrees in ChE., CE., ME., and EE. will speak on the various opportunities in their respective fields.

There will be a dinner beginning at 5 p.m. in the University Center of the Connelly Center. The keynote speaker for the evening will be Samuel C. Florman, author of the book "The Existential Pleasures of Engineering." Tickets for the dinner are $6.00 and can be purchased from any E.J.C. member.

Communication Arts Society

There will be a very important meeting for all old and new members on Monday, Feb. 23, at 6 p.m. in the Radnor Room of the Connelly Center. We will be discussing upcoming guest lecturers, our first Spring Social, designs for our new tee shirts, suggestions for activities and lots more.

Come and meet our newly elected officers for the 1981-82 academic year and get involved!

Film Buffs

Continuing in the series of Cultural Films is Dr. Strangelove. It is a wildly comic nightmare that sees the President of the United States and the Premier of the Soviet Union cooperate in a bizarre effort to save the world from total disaster. Dr. Strangelove stars Peter Sellers and George C. Scott. Admission is $1.00 for students.

On Tuesday, Feb. 24, at 3:00, and Wednesday, Feb. 25, at 7:30, Forbidden Planet will be shown as a part of the Sci-Fi Mini Series. In this picture a U.S. Patrol Ship lands on Altair-4 where scientists, the only survivors of an earlier landing party, live an idyllic life. While studying the planet's preinhabitants there is unleashed a monster from the "is." This is a Free Event.

Mid Term Anxiety

Don't let another testing season go by without changing your approach to exams. If you choke or get anxious when you take a test, the counseling center can help improve your grades. See us in 106 Corr Hall for a free, confidential consultation.

Spring Cruisin'

The V.U. Sailing Team proudly announces the 1st Annual Spring Cruise Raffle. Win an all expense paid cruise on a 44-ft. boat. Take along three friends — your choice of weekends in April. Tickets are available from any sailing team member or in Dougherty, Monday, Feb. 23, and Tuesday, Feb. 24, from 11-1:30. Drawing is March 25. Buy tickets now for your change at fun in the sun!

Big Brothers/ Sisters

There will be a meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 24, at 12:45, in St. Rita's Chapel. The meeting will be short but important! Our thanks to all who helped make both the coffeehouse and the roller skating get-together a big success.

Band Dinner Dance

This year's band dinner dance will be held on Friday, March 13, at 8:30 p.m. at St. David's Inn. Ticket prices are $12 per person and $22 per couple. Tickets are available from the Connelly Center Ticket Office and the band office in St. Mary's, starting Monday, Feb. 23. Dress is semi-formal. The menu is capon, cordon bleu. All members and their guests are welcome! Get your reservations early! Ticket purchase deadline is Tuesday, March 10.

Gamma Phi Honor Society

The Gamma Phi Honor Society will hold its second meeting of the semester on February 24, 1981, this Tuesday at 12:45 in B209. The high school visitation program, and an upcoming party will be discussed. Dues will be collected from new members at this meeting. Don't forget to mark your calender April 25, the date of the Dinner-Dance at the Paxton-Hollow Country Club.

Careers

Rosemont College Alumnae Assoc. and the Office of Continuing Education of Rosemont College are sponsoring a workshop in which The Service Corps of Retired Executives will offer their talents, wisdom and experience to any small business or prospective entrepeneur. Also a good opportunity for all interested in any business field. Time: Tues. and Wed., March 10 and 11, 8:45 a.m.-1:00 p.m. Place: Lawrence Auditorium, Montgomery Ave., Rosemont, Pa. 19010.

Pick up an application in the Small Business Development Center, Rm. A, Sheehan Hall. Cost is $10.00. For additional info. call 527-0200, ext. 206.

Volunteer Program

The Volunteer Program at the Delaware County Juvenile Court needs students and staff who might like to volunteer their time working on a one-to-one basis with juvenile offenders or in helping with activities at our Detention Center.

For information contact:
Gail Hartigan
Volunteer Coordinator
Dealware County Juvenile Court
891-2120

We're "HOT"

We're H.O.T., Help On Tap, and students helping other students is what we are all about. If you have a problem that you don't know how to handle or if you just need someone to talk to, we would like to help. Call us at 645-7233 (Sunday-Friday 6 p.m-12 a.m., Saturday 3 p.m.-12 a.m.).

Steering Committee

The Student Activities Office is very pleased to announce the selection of the Steering Committee for New Student Orientation 1981. Melissa Arvanitis, Roberta Donaghue, William Fisher, Patrick Flynn, Lynda Frederick, Renee French, Diane Genovesi, Kevin McLaughlin, Jean Sanferraro, Ginny Spohrer, Beppy Wallace, Mary Walter, Carol Wyland.

FYI is published as a service to the Villanova community. Starting next week, FYI's will be printed on a first-come, first-served basis. Hopefully there will be enough space to print every announcement, but we cannot guarantee [illegible] will appear.

Energy Changes Considered

By RICHARD DISTEFANO

Villanova University has been considering several ways to reduce its energy costs, with particular emphasis toward an increase in the efficiency with which its buildings are heated.

According to Thomas N. Trucks, director of maintenance, "The steam plant is almost as efficient as it can possibly be. The cost of making it more efficient is greater than the return would be."

Most of the University's buildings receive heat from this plant. Since energy savings will not come from the steam plant, other ways of heat conservation are being explored.

A boiler in the maintenance building. Jeff Page Photo

One example of this is the outside weather thermostat that was installed last summer at Tolentine Hall. It is difficult to quantify the amount of savings that result from this thermostat, since there is no meter. Trucks noted that attempts are being made to add a thermostat to each of the following buildings: the Fieldhouse, St. Thomas Monastery, Mendel Hall, the Falvey Memorial Library, Sheehan Hall and/or Sullivan Hall.

Another proposal to economize on heat concerns the replacement of windows in some of the University's older buildings. Trucks is in the preliminary stages of reviewing cost estimates for various types of thermal barriers, metal, and double window options to be utilized in Tolentine and Vasey Halls. He estimates that it will cost $289,950 to replace Tolentine's windows, and $91,000 to replace those in Vasey.

Villanova now spends approximately $1. million annually for heating oil at the steam plant. This represents a rate of $1.02 per gallon, up from 5.6 cents per gallon in 1970, an increase of 1,722%. Trucks is aware of projections that the same oil will be $2.95 per gallon at the end of this decade. He asserts, however, that the University, while making improvements such as the two just mentioned here, will be able to realize a 40% saving (in the use of heating oil) over the next ten years.

The University, meanwhile, is availing itself of a $400,000 grant from the Pew Memorial Trust. This will be used for renovations in the piping insulation in the systems located in the basement of Tolentine Hall.

Another important source of funds is the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Villanova is planning to submit proposals to Governor Richard Thornburgh's office in April, in hopes of obtaining a matching grant, that is, for each dollar spent by the University, the state will contribute one dollar.

Thomas Trucks Jeff Page Photo

Georgetown-V.U. Game Moved to Palestra

By JAMES DeLORENZO

To accommodate NBC-TV's coverage, this Saturday's men's basketball game against Georgetown has been moved from the Field House to the Palestra. An immediate sellout at the Fieldhouse, the game is now expected to attract 6,000 fans.

According to Ted Wolff, Villanova's sports information director, the move is the result of the lighting in the fieldhouse. "Technicians from NBC came to do light meter readings twice in late November. They decided our lighting was not sufficient to televise a basketball game. The last TV game from the fieldhouse was in the early 70's, and lighting standards are much higher now."

"To rent lighting wasn't worthwhile for one game, with no assurance of future games televised from home," Wolff continued. "It would be impractical to improve the lighting permanently with no TV guarantee." The last three games of this season will be carried on regional TV, bringing this year's total of televised games to six. "That should help recruiting and revenues," Wolff said.

The Athletic business manager, Jim Brown, said that almost everyone who purchased a fieldhouse ticket exchanged it for a Palestra one. "If the game hadn't been moved, we would have lost the TV money. Now, we are renting the Palestra for one day from Penn."

Changing the site of the game involved the University of Pennsylvania re-scheduling or moving other events. There is also a Big Five doubleheader that night, and after the Villanova game, all fans will be required to leave the Palestra.

The Villanova Field House. Jeff Page Photo

"This game is not part of the Big Five package," John Nash, the Big Five director, explains, "All the revenue from this game will be kept by Villanova and the Big East. There are only eight games involved in the Big Five package.

As a special promotion for this game, the first 1,000 fans who purchase tickets for seats in the upper portion of the Palestra can do so for $1.00.

Budget Process to be Assessed

By JERRY VENTRESCA

A University Senate meeting that intended to lay out plans for the 1981-82 budget today will be a discussion of what can be done to speed up the budget process instead.

According to Senate Chairman Warren Richardson, of the speech department, the deans of their respective colleges were to have submitted their budget requests for the 1981-82 school year, but said, "this has not been accomplished yet."

"The meeting was to be devoted to discussing the budget, but now I anticipate a discussion of the lateness of the budget process," said Richardson.

Richardson noted that to benefit students, faculty members and the future of their contracts, a February 1 deadline had been set for the budget to be presented to the Senate Budget Committee; obviously that has not been met. "Budget material information from department chairmen was not due back to the deans' offices before June 3," pointed out Richardson, "and then there is much paperwork to be done before the deans submit their reports to the Senate." In Richardson's opinion, the budget should be completed for the Senate's November meeting and then proceed to the Board of Trustees by December. However, now the budget will be discussed at the Senate's meeting next month and the final decision by the Trustees will not be known until May.

Part of today's agenda includes the replacement of Bryon Peebles by Lindsey Marini as University College Senator. Peebles graduated last semester.

Minority Statistics

(Continued from page 1)

"The number one problem is money," he said, "not in the sense of needing to hire people, but in getting scholarships.

"The second problem is one I can't put my finger on. But Villanova is a Roman Catholic school, and that can mean quite a bit of difference to those not from that background.

"The third problem is that the major minority population is from the inner city, and this is suburbia. Many people who have lived in the city have never been out of the city. Suburbia is a different world to them. There is a physical and an attitudinal distance as well. Do we make an effort to bridge that gap? I think we make the effort. We are not getting the results we'd like to have."

Awards Presented at Minority Luncheon

By DOUGLAS EARL

The Black Cultural Society held its first annual awards ceremony Feb. 14 in the Connelly Center.

The awards were presented at a luncheon which featured W. Wilson Goode, managing director for Philadelphia as the speaker.

Goode said, "The contributions of blacks have been ignored too long. Black Americans have made an investment in the bank of America; there should be no check that is returned marked insufficient funds."

Goode mentioned several blacks who have made major contributions to society. Among these he mentioned was Dr. Charles Drew, whom he said, "help not just black people, but all of mankind." Goode felt that blacks have made progress in society but he stressed that there was still a long way to go. He said, "We ought to recognize that there has been significant progress, but not enough: not enough black students, faculty and administrators. There is yet an overwhelming number of people out there who live in poverty."

Goode cited poor housing and educational services as prime examples. He said that blacks were disproportionately a part of the poor.

The cultural society then gave out five awards in five different fields. The five awards were: the Academic Achievement Award, Distinguished Alumni Award, Service Award, Black Pride Award and the Sportsmanship Award.

Jennifer Whitfield and Carlton Young were the recipients of the Academic Achievement Award. The society cited them for both carrying high grade point averages and for their service to Villanova.

Whitfield is a junior accounting major with a 3.5 GPA and was the first woman to receive a track scholarship to Villanova. Young, a sophomore biology major also has a 3.5 GPA and is on the track team.

The Distinguished Alumni Award was given to Steven Avinger, deputy commissioner of license and inspection in Mayor Green's cabinet and Ronald Rothwell, catalog market specialist on the HUD Solar Energy Project.

The Service award was given to Reginald Franklin and Kevin Murphy. Franklin, a senior political science major who intends to enroll in law school next fall, has performed many services for the community including serving as Villanova's student representative to Pennsylvania's Black Conference on Higher Education. Murphy, a senior business administration major, was also cited for service to the community. Among his many functions for the community is Peer Counselor for students of the Academic Advancement Program.

The Black Pride award, which is voted on by Villanova black students was given to the president and vice-president of the Black Cultural Society.

Kevin Murphy, receiving his second award and Angela Martin, a sophomore nursing major, were cited by the society.

Award recipients (left to right): Steven Avinger, Ronald Rothwell, David Martin, Reginald Franklin, Angela Martin, Jennifer Whitfield, Kevin Murphy and Ron Wilson.

New Union President Elected

By MARGE BATTISTELLI

On Thursday, Feb. 12, the Villanova Union selected Irene A. Smith as their new student president. She is the second female president in the Union's history and the first president to serve in her junior year.

Irene A. Smith

Smith, a sophomore accounting major, has been involved in the Union since her freshman year. She started as an active participant and then became a social chairperson in the area of operations as a sophomore. As a chairperson, Irene was in charge of the social events for the Union itself. She helped to organize inter-Union events such as ski tripe, parties, and Union week, a competition among Union committees that takes place each semester and is organized by the University Services Committee.

Smith feels that her role as president is to "represent the Union as only an individual can and to represent it at the Facilitating Committee meetings." These are meetings in which all committees come together to program and plan. She also sees herself as "trying to unify the Board more because the Board itself is an organization and unless the organizations can work efficiently together, the Union won't be able to work efficiently."

Looking to the future, Smith sees her main goal as trying to improve the image of the Union. "The public image affects what the Union does to such an extent. If we don't feel as though we have support then we really can't do anything. The Union is for the student body as a whole. It is for everybody, even non-members." She sees the University supporting her in achieving this goal.

Along these same lines, Smith's goal is to see the Union working together effectively. "I see 'unity' as the biggest push for next year."

Lucyna Gorski, the University's program director of the student life area, explained the selection process of Union officers.

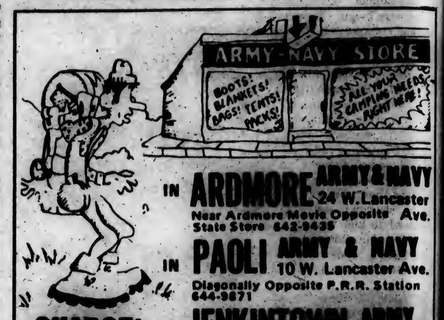
The selection committee is made up of the members of the executive board of the past year, excluding any members who are running for the president's position, plus Chris Muller who is the assistant program director, Gorski, and a student life administrator. This year, the administrator was Fr. Robert Martin, dean of Student Activities. The committee then interviews each candidate and holds a vote until they get a two-thirds vote in one of the candidate's favor.

Gorski sees the role of the president as being the "unifying force of the Union. The president keeps together all the committees, is the spokesman for the Union, and is the leader that keeps all of the other leaders together." The President makes sure that the committees stay on top of the programs that are scheduled, and also sees to it that each of the coordinators are working well with their committees. The president is also the representative of the Union to outside areas.

Having the Union recognized as the Union as opposed to merely a number of individual committees is what Gorski sees as the major goal of the Union this year. "We need to have the students get a better perspective of what the Union is all about." Other goals are to organize a lot of smaller things in order to offer a varied program, such as taking a poll to find out exactly what it is that the students are interested in seeing. The Union is striving for more input from various sources because this input will help to constitute a better program.

Gorski sees a positive year ahead with Smith as president. "She is very open to many ideas and has a lot of creative ideas of her own. I think she is going to be very good."

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118



CHARGE!
Most Major Credit Cards Honored
IN ARDMORE ARMY & NAVY 24 W. Lancaster Ave. Near Ardmore Movie Opposite State Store 642-9435
IN PAOLI ARMY & NAVY 10 W. Lancaster Ave. Diagonally Opposite P.R.R. Station 644-9871
IN JENKINTOWN ARMY & NAVY 705 Greenwood Ave. On Bogo Parking Lot 884-9441
IN WAYNE ARMY & NAVY 156 E. LANCASTER 293-9832

TAKE CHARGE AT 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you're at the bottom of the ladder.

In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're commissioned an officer, part of the management team. And you're given the immediate decision-making authority your responsibilities demand.

On your first sea tour, you'll be responsible for the work of up to 30 men and the care of literally millions of dollars worth of highly sophisticated equipment. You're a Division Officer, so you're in charge.

It's a lot more responsibility than most corporations give a man of 22. As a Navy Officer, you encounter new challenges, new tests of your skills, new opportunities to advance your education. You grow.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy Officer and take charge, even at 22.

NAVY OPPORTUNITY INFORMATION CENTER C145
P.O. Box 5000, Clifton, NJ 07012
☐ I'm ready to take charge. Tell me about the Navy's officer programs. (ØG)
Name (First) (Please Print) (Last)
Address
City State Zip
Date of Birth †College/University
‡Graduation Date ◊GPA
ΔMajor/Minor
Phone Number (Area Code) *Best Time to Call
This is for general recruitment information. You do not have to furnish any of the information requested. Of course, the more you furnish, the better we can help you determine the kinds of Navy jobs for which you qualify.
CN2/81

NAVY OFFICERS GET RESPONSIBILITY FAST.

CONESTOGA CLEANERS
907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010
LA 5-3431
PLANT-ON PREMISES
SAME DAY CLEANING
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

Transportation Presents Problem

A Villanova art student has recently experienced problems with the van service between Villanova and Rosemont College.

Christopher Wright, a senior Fine Arts major who is presently taking six courses at Rosemont, has for the past three years been riding the vans to and from his classes at Rosemont. Due to the lack of facilities at Villanova, Fine Arts majors must take almost half their courses at Rosemont.

In November, Wright was denied entrance onto a van by a driver, even though there was enough room. The driver told Wright there was a new rule that male students were no longer allowed to ride and that he was just following his orders.

Wright spoke with Administration Vice President Reverend Patrick Rice, O.S.A., who said his orders for Captain Cunnane, of security, were that no men were ever allowed to ride the vans since their beginning. He told Wright, "Security is for the ladies only, and you can quote me."

Reverend John Deegan, O.S.A., vice president for student life spoke with Wright before Christmas after having received the grievance form Wright had filed. He said that it was his understanding from the start that the vans were for everyone.

Deegan said he would speak with Cunnane. By January, Deegan told Wright everything was fine and that he could ride, as long as there was enough room.

When asked, Cunnane said the comments Wright had made were untrue and that he did not know why Wright would say them. He stressed, contrary to Rice's orders, that the only time the vans won't transport males is when there isn't enough room.

However, following his talk with Deegan, Cunnane was quoted as saying, "I don't care what Father Deegan says, you're not riding the vans."

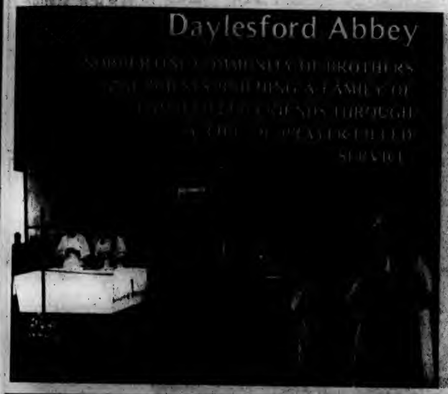
A bus was originally developed for the women in St. Mary's. The van service then began transporting women living on Rosemont's campus to and from classes. As a convenience, Rosemont women were also allowed to ride.

Dr. Radan, chairman of the art department, was upset with the problem of transportation between schools. He said they have never had problems with male art students riding in the past and feels the ruling is a threat to the Fine Arts program.

Nevertheless, Deegan told Wright two weeks ago that the problem was finally solved. The following Tuesday, Wright was again denied transportation by the same bus driver despite the fact that there was room.

"It seems ridiculous that something so obviously discriminatory is still unsolved after four months," Wright said.

A Villanova Security Van. Jeff Page Photo



I am considering a religious vocation. Please send me information about the Norbertine way of Life.
Name
Address
City/State/Zip
Telephone (___)
Mail to:
Fr. Francis Dorff, O.Praem.
Daylesford Abbey
220 South Valley Road
Paoli, Pennsylvania 19301
OR Call: (215) 647-2530

LONDON SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS
A chance to study and live in London
A wide range of subjects and courses is available in Central London for students of the social sciences.
Junior year ..... Postgraduate Diplomas
One-year Master's degrees ..... Research
Subjects include Accounting and Finance, Actuarial Science, Anthropology, Business Studies, Econometrics, Economics, Economic History, Geography, Government, Industrial Relations, International History, International Relations, Law, Management Science, Operational Research, Philosophy, Politics, Social Administration, Social Work, Sociology, Social Psychology and Statistical and Mathematical Sciences.
Application blanks from:
Admissions Secretary, L.S.E., Houghton Street, London WC2A 2AE, England.
Please state whether junior year or postgraduate.

3rd ANNUAL
RSA
ST. PATRICK'S DAY
BUS TRIP
TO NEW YORK CITY
ROUND TRIP TICKET $6.50
MARCH 17th
SIGN UP IN THE RSA OFFICE
LIMITED SEATING

the Villanovan Classifieds

OVERSEAS JOBS — Summer/year round. Europe, S. America, Australia, Asia. All fields, $500-$1200 monthly. Sightseeing. Free info., write IJC, Box 52-PA8, Corona Del Mar, CA 92625.

HELP WANTED FOR SUMMER CAMP
Summer camp for retarded near Lake Placid, now hiring. Campus interviews arranged. Write 2575 Troy Rd., Schenectady, NY 12309 or phone 518-783-1233.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR OVERWHELMING RESPONSE! Authentic OR surgeon's scrubb suits. More comfortable than jeans. You won't ever want to take them off . . . well, maybe sometimes? 100% cotton, colorful, reversible and roomy. Small, medium, large. Girls get one size smaller. Colors: white, jade green and blue. $10.95 for v-neck shirts and $10.95 for drawstring pants. Complete set $20. Send check or money order to Scrubbs, by Raphael. Box 756, Havertown, Pa. 19083. One week to 10 days delivery. $1.50 handling and postage.

To the Girls in 610:
It was fun "playing" with y'all that night.
Love,
2/5's of 612

To the Girls in 610:
Short sheets might be funny. But a 5:30 shower is a rude awakening.
Guys in 612

Personals

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 765-5999.

Dear FTD,
I'm flattered, but flattery will get you nowhere. Whatever happened to Harvey's Bristol Creme, isn't it downright upright! What's 2X3? When: After the fights in the F.H. on the 20th! Queen to Bishop 4, Check! Your move!
Signed,
Pina Colada Man

To Eye M.,
We always seem to be FALLING UP library stairs (especially to the second floor). It MUST be symbolic!!
From the "I" with the A.
The I's always have it.

Hey Big Brother,
For the past week, dear friend
We made you sweat,
You wondered when and where
You'd get our little message
You thought, "They wouldn't dare!"
Your friend, he tried to bribe us
But he found we wouldn't tell.
Just wanted to say, for once and for all
Hope your Valentine's was swell!
Love,
Your Little Sisters

Dear Bobby Hughes,
Thought we forgot, huh? Well we still love you and dream of you.
Love, always and forever,
The Buckingham Placeites

Student Concerns Deserve Consideration

Tuition Hikes Cause Dilemma

Tuition increases have become commonplace to higher education. Due to inflation, colleges and universities charge an increased amount for education each year. Certainly Villanova is no exception to this trend.

Accountants learn in their freshman year that debits must equal credits; revenues must equal expenses. Even though Villanova is an educational non-profit insitution, it must follow the same basic rules as any other business.

Due to Villanova's heavy reliance on student fees to cover its expenses, it seems that each year a magic figure is formulated that will maintain the University's solvency. It is very easy to determine a tuition increase with a computer.

A tuition rise, however, transcends any balance sheet or income statement. When Villanova decides to raise its tuition, many students must struggle to meet this increased cost. Indeed, this issue has a human side as well.

The tuition hikes approved by the Board of Trustees at its last meeting range from 12% to 16%. For many of us, this increase will present little difficulty. To others, it could present serious problems. With 65% of Villanova's students receiving some sort of financial aid, it could prove difficult indeed.

Villanova's governmental structure provides a means whereby students can react to such things as tuition increases. The University Senate must vote on the budget each year. Yet, by passing these tuition hikes, the Board of Trustees is circumventing any student input on next year's budget. Unless the Senate has the courage to defy the Board, it seems that its role is that of a rubber stamp.

If students at Villanova are displeased with this increased burden, it is not too late to speak out. Last year, a rally was held to protest tuition hikes. While that may not be the answer this year, students must let their feelings be known.

The process of deliberation on the budget is far from over. While student input is vital in this process, administration and faculty members on the Senate are usually in the majority. It is hoped that everyone concerned will view the proposed tuition hikes as not only the answer to our budgetary difficulties, but as a source of hardship for many Villanova students.

letters

Resident Hall Olympics

Editor's Note: The following is a copy of a letter already in the hands of the Dean of Men's Office.

To: F. Matthew Christenson
Re: Resident Hall Olympics

As members of the Resident Student Association we feel that the success of the Resident Hall Olympics depends on us. For this reason we would like to present the following list of proposals to the Dean of Men's Office. It is our hope that the implementation of these proposals will aid the Resident Hall Olympics coordinators in the future to overcome the problems that have plagued the program in its first two years.

1) The number of events should be cut down from twelve to eight. We propose the events to be retained are: backgammon, basketball, billiards, volleyball (single elimination), track, swimming, and softball.

2) Lack of communication is a major problem with the Olympics. To facilitate easier communication between the students and administration, we suggest that several steps be taken. First, there should be one person in charge of each separate event in each dorm, in addition to the area coordinators. Second, there should be bi-weekly meetings between the respective event chairmen and Mr. Christenson.

3) Lack of preparation is a second major problem. We strongly urge that the following steps be taken. First, all event posters and sign up sheets should be printed far in advance of the Olympics' start. Second, sign up should take place in the last week of the month preceeding the month in which the event in question shall start.

Thank you for your time. If we may work with you in the future in regards to this program and these proposals please contact us.

Sincerely,
The Stanford Hall R.S.A.

Senate Response

Board of Editors
THE VILLANOVAN
Villanova University
Dougherty Hall
Villanova, PA 19085

re Letters — Senate Motion
R. Christopher Whalen
Pg. 4, February 13, 1981
issue THE VILLANOVAN

To the Editor:

The motion passed by the University Senate US 8081-4-2 at the November 20, 1980 meeting of the body read as follows: US 8081-4-2:

RESOLVED: That the University Senate recommend to the Board of Trustees that they invite the Student Body President annually to address the Board of Trustees at their Spring meeting for the purpose of presenting a statement of major Student Body concerns.

The original motion presented by Senator Amoroso did contain the phrase "be permitted annually to address . . ." but the motion was amended by Senator Burnell to read "that they invite . . ." This amendment was acceptable to the maker, Senator Amoroso, and his seconder, Senator Carnal and this was the motion that was passed by the Senate by a vote 25 in favor, 2 opposed and 1 abstention.

Mrs. Carolyn C. L
Recording Secreta

the Villanovan

BOARD OF EDITORS
Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey
Sharon Winters
News, Mary Anne Granger
Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone
Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki
Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia
Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida
Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese
Advertising, Dawn Miller

Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

News: Carol Alkons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Lavelle, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli.

Features: Mary Anne Bilz, Re Crossan, Deidre Flanagan, Susan French, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Edward Lis, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, Catherine Murphy, John Pace, Betty Rutkowski, Cathy Shiels, Kate McDonald.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Radan, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Brehm, Fred Pescatore, Mark Kelly, Echelmeier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPasca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmetag.

Sports: William Beck, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Dave Glickman, Larry Goanos, Michael Healy, Michael Jacobs, Jeff Lerner, Kathy Maher, Roy Mita, Al Oxenreiter, Peter Ryan, Jerry Ventresca, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Coskey.

The Villanovan accepts letters to the editor and prints as many as space will allow. Letters should be typed, double spaced, and not more than 300 words. Letters must be signed, but names may be withheld from printing upon request. Deadline is 5:00 p.m., the Tuesday before publication.

Reporting Complaint

Dear Editor:

While I appreciate your interest in reporting about my lecture, "Introduction to the Science Fiction Film," I am disturbed by the fact that the article presented an inexcusably inaccurate and garbled account of the contents. For example, I cited the movie, "The Beast From 20,000 Fathoms." Your reporter wrote "The Beast of Giant Phantoms."

Secondly, I would like to deny categorically all the manufactured quotations attributed to me by your reporter. Not one is accurate and most are expressed in dreadful English.

Third, as an English teacher, I was shocked that you would permit publication of such a poorly written piece, filled with awkwardly constructed sentences and thoughts expressed so obscurely as to defy interpretation. I am at a loss to know, for example, how films "began as a bombardment of the science fiction literature."

In conclusion, I would like to suggest that in the future you select reporters who have some idea of what they are writing about, or failing that, have them check with appropriate sources when the story is completed. I would also suggest that it might have been of some benefit had your reporter attended the actual lecture. And, perhaps most important, I would strongly suggest that you edit your reporters' copy so that infelicities of style may be avoided in future articles.

Sincerely yours,
Margaret P. Esmonde
Associate Professor
English Department

Editor's Note:

The Villanovan regrets any factual errors appearing in last week's article. In response to Dr. Esmonde's charges, I have several comments.

As an English professor, Dr. Esmondé should also be aware that a newspaper has a deadline for its stories. Because her lecture occurred after the Villanovan's deadline, we were unable to give a report on the lecture itself, and the article does not state that the reporter attended the lecture.

Because the editorial staff felt that the lecture was newsworthy, Dr. Esmonde was interviewed in advance.

WGC

P.S. The beginning of the last paragraph should read (in correct English) ". . . you select reporters who have some idea of what they are writing," or, ". . . some idea what they are writing about."

Editorial Reply

To the Editor:

The Villanovan's February 13 editorial illustrates the difficulty of cutting inefficient, ineffective, and unnecessary government spending. While acknowledging the problems of increasing government intervention and debt financing, special interest groups, subsidized by the taxpayer, fight for their particular programs.

I seriously question the need for general government subsidies and grants directly to the college or university. Public spending in this way amounts to subsidizing all persons who get higher education at the expense of those who do not. Since persons from middle- and upper-income families are two or three times as likely to attend college as persons from lower-income families, subsidies benefit students from higher-income families the most.

This increasing proportion of government spending to student spending enables the institution to be insensitive and unresponsive to the needs of its customers — the students. And why not? He who pays the piper, calls the tune. We are becoming second-class customers — objects of charity partly supported at the expense of the taxpayer.

Higher education is a way of bettering ourselves by improving our individual economic productivity. By sacrificing now, we expect rewards in the form of higher earnings, better jobs, and increased status latter in life. There is a private incentive to pay these costs either currently or out of the higher income the schooling will enable him or her to earn.

With our economy on the brink of bankruptcy, the time is for bold leadership — let's support the President. As our present predicament shows, everyone pays dearly for this massive government grab bag of programs in the form of taxes and inflation. Without recognizing the dire consequences of the welfare state, we may soon have nothing at all.

Sincerely,
Robert Schiazza
Class of '81

Student Senators Reply

Dear Editor:

In response to the article in the Villanova Free Press ("Fact or Opinion," Feb. 13), I pose the following questions to R.C.W.:

How many times have you been up to the Student Government Office? The office hours of every Senator have been published each semester in the Villanovan. If you have any gripes of suggestions, why don't you come up for a visit? Honestly, we don't bite!

How many times have you attended a Senate Meeting? For the past two years during which I have been in attendance, I have yet to see you there! I question your sincere interest. After all, the Senate Meetings are open to all those interested in the policies and affairs of the Villanova community.

Do you honestly feel that questioning 103 students out of a large University such as ours is an accurate survey? Did you know that Villanova's enrollment exceeds 10,000 students? Obviously, you are not a mathematics major, for this minimum percentile can hardly prove a thing. Why don't you focus your energies elsewhere, maybe to a more constructive purpose?

The University Senate is a policy-making body, and the Student Caucus works damn hard for students like you: students who just sit back and enjoy criticizing. It's safer in position and very non-threatening. I guess you wouldn't know of the numerous meetings, the hours spent up in the office, and the frustration of defending and plugging for something you believe in — something you just know would improve your University. Every Student Senator spends an incredible amount of time trying their best to improve this school — your school, R.C.W.

We are here, and we are always willing to listen to students. Don't blame us for your ignorance and lack of concern. Sure, it's easy for you to sit back, but why don't you get off your butt and start doing? Anyone can talk, R.C.W., but it takes a really caring person to do!

Ivy G. Thielker
Nursing Senator

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to reply to the article that was published in the Feb. 13, 1981 edition of the Villanova Free Junk (I mean Villanova Free Press). This article centers around student awareness of the Villanova Senate. One must remember that the January 30, 1981 edition of the Villanovan published the office hours of each senator of the student government. Obviously, R.C.W. doesn't read a good, competent newspaper, or he'd rather publish a piece of trash. In the same article stating our office hours, the time for the next Senate meeting was also printed. Hey, R.C.W., it's Feb. 20, 1981, not Feb. 13, 1981. Again, a gross misunderstanding of our competent reporter.

Let's get to the survey, the real meat of the article. One hundred and three students were randomly surveyed. Where did the survey take place? At a local party? Were the students on or off campus residents? Were the students involved in campus life, or were they incompetent like our reporter? Why wasn't the random survey of the populus taken from the Villanova computer? All these questions have to be answered before a survey is taken. Again R.C.W., let's get our act together.

The article in the V.F.P. illustrates that there are some journalists that will print anything to get their name in print. I hope in the future the V.F.P. will publish more competent pieces of work! One must remember that we learn from our mistakes R.C.W., I hope you did.

Disrespectfully submitted,
Kevin O'Leary
Arts Senator
Room 204, Dougherty Hall

Dear Editor:

The Villanovan provides for the right of rebuttal, the Villanova Free Press does not. The what? Perhaps we should leave that for "Who Knows, Who Cares?" Anyway, I trust, as a University publication, the Villanovan will acknowledge this comment as worthy of printing.

The author of the article did, however, credit him/herself with a lack of awareness and apathy on the part of the issue. To clarify, the University Senate deals with policy formation for the University in totality, including law school and University College. Isolating both segments of the University, I question the authenticity of the survey taken. Perhaps if a similar statistical technique was applied to survey the Senior class, Senior Week would not be a reality. Furthermore, if it is tangible benefits you seek, we'll donate a Statistics book.

Fueled by discontent and a possible inferiority complex, the staff of the Villanova Free Press attempted to discredit both the University Senate and the Student Government. The attempt, at best, merely fizzled.

Discontent with the status quo is healthy, it establishes a challenge. The Student Government has chosen to conquer such challenges not with mediocrity and absurdity, but, rather, with maturity and objectivity. We have streamlined our structure and united other student organizations to effectuate a common end: recognition. The Student Government has been successful. Perhaps if your yardstick for success is your literary accomplishments, you have just lost a few feet!

Louis Casari
Caucus Chairman
C & F Senator

Dear Editor:

Fact or Opinion? Last week an article under this title appeared in the Villanova Free Press. This article dealt with the lack of student awareness concerning the University Senate. It is quite obvious that R.C.W. lacked both an objective and substantiated basis for the groundwork of this article. I find it a shame that the VFP must base an article on this type of journalism. (If one were to compliment and call it journalism) But a precedent has been set. In view of this precedent, I would like to recommend a follow-up poll to their first statistical masterpiece.

Question:

1) Have you ever heard of the Villanova Free Press?

2) Do you know the name(s) of the staff members?

3) Do you know the function of the VFP?

"You are not entitled to a point of view unless you recognize that people as intelligent as yourself can hold a precisely opposite point of view on the same evidence."

M.C. Bradbrook

Regretfully Submitted
Richard Caraali
C+F Senator

Dear Editor:

I am addressing this letter to your publication in the interest of free press, which includes the right of rebuttal. The "Villanova Free Press," characteristically, provides no space for such response, but R.C.W.'s article on the University Senate proved too ignorantly insulting to be ignored. I thank you for allowing me space in your newspaper to answer.

I initially hesitated to acknowledge the article on the basis of the absurdity of its "survey." The VFP states that it questioned 103 students in its poll. Since there are almost 10,000 students represented by the University Senate, I fail to see the validity of this "survey." However, I am compelled to defend myself and my co-workers against their offensive and amateurish allegations.

If the students are not cognizant of the functions of the University Senate, if they do not participate in elections thereto, if they do not realize that the body exists, it is their fault, not ours. We are not an organization which advertises our work, just as the U.S. Senate does not film a commercial for every resolution they debate or pass. The information is in print in the Villanovan for those who are interested. We publish our office hours twice annually for all who wish to discuss problems or issues with us. Perhaps remedial reading courses are called for the unenlightened, but the information is there for those who can read.

Recently, the VFP ran a piece regarding apathy on campus; perhaps R.C.W. would read his cohorts' writings. Not only does apathy affect the average student in his knowledge of the University Senate, it also seems to have infected R.C.W. I must admit, I envy anyone who is satisfied with armchair criticizing; it must be very easy and ego-boosting to discern the answers to the problems of our school from such a comfortable, safe position. However, while an armchair may be cozy, it is as useless as its occupant. I would like to suggest to R.C.W. that he rise up off his condescending seat and stop wasting that little energy which he does expend taking unrepresentative surveys. If R.C.W. flatters himself by considering his publication "revolutionary," I would advise him to look to our most recent revolutionaries, those of the 1960's, who certainly did more than print uninformed criticisms. I have yet to hear of a successful armchair revolutionary.

In closing, I would like to comment on R.C.W.'s anonymity. Cloaking of identity in this instance can only be seen as cowardice, especially since the members of the VFP are vocal enough about taking credit when the opportunity arises on campus or at parties. While R.C.W. quotes a faculty member as accusing the Student Caucus of siding "with the administration" (still another haphazard generalization), at least we do not hide from them.

Kim Kingsland
Arts Senator

By JERRY ARTH
and JEFF PAGE

This week the Villanovan asked students: How do you feel about the proposed 12% increase in tuition for the colleges of Arts and Sciences and Commerce and Finance, and the proposed 14% increase for Engineering and Nursing?

"This is the first time I've heard about it. I wonder where the increase is going to. Tuition goes up every year, but nothing changes."

Jim Wilson
Junior, Political Science

"I don't think its really fair. It doesn't seem necessary to have such a great increase."

Kathy Schmidt
Junior, Engineering

Since new equipment needs to be bought, for Engineering the increase is worthwhile. But I don't know about the others."

Franc Genovese
Senior, Engineering

"I am distressed for the students, but not surprised, considering the rate of inflation."

Dr. Priscilla Hopkirk
Chairman,
Political Science Department

"I think it has to be done to keep pace with the rising cost of maintaining the school. It's a shame it has to happen at a time when money and jobs are scarce for students."

Mike O'Toole
Senior, Accounting

"I think it stinks. Why should tuition be raised when financial aid may be cut back?"

Kelee Mayernik
Sophomore, Engineering

"It's fine if it's used for something good, like new athletic facilities."

Maureen Mahon
Junior, Communications

"Everything is going up with inflation, so the increase should be expected."

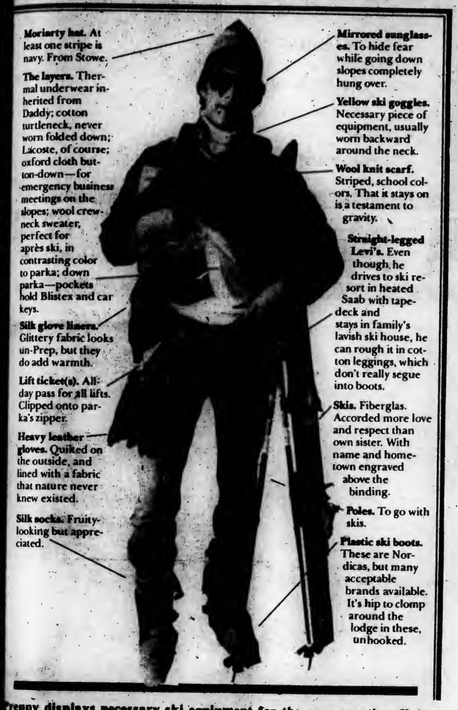
Sue Girard
Freshman, Commerce and Finance

Prepping For The College Life

By LAURIE ALMEDA

Wearing an Oxford shirt, khaki pants, a Shetland sweater, or a Harris tweed blazer is not all there is to being a prep. Preppiness can be defined as an attitude: an attitude of carelessness and self-confidence.

Preppies dress alike in order to conform to the style in which they have lived their lives. The prep child grows up being surrounded by preps, never seeing another way of life. Exposed to friends named "Bootsy" and "Bif," ski vacations at Aspen, week-end beach trips, and dinners at the club, how could a child aspire to anything but preppiness?



Preppy displays necessary ski equipment for the prep vacation. Taken from the "Official Preppy Handbook."

Mummy and Daddy instruct their prep child to know what is customarily proper preppiness. Prep parents assume the responsibility of grooming their prep child in the knowledge of these customs, from the time of birth, to the time when the prep enters the college of his choice-the alma mater.

Prep is consistent. Generations of preps have dressed, talked, worked, and vacationed in the same manner. Just like the clothes which the prep wears year after year, the prep style of life is maintained by tradition.

Having wealth and power, but not showing it off, is a proper preppy attitude. A prep will drive the Rabbit instead of the BMW; if the prep must drive the BMW, he will do so casually.

Preps act casual about everything they do. Preppies can be distinguished because they always look as if they never bother to think twice about what they put on in the morning. The casual quality of preps' clothes are also distinguishable: A prep always remains neat under any circumstance.

Wool and cotton are the basic acceptable materials for prep dress. Solid colors and brillant pastels are the common color themes. Preps are particular to prints too. Sailboats, ducks, splashy flowers, turtles, and maps of Nantucket are a few of the favorite preppy prints.

Preppies are also identifiable by their love of vacationing. The prep vacation always involves traveling to an athletic spot, such as a ski resort, beach resort, or golf resort. As long as a prep looks casual and healthy, while outfitted with the correct and costly equipment, he won't worry if the most exercise he gets is from refilling his Bloody.

Preppies can be distinguished because they always look as if they never bother to think about what they put on in the morning.

"The Official Preppy Handbook," edited by Lisa Birnbach, claims that college is a prep concept. College is a time for a prep to be with other preppies, the handbook claims. As a result of their becoming college students, preppies also experience living in a community of non-preppy types for the first time. By now though, says the handbook, preppies have learned that they are different; so they band together.

The purpose of a college education for the prep is "a final opportunity to sow wild oats, a chance to live the carefree life to the hilt, a license to be Prep with a vengeance," according to the handbook.

A prep must be able to drink a great deal without looking as if it is affecting him, claims the handbook. Getting in and out of conversations gracefully is another aspect of the party training of the prep.

The handbook lists the top 20 institutes of higher prep learning (Villanova was not among them). The book also lists leading suburbs in which it is pleasant for the prep to live, among which are: Ardmore, Bryn Mawr, Haverford, Radnor, Rosemont, and St. David's. (Villanova was not on this list either).

Acceptable prep professions include: lawyer, stockbroker, account executive, investment banker, art dealer, editor, landscape gardener, tennis pro, and college admissions officer.

Housing Shortage Poses Problem

By SUSAN WILMARTH

All resident students who wish to remain in on-campus housing next year, must participate in the housing lottery conducted by the offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women. The men's lottery will take place two weeks after Spring Break, while the women's lottery is held February 18, 19, 20 and 24, 25, 26 in the North Lounge of Dougherty.

The lottery takes place in two phases. Phase I consists of the actual drawing of numbers and the conditional preferencing of current rooms. Freshman may either reserve their current room or wait until Phase II to choose a different room. In Phase II, all sophomores and juniors holding eligible numbers may reserve rooms by signing a "Statement of Agreement." Numbers of eligibility are posted prior to Phase II.

The number of people eligible for campus residency is determined by a number of criteria. There are four factors which aid in deciding the number of residents eligible," states Rebecca Drury, the dean of women. "The number of people who participate in the lottery, the number of beds available, past housing statistics, and the projected number of students who will move off campus [illegible]," she continued.

Because more students desire campus residency than there is space for, it is necessary to request some students to find off-campus housing. This is done through the housing lottery process.

The lottery has proved to be the most equitable way of adjusting to the housing shortage. In addition, as Tony Martin, acting dean of men, points out, "The basic reason for the lottery is to establish order to the process of reserving rooms . . . it is a means of determining seniority preference; who chooses a room first."

For those students who are ineligible for campus housing, there are several options. The Dean of Men and the Dean of Women's offices spend a good deal of time assisting students in finding off-campus accommodations. Both offices, "provide and repeatedly update listings of apartments, houses with rooms for rent, and people looking for roommates," stated Martin.

There doesn't seem to be any hope of alleviating the housing problem in the foreseeable future. Zoning rules restrict the renovation of the buildings on the Morris Estates into dorms; "though they would not provide any significant impact in helping the housing problems," said Drury.

Alley Cats Play Tough

By BOB CONWAY

When you return from spring break the reality that the semester is not completed is sometimes difficult to cope with. You frolicked in Florida for ten days, and bang — it's back to the books. To help ease yourself back into studying for the next eight weeks there will be an outdoor basketball tournament.

The Alley Cat Basketball Classic is a single elimination tournament. The games will be played on the tennis courts in the early evening hours during the latter part of March and early April. Anyone who is a member of the Villanova community is eligible to participate in this initial tournament. Ed Wallice, the coordinator of the event said, "The more teams, the better the tourney. I want faculty members and administrators to participate along with the students."

Basketball is a city game. It is a game that is basically easy to understand. The Alley Cat Basketball Classic will not be like the college basketball tournament you will be viewing on television. There will be no flashy uniforms. There, also, will be no coaches.

No, the Alley Cat Classic will be played by street rules: no referees; no fouling out and no substitutes. The first team to 15 (win by two) is the winner. Perhaps the best "non-rule" is that even though this tourney takes place outdoors there will not be any cancelled contests. "If you are scheduled to play and it is raining, the game will be played in the rain," noted Wallice.

The only restriction of the outdoor tourney is that no more than two varsity athletes can play on the same team. Varsity basketball players are limited to one per team. An example of this rule is that you can have one football player and one basketball player on the same team. Ed Wallice further explained, "Two football players can play on the same team, but you cannot have two basketball players."

Registration for the Alley Cat Basketball Classic begins March 9. There will be a donation of $1.00 per player. "All proceeds of this event will go to St. Rita's parish in Philadelphia," said Wallice.

So, when you get back with that tan you got in Florida, and you just do not feel like studying, round up four of your friends and sign up to participate in the Alley Cat Basketball Classic. Not only will you be getting some exercise, you will also be helping those who may not be as fortunate as yourself.

Campus Clip

This couple is enjoying the unexpected spring weather which hit campus early this week. Temperatures reached the upper 60's.

UNION PAGE

The Union wishes everyone a relaxing and enjoyable Spring Break.

Good Luck on mid-terms too

BIG SCREEN TV

WILDCAT BASKETBALL

MONDAY, FEB. 23
8:00 pm - LIVE!
VILLANOVA vs. U. CONN.

10:00 pm - VIDEO REPLAY!

GEORGETOWN vs. VILLANOVA
WEST LOUNGE - FREE!
- REFRESHMENTS AVAILABLE-

* The live game of Villanova vs. Georgetown will not be shown. All are encouraged to attend the game at the Palestra.

Congratulations to The new Union officers

Irene Smith - President

Donna Dorgan - Vice President of Operations

Jim DiBiasi - Secretary/Treasurer

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES

Sunday, Feb. 22, 1981 - 7:30 - Cinema

DR. STRANGELOVE

A wildly comic nightmare that sees the President of the United States and the Premier of the U.S.S.R. cooperate in a bizarre effort to save the world from total disaster. Dr. Strangelove is outrageous, daring, inventive, devilish, macabre and scintillating comedy.

ADMISSION $1.00

Tuesday, Feb. 24 - 3:00
Wednesday, Feb. 25 - 7:30

FORBIDDEN PLANET

The most remarkable of sci-fi films, it is the ultimate recreation of the future. In this movie a U.S. Patrol Ship lands on Altair 4 where scientists, the only survivors of an earlier party, live an idyllic life. While studying the planet's previous inhabitants, there is unleashed a monster from the "id".

THIS IS A FREE EVENT.

NOW SHOWING

Feb. 20 - 7:00 & 9:30 - Cinema

BLUES BROTHERS

"The Blues Brothers is a scream . . . one of the all-time great comedies"
Chicago Tribune

Jake Blues leaves Joliet prison and with his brother, Elwood, visits the Chicago orphanage where they were both raised. After they discover that the orphanage is closed because of unpaid taxes, they decide to throw a concert to raise money . . .

COMING SOON

Feb. 26 & Feb. 27

7:00 & 9:30 - Cinema

20% DISCOUNT
With College I.D.
at
The Junior League Thrift Shop
604 Lancaster Avenue
Bryn Mawr, (across from Bryn Mawr Acme)
on all non-consignment items during the month of February
525-8513

LET YOUR CONCEPT BE OUR MUTUAL PRODUCT
Any & All Needs Considered
All Work Custom Printed By Photographer
Consultation and Tutoring in All Photographic Areas Available
Call 642-2244 Weekends
Or Leave Name and Number During Week

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080 — 773 E. Lancaster, Villanova

You'll be amazed at all the opportunities and advantages the Army offers men and women with BSN degrees:

- Excellent starting salaries and benefits, including a liberal vacation policy.
- Real opportunity for advancement and professional growth—every Army Nurse is a commissioned officer.
- No basic training for nurses; just a basic orientation course to familiarize you with the Army Medical Department.
- The chance to travel; time to do the things you enjoy.
- Opportunity to qualify for specialized roles, teaching or additional education.

See if you qualify.

Call collect to 301-677-4891
The Army Nurse Corps.

For more information, write:
The Army Nurse Corps.
Northeast Region, U.S. Army Recruiting
Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755
Name
Address — Apt.
City, State, ZIP
Phone — Age

Residents Court Success

By JOHN PACE, JR.

The Villanova Racquetball Invitational was a program organized by three Sullivan Hall R.A.'s and one Sullivan resident, which enabled Sullivan Hall residents to compete, as well as participate, in a Racquetball tournament. The tournament, financed by the Dean of Men's office, plus a minimal entry fee, by participants, was held at The King of Prussia Racquetball Club from Monday, Feb. 9 through Thursday, Feb. 12.

All of the participants, including those eliminated on the first night, were given a considerable amount of court time, plus the use of the facilities, which included a whirlpool, sauna and steam room. Everyone who participated received a shirt which was supplied by the King of Prussia Racquetball Club.

Trophies were awarded to the first two finishers by Commissioner Robert J. Hanlon, area coordinator of Sullivan Hall. The winners are as follows: Paul Fitzsimmons, first place; Tony Cartagine, second place; Bob Elias, third place.

Frank Pergolizzi, R.A. on the third floor of Sullivan had this to say, "Our intention in organizing the tournament was to provide students with access to a considerable amount of court time in a competitive, but a relaxed atmosphere."

R.A. Dave Schmidt had this comment to make, "Frank's brilliant organizational ability coupled with his willingness to visit different facilities in the area contributed to making the program the success it was."

"As organizers, we'd like to publicly thank Tony Martin and the rest of the staff in the dean of men's office for helping to fund our tournament," stated Dave Schmidt, speaking on his behalf, and on the behalf of the other organizers including: Bob Elias, R.A., Frank Pergolizzi, R.A., and Henry Rohrer.

FALL 1981
WASHINGTON SEMESTER
The American University

separate programs in CRIMINAL JUSTICE • URBAN AFFAIRS
NATIONAL GOVERNMENT • FOREIGN POLICY
ECONOMIC POLICY • AMERICAN STUDIES JOURNALISM

programs include:
SEMINARS WITH DECISION MAKERS
INTERNSHIPS ON CAPITAL HILL, IN GOVERNMENT AGENCIES, WITH PUBLIC INTEREST GROUPS for further information write:

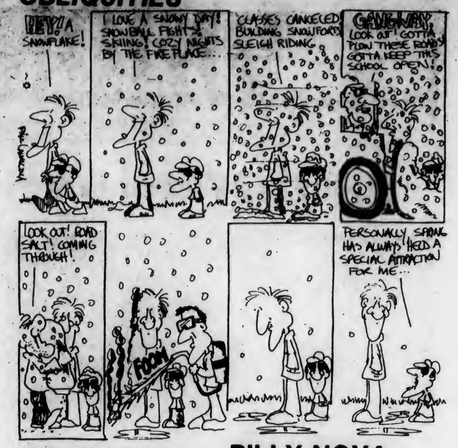
Washington Semester Programs
Ward Circle Bldg. 216
Washington, D.C. 20016

The American University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action University.

OBLIQUITIES



Villanovan Personals are a great way to express yourself. And for only $2.00, they're a great bargain! Stop up in the Villanovan office, 2nd floor Dougherty and be heard!

BILLY NOVA

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES

BAUSCH & LOMB SOFT CONTACT LENSES $59.00

- EYE EXAM $25.00
  Includes Health Check, Lens Fitting, Follow-up Care.
- CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00
- THERMAL UNIT $35.00
- ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00

One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.

CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520

ARDMORE WEST SHOPPING CENTER
ARDMORE, PA.

20/20 OPTICAL CENTER

For Your Next Step Consider Communications at Temple University.

Prepare for a career in communications. At Temple, you can study with a nationally acclaimed faculty in the School of Communications and Theatre. The Departments of Journalism and Radio/Television/Film offer degree programs leading to a variety of careers.

Apply now for the Master of Arts in Communications
or
Master of Journalism Programs

Deadlines for Fall Semester 1981:
Fellowship Applications–March 15
Assistantship Applications–April 15

For information call:
Denise Lannon at (215) 787-8421 or write:
Dean's Office, School of Communications and Theater, Temple University, Phila., Pa. 19122

We work with exceptional people. So can you.

Leo J. Riley, Jr., CLU

Rudolph J. Meyers, CLU

The exceptional people who work for Riley-Meyers Associates, representatives of Provident Mutual, are high achievers. And that's the way they're rewarded.

Maybe you ought to consider professional life underwriting as a career. Think about it this way.

It's a field in which you can earn an income virtually without ceiling. And in which you can earn the respect of people whose life goals could not be accomplished without your skills.

Life underwriting is not for everyone, of course not — but if any of this makes sense to you, give one of us a call. It just might be among the most important calls you'll ever make.

Get the most out of life with
RILEY-MEYERS ASSOCIATES
PHILADELPHIA, PA (215) 568-0535
CHERRY HILL, NJ (609) 662-0400
PROVIDENT MUTUAL
LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA
Suite 1910, 3 Penn Center Plaza, Philadelphia, PA 19102
Suite 110, 3 Executive Campus, Cherry Hill, NJ 08002

Taylor Plays To Sell-Out Crowd

James Taylor in Concert — Jeff Page Photo

By STEVEN COMBS

Wednesday night at the Field house, James Taylor played to a tremendously enthusiastic audience. The place was packed and "ole J.T." was warmly received. So it was surprising that one of the few Union sponsored concerts to be so well attended was such a raging bore.

J.T. is not without a fine repertoire. He opened with Carolina In My Mind and won the audience over without a struggle. It is his habit to start the show alone and bring on the rest of the band one at a time. Presumably the audience wouldn't be able to handle all that musical talent right away. Unfortunately this means that almost all of the mellow stuff gets played back to back early and the rockin' tunes like Steamroller are lumped together towards the end. It was not until the end of the first set that a little percussion was added for On The Roof and the coffeehouse blah somewhat dissipated. Any semblance of dynamics was a welcome relief. Even Fire And Rain, a somber bluesy ballad seemed upbeat compared to the previous dirges.

Even though I like Taylor's music, his plodding pace, his complete lack of stage presence, and the uniquely horrendous acoustics of the V.U. Fieldhouse combined to produce an experience as deathly bland as burial in vanilla yogurt.

Whatever induced Taylor to start rambling about some dead pig named Mona? I thought, "This boy's on powerful stuff to try telling the story of his pet pig's poisoning to a gym jammed with screaming girls." I was hoping some stagehand would realize that this man was losing his grip but Taylor's rescue was not forthcoming. He went on to sing a song about the pig. Weird scene.

The audience was ugly. I don't mean physically ugly but ugly in the same way that large groups of middle-class white Republicans wandering through Disneyland are ugly. The capacity for mediocrity is stunning. This bunch would have applauded anything. It was hard to avoid feeling that I was watching the whole spectacle on television; two-dimensional and non-participative.

I could sense this ugliness as tangibly as thirst or death. This was no Grateful Dead concert — no dancing, screaming, loving exuberance: "people joining hand in hand, while the music plays the band. Lord, they're settin' us on fire." None of the latent violence and burning rage of Aerosmi The Clash. Not here, not This was a sit-down, pay att clap-when-you're- supposed- fair. Nothing spontaneous ab There is an element of man spectator. Are we as Jim Mo says? — "We have been amorphosised from a mad dancing on hillsides to a p eyes staring in the dark."

Twisted thoughts. But does any of this have to do James Taylor? Maybe no Yet it seemed that while th dience was staring passively automatically applauding — lor was staring back, detache uninvolved.

In all fairness to the Villa Union I must commend them finally drawing a crowd for on their events. Whether or not t will manage to break even rema to be seen. The ticket prices w certainly high enough but so is t price of a "name" act like Tay Of course, yours truly got in free, which is the big reason cover over-priced campus di sions like this.

John Loves Yoko

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

Last week on 20/20, ABC showed Yoko Ono's love letter to her husband John for the first and only time. This was film of them walking together in the park, intercut with photos of them together and film of Yoko walking sadly alone. One particularly touching sequence showed a photograph of the cover of Imagine, a Lennon album on which his head was seen in profile in the cloudy horizon, which faded into the same profile of the same head, this time in a coffin. The film was backed with Woman, a song Lennon wrote for his wife on Double Fantasy, and it closed with the promisé, "To Be Continued." Now Yoko has released a single, Walking On Thin Ice and It Happened.

Yoko's amazing vocal inflections, her major musical asset, are showcased in Walking On Thin Ice, danceable New Wave schizorock about life on the edge. Session aces Hugh McCracken and Earl Slick play rhythm guitars, while John contributes punctuation on keyboards and a splintering lead guitar solo. But Yoko's voice is more fascinating, jumping out of the narrative, staggering then spitting out the words "dice" and "ice," and wonderfully, childishly stretching out the phrase, "They say this lake is as b — i — g as the Ocean."

"Walking On Thin Ice is what we were remixing that night. The past weekend we had listened to the song all day and night. It was as if we were both haunted by the song. I remember I woke up in the morning and found John watching the movies and still listening to the song. He said 'I had to put it out right away as a single. He wanted to be on the B-side of it. I didn't think that was wise. 'Nobody's going to listen to the A-side then.' 'Hey, I've got a good idea. How about sending just the A-side to the DJs and keep the B-side a total secret until its sent to the shops?' 'Nice try, John. You know it's not going to work.' Later, John agreed with me. 'You're probably right. We have to put you out as a solo artist.' In our minds we were a team. In the world's mind it was John Lennon and his Missus who got lucky. I caught him looking at the grey streak in my hair. He caught me looking at his cheekbones. We were old soldiers. 'Let's really give it to them. Let's make it a rule that we won't release any photo of us unless we are kissing or looking at each other.' 'That'll really go down well, I bet,' I laughed. He laughed, too, looking pleased that he made me laugh. The family who laughs together stays together, I thought."

It Happened is a beautiful ballad that opens with tapes of John and Yoko walking and talking together: "Hey Yoko, why don't you buy that building? You can have one room to keep your fur coats in and another to keep cats in . . ." The acoustic guitar and keyboard introduction gives the song a dreamlike, lullaby quality; the electric guitar leads the melody and Yoko follows it. The drums mixed into the reprise of the instrumental intro drive the song to an smoothly conclusion.

"It Happened was a song John loved. 'It's a hit.' 'No way.' 'You wanna bet? I'll make it a hit.' I remember thinking, 'Why this one?' John had found the song amongst my old tapes two weeks before the night."

The question of the artistic merit of the single is a matter of taste, yet the circumstances surrounding its release make it unique and important regardless of taste. Those who argue, as many do, that Yoko Ono has simply translated the public attention inevitably thrust on her after her husband's murder into financial opportunity are to be pitied. They are blind to the fact that money didn't hold John Lennon and Yoko Ono together, Love did. The liner notes Yoko wrote for her single, printed in bold type, make this very, very clear.

"Getting this together after what happened was hard. But I knew John would not rest his mind if I hadn't. I hope you like it, John. I did my best."

John and Yoko — To be continued.

Beach Film Flounders

By STEVE COMBS
and EMILIO DI IORIO

It seems that Blood Beach was intended to be a monster movie. We say this only because there is this huge globe-headed tube that sucks people down for its lunch. That fits the general definition of a monster. Blood Beach is a film that defies simple chastisement. There are some humorous and/or frightening moments along with an occasional eyeballed breast but director Jeffrey Bloom never decides whether he's making a satire of a monster movie or a good old fashioned campy feature. The wretchedness of this film's concept flows a culture surface over but seems possible from the very core. Blood Beach is a film without a soul.

With one ounce of wit or imagination this semi-satire might have been less of an ordeal to sit through. From an economic point of view we must consider the "opportunity cost" of watching Blood Beach, when we could have seen the second show, Zombies, which probably would have had more life.

The foolishness comes to a head when Dr. Elizibi (the resident monster expert) is asked, "Are you going to give us some straight facts that we can work with or a bunch of mumbo-jumbo?" To which he replies, "Mumbo-jumbo."

The only significant action during the rape scene. Some spaced blonde is going to the aid of a injured seagull, at night, under pier, where the monster lives. tunately, a thug grabs her b the monster does. While they walking in the sand giving audience flashes of flesh, the m ster reaches up and renders rapist weaponless. Absolutely gusting but completely justifi

The grand gross-out o when the monster's pantry opened and gills of guts and comes tumbling out. Even b are the bizarre casting it all i in Baby Ugly bags.

Attention Villanovans
CENTRAL PARK
SYN
Appearing Monday Night: SHOTGUN

Strange Scenes of Weird Days

By ROBERT McGOVERN

Every era produces an icon of ership, usually one for the Es- blishment and another for the nter Culture. The Fifties had and Jack Kerouac, The Seven- really had no one and The Six- ties produced a wide array from Kennedy to Nixon to James Douglas Morrison.

Most people know Jim Morrison only as leader of The Doors, a group that virtually dominated the American music scene in The Sixties and that through the years has enjoyed repeated resurgences in popularity. Maybe those early cries of "America's Rolling Stones" have become self-justified. But there was much more to Jim Morrison and life for him went beyond The Doors.

Jim Morrison was born into a military family, an environment that helped to develop his wariness for establishment figures. From very early in his youth Morrison proved that (while it may have seemed cruel to others) he had a flair for adventure, for creating an exciting, and often times dangerous, situation where none existed. A time that comes to mind would be when he was sledding with his younger brother and sister and he steered the sled towards a cabin and would not let them off. Jim's youth also saw him set his pattern for relationships with women, a Jekyll and Hyde of sorts — Morrison could be the model gentleman and also very abusive in a psychological sense, but never physical.

One of the simplest ways to understanding Jim Morrison — Door, poet, lover — is to draw some parallels to Jack Kerouac. The similarities are all very striking. They were well-read in philosophy, both possessed voracious appetites for women, alcohol and a good time (not all necessarily in that order), and both translated well into their work experiences. But these are all characteristics of a poet. From what we can see, it would almost appear that Morrison had used Kerouac as a role model.

The self-proclaimed "long awaited biography of Jim Morrison," No One Here Gets Out Alive, presents the creative and seamier sides of Morrison. The borrowed copy of the book that I was able to get a hold of (from the condition that it was in) had the appearance of a well used copy of the Bible (or a cheap whore, depending on one's perspective). The reason is the way in which Jerry Hopkins and Daniel Sugarman decide to make their presentation on the life of Jim Morrison — in language (although sometimes offensive?) simple enough for an average 12-year-old to understand.

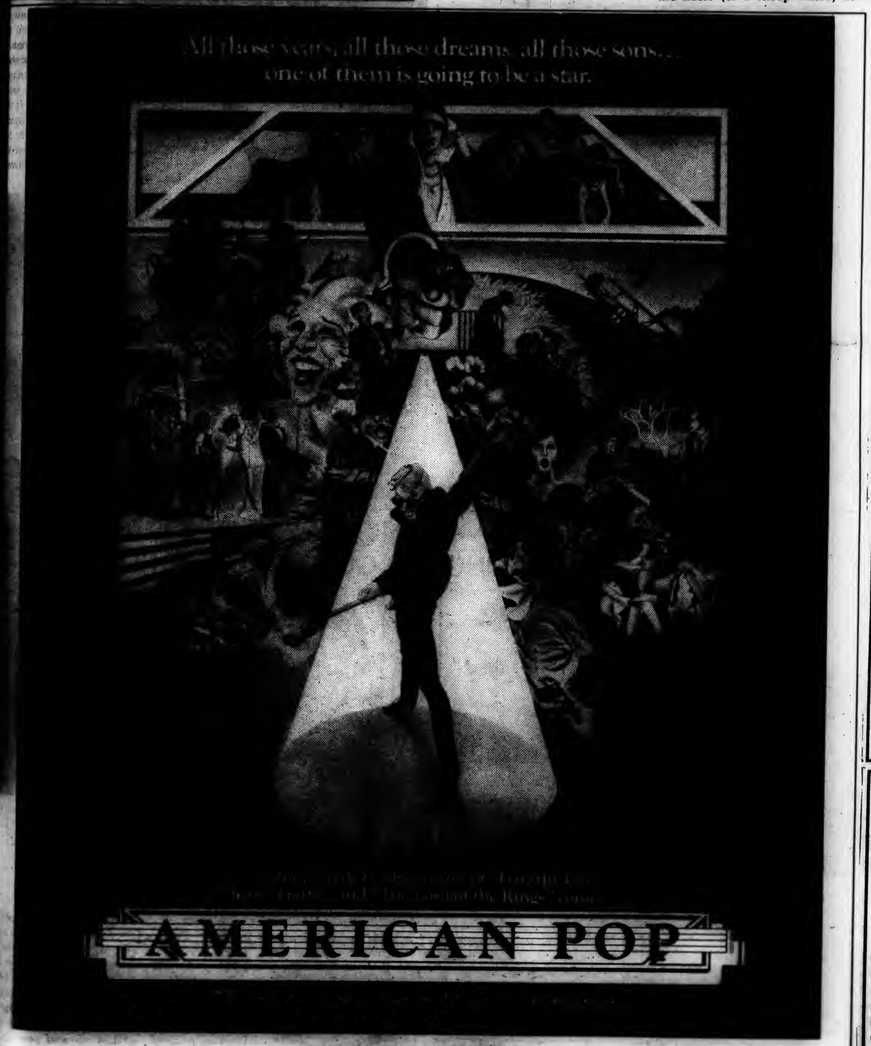
Another striking characteristic of this book is its layout. The presentation is very choppy and at points even incoherent, but then again it all does justice to Morrison's life-style. Whether or not this was intentional is open to conjecture.

"Indians scattered on Dawn's highway bleeding/Ghosts shattered a child's fragile eggshell mind." These lines were written by Jim Morrison about the time he witnessed an accident involving a group of Indians on a highway out West. Morrison felt that as the car was moving away, one of the dead Indians' spirits jumped into his body. It was Jim's way of reasoning his erratic personality. Maybe it was also Jim's reason for explaining his early death.

Much conjecture has been made since that time about whether or not he was really dead and the authors of his biography offer no answers, just a cryptic last line, "only Pamala (Jim's common law wife) would ever know the truth and she took that secret to the grave with her." Are the authors implying that they know something we don't? It's highly unlikely.

Even when Morrison was alive he helped to foster rumours of his death, in such a way that if he were ever to die, questions would arise as to the validity of the reports. The life of the lizard king was an enigma, but the death may have opened one of the doors.

"We chased our pleasure here/ Dug our treasures there/ Can you recall the time we cried/ Break on through to the other side"



COLUMBIA PICTURES PRESENTS
A MARTIN RANSOHOFF PRODUCTION
A RALPH BAKSHI FILM
"AMERICAN POP"
Written by RONNI KERN Executive Producer RICHARD ST. JOHNS
Produced by MARTIN RANSOHOFF & RALPH BAKSHI Directed by RALPH BAKSHI

Opening at Selected Theatres Near You.

GRE GMAT
GRE - Psyche LSAT
* Experienced Faculty
* Full 36 hour course
* Central Location
* Up-to-date Materials
Call or Write for FREE Brochure:
382-3790
DAEDALUS education services
Philadelphia Area
305 Bryan St., Havertown, Pa. 19083
215/382-3790

THESIS WRITING?
Tired of paying for entire retype revisions?
Because word processing has memory storage, large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.
For Pricing Info, Call
WORD PROS
674-9800

MAHUMBA in Coffeehouse

By MARK KELLEY

"If you came to hear rock n' roll, you're in the right place," stated emcee Mike O'Brien as he introduced The Mahumba Band last Thursday night in Dougherty's West Lounge. The band, featuring Villanova's own Mark Goetzman on rhythm guitar, Ray Sohmar on bass, Mike "Hooch" Durkin on blues harp, John Scott playing lead guitar and Don "Skins" Duffy on drums, presented an eclectic blend of rock, rhythm and blues and country western music. "I'm from Washington D.C. where a lot of the bars feature R&B (Rhythm and Blues) bands that really get the audience jumping. That's what we try to do," stated Goetzman.

The Mahumbas started their first set in R&B fashion with a fine rendition of Warren Zevon's Certain Girl. The bank then punched out the classic Muddy Waters tune, Mannish Boy. Continuing with the blues, Goetzman donned sunglasses and a smouldering cigarette to lament his broken heart in Mean Old World Blues. John Scott responded with a crying guitar lead while "Hooch" Durkin wailed on his harp.

The Mahumbas picked up the beat with an original Goetzman rocker entitled The Resident Fox. Goetzman was inspired to write this tune by a Villanova co-ed. John Scott, whose style resembles Link Wray, played another scorching lead.

Ray Sohmar, whose tastes lean more towards country and western music, delivered a well-received version of Charlie Daniel's Long Haired Country Boy in the second set.

Jeff Page Photo

Durkin took over lead vocals on Neil Young's Cortez to end the second set. The Mahumbas concluded their show by rocking out with Heartbreak Hotel, and a slick drum solo by Duffy on the energized Red Hot.

Not to be out of touch with progressive trends, the Mahumbas encored the show with a Goetzman New Wave rocker Girls In General. The audience responded by turning the stage area into a dance floor. They matched the excitement and energy that the Mahumbas had been pumping out all night.

Rush Gets the Picture

By SUE BREHM

The airwaves of Philadelphia are transmitting the electronic sounds of Canada's power trio Rush in the form of their ninth album Moving Pictures. It is receiving a respectable amount of airplay featuring two cuts Tom Sawyer and Limelight. Moving Pictures should gain Rush deserved recognition as a premier rock band of the 80's.

Immediately one realizes the importance of drummer/percussionist Neil Peart, who writes the lyrics for all of the seven selections contained on Moving Pictures. Peart innovatively whizzes around his kit, displaying his unique combined rock/jazz technique and finesse, and is responsible for making RUSH's music so dramatic.

The more frequent use of synthesizers and moog pedals technically handled by Geddy Lee, bassist/vocalist, tends to mellow this album down in comparison with their earlier efforts. Lee creatively weaves contrasting interplay with the erratic guitar riffs of third RUSH member Alex Lifeson. The structural arrangement of each song is dynamically composed using stop-time melody and rythm changes.

YYZ is an instrumental piece reflecting some of the jazz elements often explored in their music. Lifeson's barrage of notes are tastefully correlated with melodically flowing riffs over complex bass and drum patterns.

The general theme of Moving Pictures seems to be one of social comment. In Witch Hunt Lee relates Peart's messages of a society conforming into a mass of mindless followers lacking individuality. Peart's observations are described with lyrics such as: "Those who know what's best for us — must rise and save us, from ourselves./Quick to judge, quick to anger, slow to understand, ignorance and prejudice and fear walk hand in hand." In The Camera Eye Peart expresses a cynical view of modern civilization routinely acting out behavior patterns found in everyday life.

Moving Pictures will be promoted with an 80-city tour and should prove to be RUSH's most successful effort to date.

REVIEW FASTER WITH CLIFFS NOTES!

Exam time or any time, Cliffs Notes can help you earn better grades in literature. Our complete stock covers most frequently assigned novels, plays and poems. Get the ones you need today.

GET CLIFFS NOTES HERE:
Hanley E.T.C. Books
846 Lancaster Avenue
Bryn Mawr, PA 19010
(215) 525-4049

KINGS PRODUCTIONS AUDITIONS

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY
Annenberg Hall
Randall Theatre
Fri. Mar. 6
1-4 P.M.

Productions feature professionally designed scenery, costumes, staging and choreography in fully equipped theatres and outdoor stages.

SINGERS • DANCERS
INSTRUMENTALISTS
VARIETY PERFORMERS
$150 - $230 / week

One round trip air fare will be paid to hired performers traveling over 250 miles to the park.

For further audition information contact
KINGS PRODUCTIONS
Entertainment Department
1932 Highland Avenue
Cincinnati, OH 45219
513-241-9999

Copyright 1981 Kings Productions

INDOOR RIDING FACILITY - BEGINNER THROUGH ADVANCED
DAY AND EVENING APPOINTMENTS AVAILABLE
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
15 MINUTES FROM CAMPUS

AUDUBON EQUESTRIAN SCHOOL

2629 EGYPT ROAD
AUDUBON, PA. 19403

GLORIA CASCARINO
PRESIDENT

666-6966
or 687-0163

☐White ☐grey green ☐jade green ☐medium blue

	extra small	small	medium	large	extra large
Shirt (chest)	40	44	48	50	54
Trouser (drawstring waist)	38	40	42	44	46

Material: ☐100% cotton-preshrunk or ☐50/50 Wash'n wear blend-preshrunk

Item ____ Size ____ Color ____ Quantity ____ TOTAL $ ____

TOTAL ORDER $ ____

RHOADS & COMPANY
P.O. BOX 12840
PHILADELPHIA, PA 19108

Enclosed
☐check or ☐money order
Allow 3 weeks for delivery, offer expires March 31, 1981

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

VINCENTIANS
BRING THE GOSPEL TO THE POOR

Fr. Vince O'Malley, C.M.

St. Vincent de Paul

Brother Mike Rively, C.M.

A LIFE YOU CAN BUILD A FUTURE ON

- Preaching
- Home and Foreign Missions
- Teaching in Universities, Seminaries and High Schools
- Parishes

VINCENTIAN SEMINARIES ARE LOCATED THROUGHOUT THE U.S.A.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CALL OR WRITE:
Phone: Area Code 609
452-1940 Office
452-2144 Seminary

VINCENTIAN VOCATION CENTER
c/o Fr. Charles Strollo, C.M.
Box XXX, Princeton, N. J. 08540

Name _____
Address _____
City & State _____ Zip _____

Cats: no competition for 9th ranked Tigers

Cheyney State Dominates Women

By MIKE HEALEY

Against another opponent, the women's basketball team just might have had a chance: versus an Edinboro State or a Temple perhaps, but not against the ninth-rated team in the country. The Wildcats played their "worst basketball" of the season, according to Coach Perretta.

The squad's 24 game Field House winning streak came to a screeching halt, as the Wolves of Cheyney State buried the hapless 'Cats by the score of 58-35. It was a game in which Villanova could not buy a basket. It was simply not their night.

Defensively, the 'Cats succeeded in their major goal. "You know, that was the funny thing," claimed Coach Harry Perretta, "our goal was to hold them under 60 points and we did. The problem was that we wanted to win so badly that we played not to lose."

It was the first five minutes of the contest which dashed the Wildcats hopes. In that span, the entire team scored a total of two points, but more detrimentally, lost any semblance of confidence and discipline. Perretta believed that, "After the first five minutes, the game was over because from then on, we lost everything."

Cheyney had little, if any difficulty in manhandling the 'Cats all evening long. They led at the half 29-11, and had no trouble in the second half.

Possibly the main reason why the Wolves were so successful was their domination on the boards. Cheyney had four and five chances to score baskets on the offense because of their aggressive rebounding. The final rebounding statistic read Cheyney State 71, Villanova 34.

"When you put the ball in basket," remarked Perretta, "it's a whole different game. Even if we would have shot 10 for 33 in the first half, which is miserable, we would have only been down by six or seven."

As a team, Villanova shot 15.2% from the field in the first half, and 23.1% for the whole game.

The loss drops the Women's overall record to a still-impressive 19-5, with three games to be played. The high scorer for the 'Cats was Lisa Ortlip with nine, and high rebounder, Kathie Beisel with 11.

"It just figures," quipped Coach Perretta, "we have the first big crowd of the year and the band's playing, and we play our worst game."

Nova Boxing Grows

By MIKE HEALEY

Just ten short years ago, the sport of boxing did not exist on a collegiate level. Most boxers as we know them, were reared off the streets of our nation's large cities and eventually worked their way up through the ranks of the ameteurs to the professionals. In short, few if any, college athletes had the opportunity to box on a competitive level.

Referee John Fitzpatrick.

But there were two men out there who felt that collegiate boxing could be beneficial to both ameteur and professional boxing. Their names were and are John Fitzpatrick and Al McChesney, and the inception of college boxing was based upon their efforts.

John Fitzpatrick has been in or around the boxing ring for the past 35 years. With some 5500 bouts under his belt, he has refereed from the amateurs all the way up to the big guys, namely one Cassius Clay.

Mr. Fitzpatrick's efforts have not been constricted to this country only, however. "I've reffed all over the world. In Asia, Japan, Europe, and even in Vietnam," he explained.

When asked about the condition of boxing today, Fitzpatrick believes that, "Boxing is still alluring to the young city kids because of the big purses. But ameteur boxing has broadened its scope because of collegiate boxing, and even the pros are benefitting."

The highlight of Mr. Fitzpatrick's career, he felt was probably refereeing for Muhammed Ali, then known as Cassius Clay. "I'll tell you, he was something. The night I reffed, he boxed five boxers in an exhibition in Hershey, PA," he stated. "It's just a damn shame to see what's happened to Ali now."

Big East Tourney

By KERRY LYNCH

When Coach Rollie Massimino left the Eastern Eight to join the Big East no one promised him an easy schedule.

Few basketball fans predicted this year's Big East would be a no-contest, clear-cut sweep by a single team. But then again, few expected such a see-saw, change-of-power-fight-to-the-finish season. As the weeks passed first place changed like the weather and held as much validity as a random coin toss.

The Big East tournament is March 5-7 at Syracuse's Carrier Dome. It is a three day, seven game elimination match-up with team standings providing the seedings. One will play eight, two versus seven, three versus six and four versus five.

Commissioner of Big East Basketball, Dave Gavitt can't pick a winner and says, "Anyone of six could win."

Boston College: Perhaps the Eagles greatest asset is their depth, rumored to be the best in the conference. The Eagles are in first place now and boast the conference's leading scorer, sophomore sensation, John Bagley (19.3). At home and on the road B.C. has been a force to contend with all season. Gavitt adds, "the biggest surprise is B.C. I didn't expect them to be quite as high up."

Connecticut: The Huskies frontcourt has a definite height advantage to offset a smaller and inexperienced backcourt. Six feet eight inch forward Corny Thompson is the Big East's leading rebounder and is a perfect complement to center Chuck Aleksinas. Aleksinas measures six feet eleven inches and leads all with his field goal percentage of .648.

Georgetown: This was supposed to be a tough season for Georgetown after losing Craig Shelton (17.3) and John Duren (12.3) to graduation. But Coach John Thompson and his Hoyas have come up with the plays and the players to keep them up front. Eric "Sleepy" Floyd was named Big East Player of the week for his 25 points against the Wildcats. With Spriggs, Hancock and Frazier in the front court Georgetown could come out on top of the Big East again this year.

Saint John's: Predictably on top through the first two thirds of the season, the Redmen experienced the first chink in their armor when Curtis Redding quit the team two weeks ago. Since then the Redmen have lost a few important games but with players like McCoy and Russell are by no means finished.

Syracuse: Although the Carrier Dome is not as homey as the Field House, 26,000 fans screaming "Orange" is bound to give Syracuse a home court advantage. The Orangemen are definitely coming on at home, upsetting St. Johns and just going under to the Huskies in the last two weeks. The torrid shooting of Schayes (.614) and Headd (.554) cannot be discounted and Syracuse poses a definite threat.

Villanova: The Wildcats now rank fifth in the conference but stay tuned for changes. Villanova started off hot, just where they were at the end of their final Eastern Eight season. They won three Big East contests in a row and fell first to Saint John's after Alex Bradley's injury. Gavitt explained, "In December Villanova was playing the best of any team in the Big East conference but was obviously hampered by Bradley's injury and has done a good job to hold up and stay in."

Staying in the game with Bradley on the bench wasn't easy, but the Cats managed victories over Syracuse and Connecticut. Following these came big losses to St. Johns B.C. and Georgetown. Last Saturday's defeat at Providence College who were 1-8 in the conference is the kind of play Villanova must guard against to come out on top at Syracuse. As Bradley works on regaining his confidence the Cats should improve consistency and play aggressive ball. The rebounding defense is there. Sienkiewicz's shots from the outside and Granger's ball control make for winners. There may be no depth on the bench but the talent is on the court.

It would be a major surprise if the Providence College Friars came on to win, but their recent home court victories are what Big East play is all about. Gavitt points out, "The balance that exists and the great many competitive games are the mark of a good league."

The outcome of the 1981 Big East tournament is virtually unpredictable.

The Week in Sports

WOMEN'S TRACK

Sophomore Peggy Stewart set a new high jump record at the Delaware Open Invitational last Sunday with a jump of 5-10. The only other first place finish for the Cats came from freshman Pat Bradley in the 880. Suzanne Shea qualified for the AIAW Nationals with a second place finish in the mile.

MEN'S TRACK

Villanova broke five meet records and tied one other mark in their first appearance at the 7th annual Husker Invitational held in Lincoln, Nebraska. All setting meet records were Carlton Young (30.51 in the 300 yd.), Anthony Tufareillo (1:09.3 in the 600 yd.), Marcus O'Sullivan (2:11.02 in the 1,000 yd.), Sydney Maree (8:49.6 in the two mile) and the distance medley relay team, composed of John Borgese, Jim Adams, John Hunter and Sydney Maree (9:38.71). The Big East Championships will take place on Sunday in Syracuse, N.Y.

MEN'S SWIMMING

Led by diver Paul Clark, the Villanova men's swim team capped off their most successful season since 1975-76, beating Army 58-1/2-54-1/2. Clark was the only dual winner for the Cats scoring an outstanding 307.65 points, just 4.35 off the Army pool record. Trailing 51-55 entering the final event, the 400 yard relay team, composed of Bruce Baltera, Tom Pigeon, Bob Kownacki and Bob Baltera, edged the Cadets to earn the victory.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

The women's swim team upped their record to 8-3 crushing West Chester State 115-24. Capturing 14 of 15 firsts, Villanova was led by double-winners Jenni Franks, Alice Maben, Marcia Gregory and Kathleen Rooney. The Cats are now gearing for the EAIAW Championships which take place on March 6-7.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

The men hoopsters were upset by Providence last Saturday by a score of 82-70. Providence, who is currently last in the Big East, was led by freshman Otis Thorpe. The 6-9 center scored 20 points and had 10 rebounds. Leading the way for the Wildcats was junior forward Aaron Howard with 17 points and Alex Bradley with 14 points.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Last Thursday the women defeated Mount St. Mary's by a score of 65-56. Freshman Nancy Barnhardt led the way for the Cats scoring a game high 25 points and ripped down eight rebounds. Lisa Ortlip scored 14 points and Stephanie Vanderslice added 12. The Wildcats travel to Princeton for their final away game of the season before hosting Georgetown and Pennsylvania.

MEN'S ICE HOCKEY

The Icecats split a pair of games this past weekend beating West Chester State, 8-3, and losing to Penn State 7-4. Top scorers on the weekend were Paul LaFond, Frank Segreto and Jim Regald all with two goals. The Cats have a pair of home games this weekend. On Saturday, first place Delaware invades the Stadium and on Sunday, West Chester makes their final visit of the year.

Nova Topples Syracuse

Villanova's John Pinone outmuscles Syracuse's Dan Schayes and Tony Bruin in 88-78 victory. Charlie Guida Photo

By LARRY GOANOS

According to the Villanova University 1980-81 basketball media guide, the nickname "Wildcats" was chosen to convey the idea that "In victory or defeat the dogged determination to win is always present."

That determination shone through Tuesday night at the Palestra as the Cats battled to an 88-78 victory over the Orangemen of Syracuse University.

Sophomore guard Stewart Granger summed up the team's attitude when he explained, "Last year they beat us twice so we played extra hard to win this time." Granger's "extra hard" effort was translated into 24 points and five assists which spearheaded the Villanova attack. John Pinone was next in line for the Cats with 18 points.

Villanova came out sluggishly in the first half while Syracuse built a six point lead behind the powerful inside play of 6'11", 235 lbs. senior Dan Schayes. As the half progressed each team encountered trouble penetrating which resulted in a display of perimeter shooting. Granger and co-captain Tom Sinkiewicz traded long jumpers with Syracuse guards Marty Headd and Eddie Moss until the closing moments. The half ended on a sour note for the Cats when a Villanova two point lead dissolved as a result of four Schayes' free throws with less than a minute to go.

The opening of the second half saw Villanova become more assertive under the boards which boosted the Cats into the lead at 51-50. The Orangemen refused to roll over however, knotting the score at 70 with 4:04 left in the game. At this point Syracuse had visions of a victory in their heads but Alex Bradley saw things differently. The 6'6-1/2" senior co-captain took matters into his own hands by sinking six consecutive free throws in the final 3:30 of the game to ice the victory.

Bradley finished with 10 points on the evening to go along with his six rebounds. Coach Massimino was pleased by Bradley's domination of the closing minutes. "We sat him down because he had hurt his thumb," explained the coach, "But he came back in and just took over the game."

Schayes led the Orangemen with 24 points but he was rendered ineffective in the second half after collecting his fourth foul at the 11:00 mark.

Gillen Gets His Irish Up

Pete Gillen

By BETH WHITE

Head Basketball Coach Rollie Massimino calls his team the "Family." But last July one of the "Family" flew the coup; flew, in fact, to South Bend. But although the Wildcats' former assistant coach Pete Gillen now coaches for the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame, he is still part of Villanova's "Family."

"He helped to perpetuate the 'family' concept we have here," explains Massimino, "and he's carried it on. Pete and his wife would have the players over to dinner, and he always went above and beyond what he had to do."

Gillen has high praise for his former mentor, too. "Rollie is one of the best coaches in the country," believes the Fairfield University graduate. "I learned more from him (Rollie) in 2 years than in 30 years of playing basketball." "But," Gillen adds quickly, "I'm also learning from Digger."

Gillen joined the Notre Dame basketball staff after coaching at Villanova for 2 seasons and helping the Wildcats compile records of 15-13 and 23-8 and earn an NCAA tournament bid. Coach Massimino believes that he has "made a tremendous impact on Notre Dame," who currently stand at 19-4 this season, and take on Number One-ranked Virginia in a nationally televised game this Sunday.

And just as Gene Corrigan, (who was the University of Virginia's athletic director last year and moved to Notre Dame this year), will be in the "hot seat" in the Notre Dame-Virginia contest Sunday, so too was Pete Gillen in the "hot seat" when Villanova and Notre Dame met at the Palestra on January 6.

"It was very strange for me," stated Gillen after the game. "I was keeping track of fouls and time outs, and for the first few minutes I was confused. I kept marking the ones for Alex (Bradley) and Sink (Tom Sienkiewicz)." Gillen added that, "it was tough to coach against Stu (Stewart Granger) and Mike (Muilquin), since I had a big impact into recruiting them for Villanova. But now that I'm here (with the Irish), there's no question that I want Notre Dame to win." Which they did, polishing off the Wildcats, (who were without senior forward Alex Bradley), 94-65. Without Bradley, Gillen believes, "Villanova was battling against the odds. The game's over," sighs a relieved Gillen, "and I'm glad we won."

Boxing

Tonight's boxing card will feature 12 bouts, with boxers from Villanova, Lehigh, West Chester, Penn, Temple and St. Francis. Starting time is 8:00 and admission is $2.

Synchro Sweep

By STEPHEN LANSHE

Villanova's women's synchronized swimming team continued its undefeated season with an impressive victory last Saturday at the Albany Invitational Routine Meet held at State University of New York at Albany. The women finished first ahead of host Suny Albany.

Albany swam to an early lead by capturing top places in all three novice categories and amassed 41 points before Villanova had a chance to swim. Sophomore Victoria Wagner started Villanova off by taking first place in junior solo. Wagner, who is only in her second year of synchronized swimming, was in perfect form as she defeated a tough, more experienced field.

Synchro Duet performs. Ted Wolff Photo

The team continued to gain ground on Albany by finishing in the top three in both junior duets and junior trios. Sophomore Barbara Hageney and freshman Mary Jo Carroll finished second behind a duet from Geneseo.

Although both women are new to synchronized swimming, they were competing in the junior division instead of the novice division, where most first year swimmers compete.

In junior trios, Villanova again dominated both second and third places. Frosh Marilyn Buckley, Susan Roop and Priscilla Redner teamed up to capture second place with a score of 20.3.

Villanova's other trio consisting of Hageney, Carroll, and Eileen Pelletier swam equally as well finishing third, only three-tenths of a point behind their teammates.

In the senior division, Susan Giordano completely dominated in both the solo and duet routines. Giordano, who two weeks ago took first place in figures competition at Hunter College in New York, was again victorious taking first place in solo by more than four full points over the second place finisher.

In senior duet, Giordano teamed with Wagner to capture another first place for Villanova. Wagner, who was swimming out of her division, again rose to the occasion as she and Giordano edged the senior duet from Geneseo.

The final competition of the day was the senior team routines. Although Giordano is the only senior class swimmer, all eight women had to compete in the top division. Villanova needed to finish in the top three in order to capture the meet. The team swam a near perfect routine. Taking second place only five-tenths of a point behind the senior team from Geneseo.

The second place finish in team routines was all the women needed as they clinched team honors with a meet total of 69 points. They were followed by host Albany with 53, Geneseo was next with 43 points.

The women's next competition will be in their own invitational meet to be held at the Villanova Fieldhouse pool on Sunday, Feb. 22 at 1 p.m.

Karen Blaney of the Villanova women's basketball team has been named this week's Budweiser Athlete of the week. She has been named All District 11 Academic All-American. Blaney had the highest quality point average of all the candidates. A starter for four years, Blaney is the second Villanova woman ever to score 1,000 points and is second in all time scoring. Blaney's point total is 1091.

Cats Place Second in Big East

Villanova Receives NCAA Playoff Bid

By DAVE COSKEY

The Wildcats have a 9:40 tipoff tonight in Charlotte, N.C. where they will meet the Cougars of the University of Houston in the first round of the NCAA Eastern Regionals. Villanova completed their season last Saturday with a heartbreaking loss in triple overtime to Syracuse to take the runner-up spot in the Big East Conference. The Cats completed their first trek through the Big East and a schedule ranked twelfth in difficulty with a 19-10 mark.

A bright spot in Saturday's loss was the resurgence of senior forward Alex Bradley as a dominant force in the Villanova attack. Bradley, a potential preseason All-American, had his hopes shattered in December when he fractured a finger on his shooting hand while attempting to block a John Hegwood dunk.

Bradley's return to action has been slow and hard, yet he has been able to shake his time off and blend back into action. Following a super effort in Syracuse, Bradley commented, "after everything that has happened, it really feels good to be back 100%."

Bradley took control of the Wildcat offense scoring 17 of his 21 points in the critical second half and overtime periods of the Syracuse loss. "I just felt that it was time for me to get into the flow, the shot felt good, so I just went with it," added Bradley.

He'll have to do more of the same tonight as Rob Williams, the outstanding point guard leads his Cougars into the Charlotte Coliseum. Williams, a 6-foot 6-inch sophomore, is a third team All-American selection and is deadly at cracking an opposing zone. Williams is known for his "shake and fake" where he comes down court in a weaving motion before faking his defender and firing his deadly jumpshot. Houston Assistant Coach Terrance Kirkpatrick calls Williams, "the best kept secret in the country this year."

The Cougars sport a 21-8 record that includes wins against U.S.C., nationally ranked Lamar, and Southwest Conference rival Arkansas. Kirkpatrick expects tonight's contest to be a battle of the backcourts. "I've seen Granger play since he was in high school. I knew he'd be a great one, and I'm sure it'll be a fine match-up between Stu and Rob."

(Continued on page 5)

John Pinone disgusted with defeat as Syracuse fan cheers victory at Big East Tournament. Dave Coskey Photo

the Villanovan

Vol. 56, No. 20 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | March 13, 1981

Budget Draws Criticism

By BILL CLARK

The elected representatives of both the faculty and students at Villanova have expressed mixed feelings about Villanova proposed 1981-1982 budget.

"The talked-of 12.5% increase in faculty salaries is misleading," said Dr. Jeffrey Hahn, chairman of the Faculty Assembly. "What we are really talking about is a 9% increase for all faculty members. 1.5% is being reserved by Father Driscoll for equity and merit increases.

"Another 2% is left to the discretion of the various deans. I imagine it will vary from one dean to another," added Hahn.

"The bottom line is that we can't expect an increase which will match the inflation rate of 12.5%," said Hahn.

Hahn defended the Faculty Assembly's initial salary request of 13.5%. "We are the only group on the Senate which confronts the marketplace and has to support children. You can't appreciate the dilemma of the faculty if you don't have to go shopping for a family each week," said Hahn.

"There is an effort in the budget to meet the Senate's own priorities, namely that faculty salaries keep up with inflation. In that respect, the administration's actions are laudatory. Therefore, I am both pleased and disappointed with the budget," said Hahn.

Student Body President Henry Amoroso feels that the budget overlooks several key areas which are of importance to students. "I am unhappy with the overall budget because I do not feel it serves the needs of the students.

"Financial aid is only going up 14% next year, when we definitely need more money than that," said Amoroso. "Villanova claims that it wants to increase its minority population, but without more financial aid, it isn't going to do it."

In a past Villanovan interview, Vincent Femia, director of financial aid, has claimed that the financial aid budget must rise by 25% to keep up with the student need.

"I am also concerned with academics. We not only need good teachers, but also the proper equipment. It is not fair that we must pay a tuition increase this high and have no provisions for increases in academic equipment," said Amoroso.

"Without a guarantee of more money for academic equipment, I am not willing to support the proposed tuition increases," added Amoroso.

Both Hahn and Amoroso criticized the budget process as a whole. They both felt that faculty and student input is insufficient in the process.

"The budget process is a big charade. We don't see a line by line budget," said Hahn. "We just get a handful of general figures. They tell us nothing about how the funds are allocated."

"To ask us to speak with an informed voice on the budget is ludicrous," added Hahn.

Hahn also felt that the present budget process does not leave much room for Senate participation.

"There is not enough input on the actual budget process from the Senate," said Amoroso. "I was unhappy when the Board of Trustees intervened. Much work was done on planning the budget and developing the priorities."

Dr. Jeffrey Hahn Jeff Page Photo

Changes in Procedure Approved by Senate

By BOB HERMAN

A resolution proposed by the Student Caucus recommending that the administration change its procedure in organizing the budget was approved by the University Senate at its February 20 meeting.

The resolution said, "The University Senate highly recommends that the administration reorganize their budgetary procedure so as to facilitate the availability of a completed budget for senatorial deliberation in November and Board of Trustee action in December."

After the meeting, Student Finance and Finance Senator Jon Cesari said, "There is not enough time for a student to seek representatives in view of the fact that proposed tuition increases are not finalized until such a late date."

At the Senate's next meeting March 20, they will discuss the proposed budget increases by the Board of Trustees. Should the University Senate defeat the Board's proposed increases then the Board of Trustees must come up with a new budget proposal when they meet in April.

If the proposed budget figures are approved it will affect the students in the following way; an increase of 12 per cent for arts and commerce and finance students, science, engineering and nursing students will have a 14 per cent increase and law students a 16 per cent increase.

The proposed budget would also allow for an additional 1.5 per cent increase on top of the already proposed 11 percent increase for faculty and staff salaries. This proposed salary increase is part of a three-year plan to be supervised by the president to help Villanova become more competitive with other schools.

Also during the meeting University Senate Chairman Warren O. Richardson reported on two letters sent to him by Father President Driscoll, D.S.A.

The first letter stated that the Board of Trustees did not approve the resolution that the student body president be allowed to address the Board at its spring meeting.

In the second letter, Driscoll said that he would be happy to honor the request by Richardson to set up a joint meeting between the Executive Committees of the Senate and Board of Trustees.

Deegan President at Merrimack

By BILL CLARK

The Merrimack College Board of Trustees has chosen Rev. John E. Deegan as Merrimack's fourth president. Deegan is presently the vice president for student life at Villanova.

Deegan was recommended to the Board by a presidential search committee. "Names were submitted to the committee, and they narrowed it down to four candidates," said Deegan. "We were then required to respond to various questions."

Deegan is also a member of the Board of Trustees at Merrimack. He will assume office on June 1, 1981.

Father President Driscoll will appoint Deegan's replacement in the near future. "I hope to have an input on his decision," said Deegan.

Reverend John Deegan, O.S.A. Jeff Page Photo

"I have mixed feelings about leaving," continued Deegan. "I didn't aspire to the presidency, but being chosen for an important job is very gratifying."

Deegan said there are several items which need to be completed before his departure. "We have to finish the search for a dean of students and put the final touches on the reorganization of the student life area," said Deegan.

Merrimack College, located in North Andover, Mass., is run by the Augustinian Order and is a member of the Eastern Province along with Villanova and Biscayne College. "The charter set-up is very similar to that of Villanova," said Deegan.

"I know the basics of the college and I know its status. Even though the college has only 4,000 students, it has the same problems as Villanova. But, it seems to be doing fairly well, and there are plenty of good signs," said Deegan.

A native of Hoosick Falls, N.Y., Deegan is 45 years old. He graduated from Villanova University with a bachelor of arts degree in 1967 and he holds masters degrees in modern European history and secondary school administration, both from Villanova.

In 1971, Deegan received his doctorate in student personnel administration in higher education from American University in Washington, D.C.

Job Available

Finance Manager for the Villanova Union; responsible for all cash flow, income and disbursements. Approximately 15 to 20 hours per week during the academic year. For full job description and application see Lucyna Gorski, Program Director, Villanova Union Office, Connelly Center, 645-7280. Filing deadline is Wednesday, March 18.

Water Resources Lecture

The Villanova Geographical Society announces the following presentation in its lecture series:

Dr. Devraj Sharma, Manager, Advanced Technology Center, Dames and Moore, Denver, Colorado.

"Water Resource Consideration in Mineral Development in the Western United States."

Thursday, March 19, 7:30 p.m., Room 305 Tolentine.

Nursing Senate Elections

Elections for the Undergraduate Nursing Senate Officers will be held on Thursday, March 19, between 11:30 and 1:30 outside the College of Nursing Office. Nomination forms must be handed into the College of Nursing Office by Friday, March 13.

Women's Lacrosse

Women's lacrosse practice has begun. Experience is not required, and all interested players should report for daily practice at 4 p.m. at St. Mary's field.

Tutors Needed

A meeting will be held in Corr Hall, Room 106, on Thursday, March 19, at 1 p.m. for all students interested in becoming tutors for the remainder of the semester. This meeting will outline the details regarding the tutoring services we would like to offer.

Any student who feels qualified to be a tutor is asked to call the Counseling Center (645-4050) and give your name to the secretary and the subject you would like to tutor before the day of the meeting.

You can provide a significant service to your fellow students.

Blood Drive

Sign up now for Alpha Phi Omega's Blood Drive. Registration tables will be in Dougherty Hall and the Connelly Center March 16-20.

Engineering Nursing Dance

The Sixth Annual Engineering Nursing Semiformal Dance will be held on March 20 at the Mansion House from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Hors d'oeuvres, cash bar. Music by the Crystals. Tickets available at Connelly Center Ticket Office. $12 per couple, $6.50 single.

Ride Needed

Wanted! Ride from Gulph Mills to Villanova for a visually impaired student. Contact Social Action Office 645-4075 (Rm. 121 Tolentine) or call Cheryl Bruce at 527-0588.

Work Study

College Work Study has been extended to May 10, 1981, instead of the prior date of April 30. Limited additional funding is available. If interested, come by the Financial Aid office to be considered.

College Republicans

There will be a meeting of the College Republican Club on Monday evening, the 16th, at 6 p.m., in Bartley Room 110. Nominations for officers will be held, and those wishing to attend the state convention on March 22 should attend. As usual, all interested students are invited to attend.

International Trade

On Wednesday afternoon, March 18, there will be an informal discussion held at 3 p.m. in Bartley Rm. 12 among seniors involved in or seriously interested in the international trade field. For information contact Joe Quinn in 32, Austin.

Trip to Wash., D.C.

There will be a meeting on Tuesday, March 17, at 12:45, in Bartley 109, for all those interested in going on a day trip to D.C. It will cost $8, plus lunch. Students may also sign up and drop their money in the Political Science Office. The trip will be Wednesday, March 25.

Used Book Sale

Students who did not pick up their money from the used textbook sale may now get it in the Student Activities Office, 2nd floor Dougherty.

Balloon Day

Balloon Day T-Shirt Design Contest. Submit design to the Campus Ministry by Friday, March 20.

Communication Arts Society

The Communication Arts Society invites all new and old members to attend a very important meeting this Monday, March 16, at 6:30 p.m. in the Haverford Room of the Connelly Center. Our guest speaker will be Joan C. Barnish, a Villanova 1979 graduate, who is now an anchorperson for a local channel in Scranton, Pa.

The Spring Social, upcoming fund raisers and the latest update on tee shirts will be discussed.

If you are not already a member of the Soceity, please come and check us out . . . "Get the message?".

Medical Lecture

Help/Philadelphia will again sponsor a special program open to anyone who would like to learn more about Herpes, the sexually transmitted virus that has created a widespread health problem in this country. The meeting will be held on Wed., March 25, at 7:30 p.m., in the Surgical Seminar Room, Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, 34th and Spruce Streets, Phila. (entrance through the Silverstein Pavillion no 34th Street). A $2.00 donation is requested at the door.

Writing Workshop

Dr. Ray Heitzmann, Education Department, Villanova University, will again offer his Writing for Publication Workshop at Springside School located in Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, on April 4. The sessions, designed for novice authors, provides information for the beginning writer. Interested persons may contact Dr. Heitzmann for further information or register by contacting Ms. Agatha Crozier, Headmistress, Springside School, Willow Grove and Cherokee Sts., Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa. 19118. Her telephone number is CH 7-7200.

APO

There will be a meeting for all brothers on Monday, the 16th, in Jeb Barry 202 at 7:30. The first vote will be taken on our new pledges, and a special report will be made on the sectional conference held last momth.

Mid Terms

Did you perform the way you wanted to on your mid-term exams? Were you able to remember all the information you had crammed in the night before? Did you panic because there wasn't enough time? Don't let this happen to you on your finals. Come to the Counseling Center in 106 Corr Hall for a free, confidential visit and improve your test taking!

Internships

V.U. announces the Internship and Community Involvement Programs in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. General Meeting for all interested students on Tuesday, March 17, from 12 Noon to 2 p.m., in the Bryn Mawr Room of the Connelly Center. This program offers experiential learning plus academic credit. For directory and information contact Dr. Dorley, 102 Vasey.

50 Days Party

On Friday, March 20, the Blue Key Society will sponsor the 50 Days Party at the Covered Wagon Inn. Tickets will be on sale for seniors only Monday thru Wednesday, at which time seniors may purchase only one ticket per I.D. An additional ticket for guests may be picked up on Thursday or Friday. Tickets will be on sale at the Connelly Center ticket center. Proof of age will be required at the door, and senior ID is needed for ticket purchase.

Shamrock Sale

PSE, Villanova's marketing society, will be selling shamrock plants in Dougherty and Bartley Halls on Monday, March 16 and Tuesday, March 17 from 11 to 1:30 p.m.

A shamrock is a great way to celebrate St. Patty's Day so come on over and buy a few for yourself or your friends.

St. Pat's Carnation

Have a green carnation delivered by a lucky leprechaun on St. Patty's Day. Place your orders in the Connelly Center or Dougherty; March 10, 11, 12, 13, 16. Cost: $1, 25 cents delivery and 25 cents anonymous.

Reagan Administration Evaluated

KATHY SCANLON

Since his inauguration January 1981, President Ronald Reagan so far managed to maintain popularity that got him elect- It is still too soon, however, to an accurate evaluation of his rformance.

"The test for Reagan, as far as mestic affairs are concerned, ll be the acceptance or rejection his 1982 budget," stated Martin nley of Villanova's political ience department. "Reagan's dget is due to be submitted to ngress in August. His priorities based more on public projects an private. For example, the ount of government student ans has been cut. Reagan feels t if the student truly needs a loan, he can obtain it privately through a bank," said Manley.

"Despite the threat to special interest groups these budget cuts present, Reagan's popularity did not decrease," remarked Dr. Justin Green, also of the political science department. "This is either because the full effect of these cuts has not been realized, or these groups believe that Congress will alter the proposed cuts so that other groups are affected," continued Green.

"The supreme test for Reagan in matters of foreign policy will be his handling of the crisis in El Salvador," said Manley.

"Reagan must decide if intervention in this situation is a wise move. He is taking a gamble. Reagan also has a very strong anti-Soviet policy," Green commented.

"Reagan's whole foreign policy is radically different from Carter's," added Manley. "Carter felt that it was in the interest of the United States to take the part of the humanitarian; caring for the Third World, etc. Reagan feels that the humanitarian role interferes with vital United States interests."

"Reagan must gain the support of Congress to succeed in carrying out his future policies. It is possible that if Congress feels the public is with Reagan, they will be supportive as well," stated Green. "However, it is difficult to read public opinion. Public support is high for Reagan himself but low for his specific proposals. The only policy that has the majority of support is the cut in the Food Stamps program."

"It appears that during the Reagan administration there will be a drastic redirection of government "When F.D.R. took over during the Depression of the 1930's he directed government into everything. Reagan is attempting to solve our economic problems by leading government out of the picture," commented Manley.

DON'T MISS
YOUR CHANCE!!!!
PICK UP YOUR ORIENTATION COUNSELOR APPLICATION
TODAY!!!!

Due:
Tues., March 17
by 5:00 pm
Student Activities
Office
214 Dougherty Hall

Senator to Speak at Honors Event

By RICHARD DISTEFANO

Frank Church, former United States Senator from Idaho and past chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will be the keynote speaker during this year's Honors Junior Week, the theme of which is "Latin America: U.S. Policy in a Changing World."

Church is slated to discuss changes in "multinational and U.S. policies concerning Latin America — their effect and their future prospects," according to a schedule of speakers prepared by Molly Dougherty, publicity chairman of Honors Junior Week.

Senator Church will speak March 24 at 8 p.m. in the Villanova Center at the Connelly Center. A one dollar donation will be requested for this evening only.

A background for this Latin America symposium will be provided by Phillip and Angela Berryman of the American Friends Service Committee. The Berrymans will analyze their firsthand knowledge of Latin America on March 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the Connelly Cinema.

The subjects of liberation theology and the place of the Roman Catholic Church in Latin America will be treated by Father Daniel Driscoll, a Maryknoll missionary, on March 19, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 110 of Bartley Hall.

A corporate view of Latin American economies will be presented on March 20 at 7:30 p.m. in Bartley 100 by Blake Friscia of the Latin America division of the Chase Manhattan Bank.

C. Gerald Walsh, assistant professor from the Economics Department will outline the present economic and political situation in Latin America. His address will take place on March 23, at 7:30 p.m. in the Connelly Cinema.

This is the third year for Honors Junior Week. It originated in 1978 with a discussion on Julian Jaynes' work, The Origin of Consciousness and the Breakdown of the Bicameral Mind. After a one year hiatus, talks on "The Me Culture" were conducted last spring.

According to Dr. John A. Doody, director of the Honors Program, Honors Junior Week gives Villanova third year students in the Honors Program a chance to organize for themselves and for the student body a series of lectures on a current, significant subject.

This year the Organizational Chairman of Honors Junior Week is Mitch Moetell, and the Academic Chairman is Owen Evans.

Dr. John Doody Jeff Page Photo

Finals Changed

The final examinations scheduled for Friday, May 8, will be moved up to Friday, May 1 (the second reading day).

The date was moved in order to make it possible for graduating seniors to receive their diplomas the day of graduation.

London Market
in Villanova on Lancaster Ave. LA 5-5520

FRESH PRODUCE
DAIRY PRODUCTS
CHEESE & CRACKERS

FANCY GROCERY NEEDS

BRING THIS COUPON
WITH A VILLANOVA ID AND GET A
10% DISCOUNT
FOR TOTAL PURCHASE.

ONE COUPON PER PURCHASE

Attention Villanovans
It's CENTRAL PARK
MU 8-5100
GRAND LARCENY
MONDAY NIGHTS: Drinks Half Price
Appearing Monday Night:
PATCHWORK

ARMY-NAVY STORE
BOOTS! BLANKETS! BAGS! TENTS! PACKS!
ALL YOUR CAMPING NEEDS RIGHT HERE!
IN ARDMORE ARMY & NAVY 24 W. Lancaster Ave.
Near Ardmore Movie Store 642-9435
Opposite State
IN PAOLI ARMY & NAVY 10 W. Lancaster Ave.
Diagonally Opposite P.R.R. Station 644-9871
IN JENKINTOWN ARMY & NAVY 705 Greenwood Ave.
On Boro Parking Lot 884-9441
CHARGE! Most Major Credit Cards Honored
IN WAYNE ARMY & NAVY
156 E. LANCASTER 293-9832

To Rard,
We really enjoyed burning the midnight oil with yah, but next time bring pajamas and a pillow! Signed — "Itchy nose" and Frosty

START OFF ON THE RIGHT TRACK
ROAST SIRLOIN OF BEEF OR TENDERLOIN STEAK DINNER
$7.95
Including: Salad Buffet, Vegetable and Beverage.
A cozy relaxed atmosphere featuring delicious ribs, steaks and seafood.
Post time: 13th and Sat. 14th of March 5:30 - 9:00 P.M.
PROUD FILLY
339 East Lancaster Avenue
Wynnewood, Pennsylvania 19096
Reservations Accepted 649-1560

Dear Foxy Long Islander,
A fresh engineer should withdraw from gen chemistry, especially w it's raining out. Stop by I'll throw some sunshine the subject!
Love, Spide

Dear A.B., Annie, Boo, C Carol, Carrie, Col, Co Cupid, Denise, Ellen, F Gailmarie, Fish, Fa Gailmarie, Ginny, Te Jess, Karen, Kelley, Kath Lusty Leprechaun, Ly Mary, Mag, Mickey, Mo Nancy, Map, Patty, Paul, P Poz, Renee, Resa, Rich, R Shorty, Skip, Sue, Tim, T Vez, Vicky, Walt and the of the wee people . . . so one still cares! Happy Patrick's Day!
B.M. Bla

Daylesford Abbey
I am considering a religious voca tion. Please send me information about the Norbertine way of Life.
Name
Address
City/State/Zip
Telephone (___)
Mail to:
Fr. Francis Dorff, O.Praem.
Daylesford Abbey
220 South Valley Road
Paoli, Pennsylvania 19301
OR Call: (215) 647-2530

Connelly Center to Celebrate

by MARGE BATTISTELLI

The Connelly Center will cele rate its first anniversary Wed nesday, March 18. The day will be marked by various activities in different parts of the center, ex hibits and food specials.

Marc Tuchman, director of the center, said that the overall goal of the anniversary celebration is to provide light entertainment that will draw students to the Center and involve them in the spirit of the occasion.

Activities will include chess tournaments, musical entertain ment, jugglers, and art exhibits. There will also be food specials and discounts. Balloons, buttons, popcorn and the billiard and video games will be free on that day. Also, there will be a gingerbread model of the Connelly Center sur rounded by a six by six foot layer cake on display from which visitors will be given free slices all day.

According to Tuchman, all of the festivities planned for the day are geared toward commemorating the first successful year of the Connelly Center. "I think the Center has a lot of things going for it," he explained. "I think that it is ideally located. It's accessibility to the majority of the students is very high. It's a combination of being in the right place and providing the right kind of atmosphere and the right kind of programs that have made us successful."

Mark Tuchman, director of Connelly Center. Jeff Page Photo

Tuchman sees no major changes for the Center, but predicts an increase in the number of meetings and activities that go on in the center. "I see the period of the next few months as refining the operation and continuing the growth of the use of the center by campus and business groups."

Bring A Friend To Dinner, Lunch, Brunch, Drinks!
GREENHOUSE RESTAURANT
5 MINUTES FROM VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
687-2801 Belrose Lane & King of Prussia Rd. Radnor, PA
BRING THIS AD AND V.U. I.D. FOR A 10% DISCOUNT

Investments Considered

LEONARD J, LaBARTH

Conservative financial planning and the use of endowment funds are being used to keep tuition costs at Villanova down, according to Rev. George F. Burnell, O.S.A., vice-president for financial affairs.

A general rule regarding endowments — gifts from outside sources is that "no more than five percent of endowments should be used for anything other than capital improvements," said Burnell. "It should go into the plant fund." Villanova uses more than five percent because the need is there.

Endowment funds are subject to the restriction of gift instruments requiring in perpetuity that the principal be invested and only the income be used. "The long term investments grow slowly," Burnell noted. "Most of the monies can't be touched. It is the interest that is used for loans and scholarships."

A non-profit organization, the university has a number of investments both short term and long term. The short term investments, those analyzed and subject to transferral daily, are susceptible to the greatest fluctuation, depending upon interest rates.

"Every morning the interest rates at banks are checked to see which is the most advantageous that day," explained Burnell. "The most desirable investment, of course, is one at the best rates for the shortest period possible. The money has to be liquid so we can get it when we need it."

Short term investments are helped by the inflation rate as the interest rates go up. But at the same time inflation is up and the market values actually depreciate.

In an inflationary period, the growth of long term investments is also affected. "People won't buy stocks during a time of inflation," Burnell said. "The market is down. All institutions invest in a 'safe' balance of fixed rate bonds and stocks that should only appreciate."

While not divulging specific corporations in which Villanova has invested, Burnell stated that all are "real solid investments. The university does not have any large amount of shares in any one company." Handling long term investments for Villanova are two firms: T. Rowe Price, and Wright Investment Co. Monthly, quarterly and annual reports are distributed to the Investment Board of Trustees which meets periodically.

In the Villanova University Triennial Report, 1978-80, a summary of investments reports that total net gains for the period ended May 31, 1980, was $1,175,518. The realized net gains, monies actually available, totalled $873,909. The total income earned on investments, exclusive of realized gains, amounted to $588,786.

"With long term investments, the returns are unrealized," explained Burnell. "On paper, a share bought at $10 may go up to $15 in two months. The increase is there but without being sold, is unrealized.

Tournament

(Continued from page 1)

Kirkpatrick also feels his pressing zone will have to zero in on sharpshooter Tom Sienkiewicz. "He's a great pure shooter and we'll have to keep a close eye on him because he can kill you from outside."

Neither team has been able to look past tonight's contest, but, third ranked Virginia awaits tonight's survivor for Sunday's televised contest. Virginia is led by sophomore All-American Ralph Sampson (7'-4") who this week was named the collegiate player of the year. Virginia has another threat in forward guard Jeff Lamp. Lamp, "Mr. Clutch" controls Virginia's floor game and handles the ball whenever the game is on the line.

The slight edge the Wildcats might hold entering this tourney will be resistance they must have developed playing in front of the partisan Carrier Dome fans.

connelly center
BIG FIRST ANNIVERSARY EXTRAVAGANZA

SPECIALS ALL WEEK:

★ Ham and Italian Hoagies $1.49
20% off All Bulk Candy at information desk
All Pizza Slices 40¢
Whole Pizzas $2.49
25% off all common sales items, except magazines, single dip ice cream cones 40¢, double 70¢, Free Sprinkles

1st ANNIVERSARY SPECIAL - ONLY MARCH 18th

★ Penny Sale in Campus Confection: Buy one, get 2nd one for 1¢
Buy one slice of Pizza, get one free.
Free cake and popcorn at Information Desk all day.

ATTENTION:

The 1981 ELECTION PROCESS for Student Representatives will begin with a meeting on Monday, March 16, 1981 in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall at 8:00 pm.

Any person wishing to declare his/her name in nomination for the following offices should attend this meeting:

— STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT
— C&F SENATORS
— ARTS SENATORS
— SCIENCE SENATOR
— ENGINEERING SENATOR
— NURSING SENATOR
— GRADUATE SENATOR
— UNIVERSITY COLLEGE SENATOR
— LAW SCHOOL SENATOR
— ACADEMIC POLICY COMMITTEE
— RANK AND TENURE COMMITTEE

STUDENT GOVERNMENT
204 DOUGHERTY HALL

Cronkite Retires

The Era of Trust is Not Over

On Friday, March 6, 1981, an era ended or so "they" say. Walter Cronkite, anchorman of The CBS Evening News, retired on that evening.

"I'll be away on assignment, and Dan Rather will be sitting in here for the next few years. Good-night," Cronkite said concluding his 19-year reign as a nightly visitor in many American homes.

However, Cronkite does not intend to leave the media, "I'm not even going away. I'll be back from time to time with special news reports and documentaries, and beginning in June every week, with our science program, Universe."

Cronkite's media career is, thus, far from finished. Yet, they, the other media people, are treating his retirement from nightly news as though a severe loss has been incurred, the end of an era, according to many reports.

They are partially wrong. Cronkite has a reputation, untarnished, that exudes trust. The country, his listeners, believe him, this "most trusted man in America."

Cronkite built trust throughout his career through his unabashed honesty. When John F. Kennedy was assassinated, Cronkite wept on the air, just as many viewers wept at home.

The famed newscaster was not the first to criticize the war in Vietnam, but, as he watched, the war progressed to limits that he could not abide. The violation of the holiday truce, the Vietcong Tet offensive, prompted him to go to Vietnam, film a documentary and attack the war. The horror of the war had a pronounced public impact as reported by Cronkite.

Former President Lyndon B. Johnson realized the importance of newscaster's criticism of the war. "If I've lost Cronkite, I've lost Mi America," Johnson had said.

Cronkite is a seasoned newsman who began his journalistic caree the newspapers before going to the airwaves. He built his reputation responsible media representative; he gained trust.

Others in the media can gain the dignity and trust that Cronkit tained simply by following his lead. His honesty in reporting the news example to emulate. Media people are wrong in assuming an era is ov they assume that era to be comprised of trust. They, too, can gain nurture public faith by responsible reporting and analysis.

The media is unfortunately partially correct in their designatio the end of an era, if that era was one of trust. The electronic media, in ticular, has a current atmosphere not conducive to public trust.

Television currently is attracting, " 'pretty people', who want to the star role," Cronkite said in a UPI interview. "They're going thr 'communications schools' and learning Trench Coat I, Trench Co and Makeup I, Makeup II . . . I don't think that they've the guts or drive to be newspeople," he continued.

The end result is that the era of trust in journalism is not over, n those who care to be responsible. Cronkite was one newscaster showed that the words "trust" and "reporter" could go hand-in-hand. T concept does not have to end with Cronkite's retirement. Besides, as U Walter says, he hasn't really left, "Old anchormen don't fade away — just keep coming back for more."

letters

Housing Lottery

Dear Editor,

Your February 20 article "Housing Shortage Poses Problem" stated that the lottery has proved to be the most equitable way of adjusting the shortage. This is disproved by the opening sentence which read, "All students wishing to remain in on-campus housing next year must participate in the housing lottery. . ." The administration makes no attempt to accomodate students who never made it on in the first place.

Although the Deans of Men and Women apparently consider on-campus housing important for newer students — this evidenced by the fact that they guarantee housing in 81-82 for freshman presently on-campus — they never give transfer students or freshmen who were denied housing from the start a chance to experience dormitory life. A far more equitable system would be a lottery that gave all students a chance to get on campus. That way, even if a student was thrown off one year, he would have a chance to get on the next. Instead of a few students carrying the burden three or four years, many could share it for one year each.

If the Deans really can't think of a more equitable system than the present one, it can only suggest to me that they're not trying very hard.

Sincerely,
Jacqueline Shortell
Class of 83

Transportation Problem

To the Editor:

Re: "Transportation Presents Problem" (Villanovan, Feb. 20, 1981)

According to the article a Villanova art student was denied by a van driver entrance into the van, even though there was enough room. Fr. Rice said, "Security is for ladies only, and you can quote me." Fr. Deegan had understood from the start that the vans were for everyone. Cunnane said males could ride in the vans, and then said, "I don't care what Father Deegan says, you're (the art student) not riding the vans. Later Fr. Deegan told the student the problem was solved, but the student was denied yet another time from the same driver he encountered at the start of this incident.

I can't understand how these members of Villanova's administration and Security Department don't understand the problem and don't agree mutually on a final decision.

However, when I receive that first request from the Alumni Office following graduation, Rice's and Cunnane's arrogant statements towards the Villanova student will come to mind and I'll question myself whether or not to donate my money to an organization related to such people. Thanks to Rice and Cunnane, I probably will not. Unfortunately for the Alumni Office, they will feel the effect.

Jerry Ventresca, '81

Seton Hall Off

Hi Boys and Girls,

We want to congratulate Rollie M mino, his staff and your university fo successful basketball season. You had injuries and some depth problems, bu the competent people you have in c you've managed very well.

But anyway, why I'm writing y because maybe we can work out together. You see, we have a problem our coach. He won't recruit (how d think you got Alex, Tom, and Aaron our backyard?) Ask Rollie; it was taking candy from a baby.

Getting back to the point, our coach to golf, and he'll never be mistaken workaholic. Your area is known to some excellent golf courses, and eve knows that Rollie is from our area.

How this sound? You send us l we'll give you ours, build you a new House, throw in a year's supply of midt's, Lonnie Anderson look alikes the guys, Erik Estrada's for all the l What do you think. Write soon and know, or the deal goes to Connecti

Dave Serritell
Boland Hall res
Seton Hall Univ

the Villanovan

BOARD OF EDITORS

Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey
Sharon Winters
News, Mary Anne Granger
Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone
Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki
Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia
Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida
Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese
Advertising, Dawn Miller

Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

News: Carol Alkons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Lavelle, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli.

Features: Mary Anne Bilz, Re Crossan, Deidre Flanagan, Susan French, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Edward Lis, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, Catherine Murphy, John Pace, Betty Rutkowski, Cathy Shiels, Kate McDonald.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Radan, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Brehm, Fred Pescatore, Mark Kelly, Echelmeier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPasca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmetag.

Sports: William Beck, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Dave Glickman, Larry Goenos, Michael Healy, Michael Jacoba, Jeff Lerner, Kathy Maher, Roy Mita, Al Oxenreiter, Peter Ryan, Jerry Ventresca, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Cooley.

Minorities Responses

To the Editor:

Speaking as a member of the 1.6%, I would like to express my concern for Rev. Harry Erdlen's viewpoint of the black student population at Villanova. After reading the article "Minority Statistics Viewed" presented in the Villanovan on Feb. 20, I was appalled to think that someone in such an important administrative position as Admission's director could be so blase about the current 1.6% black population. He obviously doesn't give a damn and as long as that attitude persists black students will always be few in number.

It is not easy for black students at Villanova to survive. We constantly suffer from the effects of isolation and institutional racism. However, Villanova does have a good point — the means for providing a good education which we so desperately want and need to make it in an abstract, mostly-white universe. It is for this reason alone that many black students even bother to stick out these long and hard four years.

But the path to graduation is made even harder by a Admission's director who states "What would be the point of it?" when asked if attempts were being made to alter the situation. The point, Rev. Erdlen, is that the black population needs to be increased as does our recognition. We want to be looked upon as a vital and necessary part of Villanova University. The word "University" in ancient times meant a place of learning where all kinds of people joined together in an concerted effort to learn and share ideas. Such is not the case at Villanova and to call it a university would be a grave injustice to those universities which continually strive for that unity that is necessary for learning.

I would like to thank the teachers, counselors, and other students who share my enthusiasm in making the black and other minority populations increase. Their concern is greatly appreciated, because without them Villanova would, in the eyes of the minorities, be an even sadder place.

Karen M. Dennis

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the article in the Villanovan dated February 20, 1981, concerning the status of minorities at Villanova University.

I'm neither surprised nor amazed to learn that the racist attitudes that were present during my years at Villanova from 1972 to 1976, are still alive and kicking! None of the statistics quoted in the article are of any surprise. As a matter of fact, I would be surprised to find out if the black enrollment on campus is actually 1.6 percent of the total population.

Rev. Erdlen's absolutely ridiculous and outdated statements regarding Villanova's location as a reason why there is not a higher percentage of blacks enrolled at Villanova University is nonsense! To state that it is a problem for black students to reach campus is a fallacy. Over half of the student population are commuters from the Philadelphia area. Is Rev. Erdlen trying to say that the same public transportation that brings white students to campus will not bring black students to campus? Or maybe he believes that black students do not have the intelligence to find their way from the "ghetto" to the "lily-white" campus of Villanova University.

Villanova has never shown any concern about recruiting and retaining blacks and other minorities. The only time effort is shown by the University to recruit blacks is when the University has something to gain from the presence of blacks on campus (e.g. black athletes).

The racist attitudes of the administration of Villanova University is not only seen by the small numbers of students (undergraduate, graduate and especially the Law School), but it is apparent in the hiring practices of the teaching staff and administrators. There are less than six black instructors at Villanova and even less in the administration level. There is not one black appointed on the Board of Trustees.

Dr. James Cleary stated that Villanova is trying to make an effort to bridge the so-called gap between Villanova and the inner city community. This statement is absolutely a falsehood. There is no way to bridge a gap when really no gap exists except in the minds of Villanova administrators who need to justify their racist attitudes. Dr. Cleary would lead you to believe that all black people live in the inner city of Philadelphia. If this is so, Dr. Cleary better inform the U.S. Census Bureau about these findings. I'm sure they would be very interested in how he compiled his datas!

Villanova needs to stop trying to justify the low percentage of blacks and other minorities on campus. If they were truly interested in increasing the number of blacks on campus, no justification would be necessary.

Norma Dene Murphy
Class of 1976

Taylor Review

To the Editor:

We of the Villanova Union wish to express our disgust with the erratic and immature journalistic attempt by Steven Combs in the February 20, 1981 issue ("Taylor Plays to a Sell-Out Crowd"). We of course acknowledge that Combs is entitled to his opinion, and since he felt that Taylor lacked stage presence and that the pace was "plodding," we would expect him to convey that displeasure. How he can call a show that delighted 3500 cheering fans a raging bore is to us a mystery. Just the same, we can imagine Combs' disappointment when he went to the Grateful Dead concert that night and instead James Taylor appeared on the stage! However, if he cannot appreciate the broad spectrum of contemporary entertainment, he certainly has no place in the world of journalistic criticism.

To any regular readers of the Villanovan, Combs' attempts to emulate Hunter Thompson have become obvious, but even this dubious aspiration is no excuse for such inane similies as "as deathly bland as burial in vanilla yogurt" or "the same (as) large groups of middle-class white Republicans wandering through Disneyland." Combs must have been saving these lines for quite come time just waiting for any excuse to put them into print. If his work were not so pathetic, it would be most laughable.

Mixed with his strange combination of sesquipedalianarisms and outdated colloquialisms, Combs unfortunately has many statements that are simply inaccurate, unfair, and stupid. The sound in the admittably unsuitable Fieldhouse was never better than it was for James Taylor. Even those sitting in the far side of the upper deck could hear the music fairly well. To say that the Union "finally (drew) a crowd for one of their events" is way off the mark. In fact, our last concert, Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, was a huge success (Considering the jubilant dancing in the aisles at that show, Combs himself might have been pleased — despite the lack of any fiddles in the band.). The other areas of the Union, such as Social Functions' dinner dances, Visual Arts' films, and University II's courses, to name but a few, are proud to serve a large portion of the Villanova community as well. The same issue of The Villanovan that contains Combs' article also holds a review of the Mahumba band. Although the paper neglected to mention that the Union also sponsored that show, it gave a very favorable review of yet another of our successful events. Perhaps Combs would realize this if he attended some events to which he did not receive a complimentary ticket.

We are sorry Combs so sorely missed "the latest violence and burning rage of Aerosmith or the Clash," but it was ludicrous for him to have been anticipating such. Even he wonders what any of his twisted thoughts have to do with James Taylor. If he considers Taylor's music to be "coffeehouse mush," then he should never have reviewed it from a 'Deadhead — or Marrison — viewpoint, if at all.

What Combs knows about the Villanova Union's break-even record is negligible, and it is most certainly irrelevant to the review of the performance. The Union is a non-profit organization. Our objective is to serve the university by enriching it co-curricularly. We believe that the opinions expressed by Combs are not shared by the community.

This type of effort has come to be expected from Steven Combe, but we are disheartened to see that the editors of the Villanovan have allowed such an irresponsible and poorly-written piece to appear in their usually fine publication. It is especially regrettable that they printed it under the guise of a review of a James Taylor concert. The Villanova Union is certain that this is a regrettable circumstance which will not recur, and we are sure it will not harm the relationship our two organizations have developed over the years.

Sincerely,
The Executive Board of the Villanova Union

Dear Editor:

The review of the James Taylor concert in the February 20 issue of the Villanovan was undoubtedly one of the shabbiest pieces of "journalism" I have ever read. Mr. Combs seemed content to gaze around the audience and review them instead of the performance. By spending so much time watching the audience, he missed a great concert. He wasn't watching the audience too well either. I saw screaming, loving exuberance.

Comparing the concert or crowd to Aerosmith or the Grateful Dead was utterly ridiculous. Of course it wasn't an Aerosmith concert; no one in the crowd or on stage was hit with firecrackers or bottles. In my mind, when that happens, the crowd is ugly; not when they show their appreciation by clapping and cheering. Maybe the audience's capacity for mediocrity is stunning. We will never know because they saw an outstanding concert.

How can a man who has been performing for 15 years not have any stage presence? James Taylor was in charge from the moment he stepped on stage. That is what stage presence is measured by; not the amount of yelling and jumping around the stage he does.

What distressed me most about the article was the way in which Mr. Combs openly flaunted the fact that he got in for free. Most people are aware of the fact that reviewers see shows for free. The 3500 people who paid to see the show do not need their noses rubbed in the smell of the article by such an irresponsible closing statement. The fact that 3500 people paid clearly shows that the tickets were not "overpriced."

All in all, I found the review as bland as burial in vanilla yogurt.

Andrew C. Trione
Class of '82

Dear Editor,

The article, Taylor Plays To Sell-Out Crowd lacked three important variables: first, realism. Second, insight. Lastly, intelligence. We believe The Villanovan owes five apologies in regard to the Taylor article.

1. To the audience: the "large groups of middle class white Republicans wandering through Disneyland." The "bunch" that "would have applauded anything." Is that an appropriate label for a group of fans responding to Mr. Taylor's performance?

2. To James Taylor: a "man losing his grip." Does giving a performance which best suits one's music constitute losing one's grip?"

3. To the sound crew and stagehands: for providing the best acoustics witnessed at the Villanova fieldhouse in a long time — improving the sound took two hours. I suppose effort does not count?

4. To the Villanova Union: Don't worry gang, there are still those of us who have appreciated and will continue to appreciate your efforts!

5. Most importantly, to the Villanova student body: They have experienced fine news coverage in the past; therefore, nothing less should be expected now or in the future.

The lunacy of the Taylor article speaks for itself. Such insults are commonly written on bathroom walls not in respected publications. We certainly hope future Villanovan articles will be written with greater care and respect as has been the past tradition.

STAGE CREW

To the Editors,

Having read Steve Combs' review of the recent James Taylor concert in the Fieldhouse, I am beginning to doubt the serious intentions of both the author and the Villanovan as serious journalists. I found the review in general to be poorly written, offensive to the reader, and worst of all, irrelevant. I also found the final line in the review, ". . . of course yours truly got in free which is the major reason we cover high priced campus diversions such as these . . ." to be both irresponsible and foolish.

Mike Logue

Editor's Note: The review of the James Taylor concert was only the opinion of the reviewer, not the Villanovan as a whole. And it is imperative here to distinguish between a review and a news article: the latter is a strict statement of facts, while the former is a singular interpretation of them. It is for this reason that Mr. Combs had the right to interpret the concert as he saw fit.

Dear Editor,

I am deeply disappointed with the reaction expressed by the Villanova Union in regard to the review of the James Taylor concert by Steven Combs. As I am one of the three Entertainment editors, I carefully copyread and layout the "On the Scene" section each week. It is our goal to print diversified material including positive and negative reactions to anything that comes under the broad heading of entertainment. My feelings of satisfaction with my work and the work of my writers has not changed. I feel it is unfortunate that the Union felt that the article in question was offensive. The word "style" is an important word when one is choosing a vocabulary to describe good journalism. Each writer is entitled to his or her opinion and methods of expression. I will always respect those rights.

Maybe the Union does not understand the rights of a reviewer. I cannot become annoyed with this lack of knowledge. This area of information is in a field of which The Union has little experience. I publish a newspaper. The Union coordinates events and activities. I make no attempt to advise them on their methods of doing their job. I hope they choose, in the future, not to tell me how to do mine.

Respectfully submitted
Amy MacLachlan
Entertainment Editor

Writer Responds

Dear Editor:

I was the only Villanovan writer at all interested in reviewing James Taylor's show. I had seen him in Portland and been impressed by his intensity, eclecticism, and charm. The show Taylor put on at Villanova was completely inferior. He sorely missed the electric guitarist and back-up vocalists who played with him in Portland. The pace of the show was funereal. I heard from an on stage source that Taylor appeared drunk. My vicious chastisement of the audience was a desperate attempt to explain why such a mediocre performance by an established 'star' was so thunderously applauded. My style of writing has always been subjective and personal, which is not traditional journalism. As far as I'm concerned, people who can't tolerate a personal viewpoint in reporting are ignorant, close-minded and should be ripped apart by savage dogs. I hope 'gonzo' journalism, which allows the reporter to become a part of the story, will survive the belly-aching of people with vested interests in the publication of upbeat, uncritical pulp.

Steven Combs

the Villanovan Classifieds

ARE YOU READY FOR SPRING? WE ARE!
Authentic or surgeon's scrubb suits. More comfortable than jeans. You won't ever want to take them off . . . well, maybe sometimes? 100% cotton, colorful, reversible and roomy. Small, med. and large. Girls get one size smaller. Colors: O.R. green, I.C.U. blue. In med. and small only, we have misty-grey green, pink, yellow and white. $10.95 for V-neck shirts and $10.95 for drawstring pants. Complete set $20. Send check or money order to Scrubbs, by Raphael, Dept. V, Box 756, Havertown, Pa. 19083. One week to 10 days delivery. $1.50 handling and postage.

SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE
Applicants are now being considered for the 1981 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts, Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Theater Director, Piano Accompanist and Singing, Archery, Tennis, Trampoline, Gymnastics, Photography, Cheerleading, Jazzercize, Scouting and Nature Study, A.R.C. Swimming Instructor, Boating, Canoeing and Water Skiing Instructor or General Athletics. COUNSELOR UNIT LEADERS must be college graduate experienced in camping. Able to plan schedule for activities, evening programs, etc. Supervise large staff. Write Camp Office, 700 Ardmore Ave., No. 102, Haverford Village, Ardmore, Pa. 19003 or phone Miss Sherman, 215-649-9622 or 215-687-7801.

SENIOR WEEK SPECIAL MAY 10-17 AND EASTER WEEK SPECIAL APRIL 15-20
20 person min. House in Ocean City, N.J. Sleeps 25-30, 7 bedrooms, 3 baths, 2 eat-in kitchens, 3 porches. $10 per person, per day. Outside shower. 2 blocks to beach and boardwalk, 14th & Central Ave. Call Thurs. evening only! NI 4-0110 or write Ocean City Resident, 63 Main Ave., Berwyn, Pa. 19312.

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 765-5999.

Summer employment — Wildwood boardwalk game complex. Good pay, low cost housing. Managerial and other type jobs. Write: Martin Shapiro, 1233 Commerce Ave., Union, N.J. 07083.

ARE YOU TALENTED? PECULIAR? DIFFERENT? UNIQUE?
We need good amateur talent for our party placement service. No contracts to sign, no "fees" to pay. Just be available for occasional, well-paying work. The only way is up! RISING STAR AND SUNS 462-3161

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS
Openings for bunk counselor/instructors in many sports, waterfront, tennis, arts/crafts, general; also group leaders, drama director, music director. Point O'Pines Camp for Girls in NY's Adirondacks. Contact: Andrew Rosen, 221 Harvard Ave., Swarthmore, Pa. 19081, 328-6693.

TYPING
Secretary experienced in editing hand written reports can save you time! Fast service. Located in SUGARTOWN MEWS APTS. Call 964-1759 Mon.-Sat.

HELP WANTED FOR SUMMER CAMP
Summer camp for retarded near Lake Placid, now hiring. Campus interviews arranged. Write 2575 Troy Rd., Schenectady, NY 12309 or phone 518-783-1233.

OVERSEAS JOBS — Summer/year round. Europe, S. America, Australia, Asia. All fields, $500-$1200 monthly. Sightseeing. Free info., write IJC, Box 52-PA8, Corona Del Mar, CA 92625.

CONESTOGA CLEANERS
907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010
LA 5-3431
PLANT-ON PREMISES
SAME DAY CLEANING
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080 773 E. Lancaster, Villanova

20% DISCOUNT
With College I.D.
at
The Junior League Thrift Shop
604 Lancaster Avenue
Bryn Mawr, (across from Bryn Mawr Acme)
on all non-consignment items during the month of February
525-8513

Local investment firm looking for telephone reps to assist lead creation and survey work. Evening hours 5-9 p.m., King of Prussia area. Call Linda Harker. Car a necessity.

★★★★★★★★★

Villanovan Personals a great way to announce [illegible] for only $2.00. Just print your [illegible] Stop up to the Villanovan office, 2nd floor Dougherty and be heard!

★★★★★★★★★

Personals

Dear Bookends,
Even though it was a while ago, the memories of that Thursday night still linger on. I hope you had as great a time as I had, and we must repeat the performance really soon. Next time we'll have to keep the noise level down! It's been one singular sensation after another since we've met, hopefully we'll have many more laughs together in the future.
Love, the Gambling Man

To our favorite tour guide, Commander Salamander, D.C. was great. Your omelettes were even better. Luma said "call m.e." at Gypsytown's, Tombs! Looking forward to more "close encounters" at scandals and other "crowded" bars after night shots with John A. Give us two hours and we'll be ready "to fly." Thanks for everything.
Love, Norie & Patty Penny

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118

LTD is sponsoring a 24-hour
"Monopoly Marathon"
TO BENEFIT THE PHILADELPHIA CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL
FRI., MARCH 13 - SAT., MARCH 14
6 P.M. - 6 P.M.
PLEDGE YOUR BROTHER - BY THE HOUR
WEST LOUNGE, DOUGHERTY HALL

COMING HOME TO NEW JERSEY
FOR THE SUMMER
TRENTON STATE COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL
We offer:
— Wide variety of courses
— Flexible schedule
— Guaranteed course offerings
For Information Write to:
Trenton State College
Summer Session Office
Hillwood Lakes, CN 550
Trenton, NJ
or call: 609-771-3128

Florida Offers Emotional Freedom

By BILL CLARK

Stories of spring break in Florida are commonplace. When one hears of sun-filled days and action-packed nights, it is easy to understand why Fort Lauderdale is considered the "college vacation capitol." Yet, there is more to the experience than raging sunburn and morning hangovers. Florida offers something which Villanova never could — freedom.

The freedom of which I speak is not physical; it comes entirely from within. By offering an escape from all the pressures of college, the vacation afforded an opportunity to learn more about others, and in turn, to learn more about myself.

When I left Villanova on a dark Saturday morning, I left behind more than books piled on my dormitory desk; I also left behind my life as a Villanova student. As soon as everyone boarded the plane, no one wanted to talk about school.

During our everyday experiences, it is easy to make conversation. Teachers, classes, tests, mutual friends; they all make for small talk. Now, talk of such things would be taboo. Everyone was there to have a good time.

Indeed, it is like another world in Florida. The atmosphere seems to change people. It is suddenly easy to meet people who have always seemed so distant.

It seems so natural to say things to strangers that you never dreamed possible. In the bars and on the beaches, people just kept meeting people.

Some of the introductions I heard were unbelievable. In one night club, Brother Jim Flanagan's, I saw guys just grab girls and begin dancing. To my surprise, the girls appeared to enjoy it. The attitude was, "I'll never see these people again, so I don't care what I do." Everyone was on vacation, so they could do whatever they wanted.

At other bars, guys would insult girls as they walked by. No one seemed bothered. Girls would turn around and sling insults right back. It was all in good fun.

It almost seemed that the vacation brought out the "kid" in everyone. One morning, our room received a wake-up call at 4:30 a.m. Instead of getting mad at the girls who were responsible, we plotted revenge. This was not a time for taking things too seriously.

Because the vacation lasted only one week, the natural thing was to cram in as much fun as possible. People would brag about not eating for two days. The morning conversation often centered around how much one drank the night before.

It was amusing to watch people trying to get a tan to show their friends back at school. The same people walking around town in agony would be out in the sun early the next morning trying to get fried even more. After all, there were only seven days, and spring break rolls around just once a year.

Several late afternoons proved exciting to many college students. A local bar called "The Button" sponsored competition between different schools on vacation in Fort Lauderdale. The events, however, were not sanctioned by the NCAA like many others. They included such things as an erotic banana-eating contest, a wet tee-shirt contest, and a wet willy contest. (If you don't understand these terms, ask someone who was there.)

Throughout the stay, I kept thinking what it would be like to live in Fort Lauderdale. Apparently, the town was accustomed to the college rowdiness. Policemen were at the doors of the many bars and nightclubs. They patrolled the "strip" with regularity. With the reported fights which occurred every night, this is easy to understand.

The atmosphere in Florida provided for an exciting, yet educational experience. It offered me a chance to discover how people act differently when relieved of their pressures. It also gave me a chance to discover how I would act under the same circumstances. This may be the last time any of us would have the chance to be truly free.

Students Perform Social Service For Poor

By PAUL O. SCHULTZ

While many Villanova students were boarding planes for a week of sun and fun in Fort Lauderdale, another group of 32 students from Campus Ministry were travelling in rented cars to spend their spring break in Appalachia. This group of 14 men and 18 women went to Appalachia as the guests of the Jesuit Reflection Center and Youth Hostel in Hot Springs, N.C., to perform social services for the poor in this region.

The students had been preparing for this trip since last November. Between November and early March, the students had attended five orientation seminars where they learned about the culture of the people in Appalachia (pronounced Ap-pa-lach-a) through movies, articles, and personal testimonies.

In addition to attending these seminars, the students had to organize and participate in numerous fund raising events to raise the money necessary to pay for their rented cars, expenses, and food for the week. They held a candy cane sale at Christmas, a pretzel sale during finals, a 24 hour volleyball marathon, two raffles, two concerts, and a student mod fast.

Barbara Haun, Sister Christina Baur, Gary Balbot, and Father Shawn Tracy were among those responsible for organizing and coordinating the trip around Campus Ministry Appalachia trip.

The students departed from Villanova on Saturday, March 2, at 7 a.m. for a week of social services, although at this time they really did not know what kind of services they were going to provide.

The students spent most of their time in the mountains cutting down trees, splitting logs, and delivering firewood. The firewood was delivered to the homes of 200 poor families who qualified to receive this free wood for their cooking and heating purposes.

Besides cutting and splitting wood, a few biology and nursing majors were able to visit some of the medical clinics in the area and talk with the medical staffs about their role to the people in the area.

Other students were able to go to two of the day care centers in the country. Here they talked to the staff and entertained the children. Those who went to the day care centers said it was a most enriching experience. They said that the children, many of whom hardly see their mothers and fathers, welcomed them with their love and affection.

Another small group had the opportunity to travel throughout the region with one of the local residents who donated his time to show them his homeland and its people. The students travelled through two counties, meeting and talking with local mountain men and women in the area, and visiting seeing in the mountains of Appalachia.

We have taken a part of them with us in the form of memories, love, and oneness with God.

While in Appalachia, all the students visited the Museum of Rural Living at the Mars Hill College in Mars Hill, N.C. Here they saw displays and were lectured on early colonial living from plowing with an ox drawn plow to spinning yarn and making clothes on a loom.

During their short stay in Appalachia, the students had received through their many experiences lessons in history, culture, and religion. Ask one of the 32 who went to Appalachia how his or her trip was and he or she will tell you it was "terrific," but in all actuality, their trip was too deep for words.

"Go with us" is an expression used by the people of this area when you leave their home. It has great spiritual and religious meaning to the people. None of the volunteers understood its meaning when it was first heard but many understand it now. We "have" taken a part of them with us in the form of memories, love, respect and oneness with God?

Company Hosts Drill Team Meet

The Twenty-second annual Villanova University Invitational Drill Meet, hosted by Villanova's "Whiskey Company," was held Saturday, Feb. 14 at Valley Forge Military Academy. Twenty drill teams participated in basic and trick drill competitions, and were judged on specific moves, originality of routine, and general excellence.

The meet commenced as Whiskey Company's Basic Platoon stepped on to the drill deck at 8 a.m. Each school entered in this area of competition then took the floor, according to the number of the draw. As the afternoon progressed, competitions took place in Squad Basic, Two Man, Individual, Squad Trick, and Platoon Trick. Women's teams competed separately for prizes in Platoon Trick, Two-Man, and Individual events.

A first place overall trophy, dedicated to Villanova's late Dean, John J. Gallen, and awarded to the competitor with the highest combined platoon basic and platoon trick scores was awarded to Seton Hall University. Seton Hall took first place in these two areas of competition.

In keeping with tradition, "Whiskey Company" refuses any awards, although they do compete for points, and are judged for their performances in squad and platoon events. Individuals members of "Whiskey Company," however, are permitted to compete for and receive awards in Two Man and Individual.

In the Two Man Trick Drill competition, one team represented "Whiskey." Sophomores Frank

(Continued on page 12)

Campus Clip

Jeff Page Photo

An annual rite of Spring, the Men's Housing Lottery took place this week. Will this student end up living in Sugartown Mews next year? Only the Dean of Men's office knows for sure.

UNION PAGE

Dating Game

MARCH 31, 8:00 PM

More to follow soon . . .

Music and Comedy

B.Y.O.B.

March 19 - D.H. at 7:00
with
STEVE SCROVAN
$1.50 - all tickets must be bought before the date at the C.C. ticket office.

UNDERCLASSMAN WEEKEND

FRIDAY, MARCH 27:

Underclassman Dinner Dance.
at the Holiday Inn on City Line.
Price is $35.99 per couple
Featuring Orion.

SATURDAY, MARCH 28:

RAIN DATE: SUNDAY 29

Free Outdoor Concert
on Kennedy Mall 1:30
Featuring Full Moon.

SUNDAY, MARCH 29:

Surprise Event.

Villanova Union Presents
St. Patrick's Gala Concert!

The Fabulous Clancy Brothers
with
Robbie O'Connell

Special Guest -

COZY MORLEY

SUNDAY, MARCH 15 8:00 P.M.

FIELD HOUSE VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
Lancaster Pike, Villanova, PA

RESERVED TICKETS: $7.50 $8.50

NCAA ON BIG SCREEN TV

NCAA BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Opening Round
Sat.*	March 14	1:00 PM	NL
Sun.	March 15	1:00 PM	WL
Regional Finals
Sat.*	March 21	1:00 PM	NL
Sun.	March 22	1:00 PM	WL
National Semi-Finals
Sat.*	March 28	1:00 PM	WL
Championship Game
Mon.	March 30	8:00 PM	WL

Catch all the NCAA Hoop Action on Big Screen TV
There will be no video movie due to NCAA Tournament.

UNION PAGE

David Bromberg

2 Shows

April 10 - 8:00 and 10:00
in the Villanova Center

Students	$4.50
General Public	$6.50

SENIOR WEEKEND

Friday, April 11

Senior Dinner Dance at the Franklin Plaza Hotel
featuring the band Live Wire
Tickets on sale next week in the Connelly Center ticket office.

Free Outdoor Concert
Saturday, April 12
on Kennedy Mall with SPY.
Time 1:30

C.P.R. Seminar

University II is proud to present Instructor Joe Micucci for two basic "Heart Saver" seminars in conjunction with the United Way of Southeastern Pennsylvania and Methodist Hospital. Attend one of these seminars and learn how to save a life and receive a certification in C.P.R.

Thursday, March 19
7 - 11:00 in W.L.

SMALL TALK: FASHION

JEANNE McCLELLAN
talks on trends, designers, preppy look
MARCH 26
WL 12:45 PM

Congratulations to the New Union Board

President - Irene Smith
V.P. of operations - Donna Dorgan
Secretary/Treasury - Jim DiBiasi
Cultural Arts - Maggie Coyle
Lectures - Mike Fagan
Major Events - Chris Cherry
Recreations - Mike Gormley
University Services - Natalie Oliveri
University II - Eileen Moriarity
Visual Arts - Veronica Mariani
Publicity - Tom Belmont
Social Functions - Paul Mariani

Anyone interested in joining any of the committees should stop by the Union office and talk to the new coordinators.

Chairperson applications for the Social Functions Committee are available in the Union office on Thursday, March 19.

Publicity Committee Meeting Tuesday, March 17 in the Bryn Mawr Room. Chairperson applications will be available at this time.

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES

THE LAST WAVE

A mesmerizing thriller about the supernatural. Richard Chamberlain stars as David Burton, an Australian lawyer whose defense of 5 aborigines accused of ritual murder involves him in a series of bizarre and inexplicable experiences.

Sunday, March 15 at 7:00, Cinema

A TURMAN-FOSTER COMPANY PRODUCTION "FIRST LOVE" Starring WILLIAM KATT SUSAN DEY Screenplay by JANE STANTON HITCHCOCK and DAVID FREEMAN Produced by LAWRENCE TURMAN and DAVID FOSTER Directed by JOAN DARLING

NOW SHOWING

FIRST LOVE

Friday, March 13 at 7:00 and 9:30 in cinema.

COMING SOON

CHINA SYNDROME

Thursday, March 19 and Friday, March 20 at 7:00 and 9:30 in the cinema.

Austin Goes Wild

After one full week of dastardly assassinations, cutthroat backstabbings and intense paranoia, the Austin Assassination Tournament is winding down to its last few killers.

The tournament, which involves most Austin residents, is played with suction cup dart guns. Each participant has three people to "bump off" however he can — with just two witnesses.

After the first 24 hours, (during which the Austin hallways were clouded with darts), 19 of the potential assassins were gunned down. Chris D'Angelo was extremely dangerous on the first day, accounting for four kills, however he grew a bit too confident, as Lee Kramer came out of nowhere to send him to his eternal reward.

As the days of tension wore on, John Corino emerged from the pack with several magnificent shootings. Chris Cameron also came into his own, as he brilliantly eliminated Kevin Horan, one of the more ruthless backstabbing entrants.

The tournament is not without its lighter moments. Phil Stoddard, a highly touted second floor hit man, committed suicide, saying briefly, "I just can't take this anymore!" Jeff Antoon's final words, "I'm getting hosed!" reflect the intensity with which some despicable assassins play.

So if you happen across a student on campus sporting a toy dart gun, please be understanding. He's probably from Austin, where "only the good die young."

Arts Displayed

By KATHI IANNACONE

During the month of March an exhibition of work by Frank Stamato will be displayed in the University Art Gallery located in the Connelly Center. In addition, on Wednesday evening, March 18, at 7 p.m., Professor Abraham Davidson, from Temple University, will lecture on Frank Stamato and the Philadelphia art of the 1940s.

Mr. Stamato began his studies as a sculptor at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Later in the 20s and 30s, he continued his studies in Europe. When he returned from Europe, he turned away from sculpture and toward painting.

The 94 of his works on display, including two sculptures, were donated to the University by an area artist and collector, Mr. John Castango. Several large oils by Stamato will be loaned from Castango's personal collection. Upon completion of the art display, the artworks will be used to decorate various buildings and arcades within the University.

"Villanova is very fortunate in receiving this gift. Many of these works are small treasures," states Bro. Richard Cannuli, director of the gallery. "While Stamato's name is not well known, the works betray a sophisticated artist fully in tune with the art of his time."

The University Art Gallery is open to visitors from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 12 to 11 on Sunday.

who knows, who cares

The Tuch . . . oops, Connelly Center celebrates its first birthday next week . . . only twenty more years until it's old enough to get a liquor license . . . Father Deegan is leaving to assume the presidency of Merrimack College . . . Does anyone know where Merrimack is? . . . Does anyone know who Father Deegan is? . . . Shhh, Tony . . . not so loud . . . we can hear you giggling all the way over here . . . The basketball team has made it to the NCAA play-offs . . . If they should happen to lose, does it mean that they'll be invited to be one of the Final Four? . . . But anyway, a final note to "The Executive Board of the Villanova Union" . . . when you try to use big words, do be dears and at least spell them correctly . . . Hugs & Slugs . . . WKWC

Whiskey Company

(Continued from page 9)

Balantic and Rich Regan received second place honors, and were awarded a trophy and medal for their near perfect performance.

In Individual Competition, first and second were swept in both the Men's and Women's areas by "Whiskey Company" members. In a tough men's competition, sophomore Ken Barton held on to take first place. "Whiskey Company" commander, Jeffrey Morsch, a Villanova junior, won second place. In an equally competitive Women's area, sophomore Patricia VanBloem had a fine performance to win honors for first place. Another sophomore, Lori Madden, was awarded second place.

In April, "Whiskey Company" goes to the National Championships held at the University of Illinois, Champagne, Ill. Universities from across the nati will participate in this event, a "Whiskey" expects to do well th year. Last year they won seco place in Platoon Basic, third pla in Platoon Trick, and first place Squad Trick. The championship Illinois is the final meet f "Whiskey Company." They will practicing early every morni from now until then.

3rd ANNUAL

RSA

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

BUS TRIP

TO NEW YORK CITY

ROUND TRIP TICKET $6.50

MARCH 17th

SIGN UP IN THE RSA OFFICE

LIMITED SEATING

TICKETS AVAILABLE IN C.C. TICKET OFFICE

MEN'S SINGLE PITCH INTRAMURAL SOFTBALL TOURNEY

REGISTRATION MARCH 13-19

STARTS APRIL 11-12-13

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL

REGISTRATION MARCH 13-19

STARTS WEEK OF 3/27

Open to Rosemont Students

CO-ED TRACK & FIELD MEET

REGISTRATION MARCH 13-19

MEET APRIL 4

TURN ROSTERS INTO INTRAMURAL OFFICE IN ALUMNI HALL

PRESTIGE TYPING SERVICE

Theses, Dissertations, Manuscripts, Foreign Languages (Linguist on Staff), Medical, Resumes, Etc. — Near Campus Representative:

482-1796

THESIS WRITING?

Tired of paying for entire retype revisions?

Because word processing has memory storage, large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.

For Pricing Info, Call

WORD PROS

674-9800

Lady Luck Lights on Vasey

By ROBERT M. McGOVERN

Vasey Theatre's current production is "Guys And Dolls," the musical comedy based upon Damon Runyon's fond tales of the glittering Golden Age in New York City. For those unfamiliar, it's a story of love gained, lost, and gained again. It's also about gamblers searching for a place to earn their livelihood.

Nathan Detroit and his fiance of 14 years, Miss Adelaide (played by John Carrozza and Patti Pileggi respectively), along with Miss Sarah Brown (Susy Furey-Lloyd) and Sky Masterson (William Sarkees), are the major characters of this story. This core group of four carries the weight of the show's dialogue. They also provide the audience with some of the better vocal performances of the show.

In the opening act, we find "the oldest established floating crap game" looking for a place to play the next game and Miss Sarah searching for sinners to save. This leads to the first meeting of Sky and Miss Sarah and also to one of the show's better duoes, I'll Know. The concluding portions of the act sweep us up into Sarah and Sky's whirlwind tour of the night-life in New York and El Cafe Cubano. The scenes set in Cuba are interpreted quite ingeniously, as the show's extras are used to portray the various props neccessary (the airplane, tables, chairs and landmarks).

One of "Guys And Dolls" highlights has always been the crap game scene in the sewer, which happens to contain its most notable number, Luck, Be A Lady. The gamblers' descent into the sewer is pantomimed commendably and, along with their interpretation of the crap game, is one of the best-acted segments of the evening. However, whereas Luck is supposed to be a fast-paced, dazzling display of voice and dance, director Terry Fimiano (of last years mastrepiece "Cole") cares not to present the scene in this manner. The song proved to be bland and almost blase, rather than exhiliarating. But as happened with the first act, this too is saved by a flashy number, namely Sit Down You're Rockin' The Boat. This song, performed by Harry the Horse (Ken Jordan) and cast, includes the show's best singing and dancing and one is almost tempted to jump out of one's seat and move onstage to perform along with the actors.

The show basically suffers from two things: the performers do not yet have a real feel for the dialogue they are delivering, which in turn causes a lack of spontaneity. This is the major cause for the performance's undesirable time span (even in light of the fact that "Guys and Dolls" is traditionally a lengthy production). Another thing that is apparent, and this one could be said to be at best gauche, is Miss Pileggi also playing the part of a Cuba Dancer. The trade-off of minor characters is fine, but not of a major to a minor. It was a tacky move and one that one would not expect from any Vasey show. However, if it was done to draw some sort of parallel between the Hot Box and El Cafe Cubano, fine, but this is not the case.

While it is true that there are faults in a few areas of the show, in all fairness it should be noted that this was only the second or third time the characters had done a full dress rehearsal. Given that there are still 10 performances left (it will be running through March 28, every Wednesday through Saturday), and the show should improve to the level that one has come to expect of any Vasey production.

John Carrozza as Nathan Detroit and Patti Dileggi as Adelaide in Vasey's 'Guys and Dolls.'

Loudon Wainwright

By AMY MacLACHLAN

If life is an endless series of possibilities, those of you who missed Loudon Wainwright at the Bijou Cafe last Saturday night, spent the evening without utilizing its fullest potential.

If you have never heard of Loudon Wainwright and are reading this article anyway, you are making a step in the right direction. He is hilarious. Other than that, he is intelligent and creative in his performance of his own brand of catchy, humorous folk music. As an entertainer, from the moment he walks on stage, the audience is amused, and entertained, with never a dull moment.

His repertoire of original compositions reflects his somewhat cynical and always whimsical view of the world. Songs like I Don't Think Your Wife Likes Me, and Rufus, are prime examples of his comedic point of view.

Wainwright couldn't do anything wrong. When he broke a string on his acoustic guitar, he repaired it, on stage, while singing a song a cappella, to his childhood playmate Liza Minnelli. Shortly thereafter, he enlisted the audience in a hilarious drinking song with the words, "Drinks before dinner/wine with dinner/and after dinner drinks/ . . . / Rudolf the red nosed wino's gonna guide us home tonight."

The moral: If you have never heard Loudon Wainright the Third, and after reading this article still don't plan to, your option is obvious — Suicide is Painless.

In Concert

Trick Proves To Be Treat

By PETE DiPASCA

Cheap Trick, a band known for its musical wit and imagination, and UFO, a veteran hard-rocking band from Britain, brought their shows to the Spectrum on Saturday, Feb. 21. Both bands displayed their own characteristic styles of music which one might think are very similar, but are in fact very distinct. UFO's music is straight-ahead rock-n-roll, while Cheap Trick's style leans more toward the "pop music" sound. Each group put on an exceptional performance, both musically and visually.

UFO CITED

UFO started off the evening with the title song from their new album, The Wild, the Willing, and the Innocent. They then proceeded to play a few of their more well-known songs, such as Only You Can Rock Me and Too Hot to Handle. One highpoint of their performance was the song, Love to Love. While UFO is known primarily for their hard rock sound, Love to Love is a beautiful example that shows the group can also play songs with emotion. The subtle sounds of the keyboards along with Paul Chapman's guitar and Phil Mogg's vocals combine to make this an outstanding song. UFO ended their performance with their encore hit, Lights Out.

UFO has had a number of personnel changes in their ten year history, but as of now, the band consists of lead singer Phil Mogg, bassist Pete Way, guitarist Paul Chapman, drummer Andy Parker, and keyboardist-guitarist Neil Carter.

One disappointment in UFO's performance was that they did not play Rock Bottom, a song which is as important to UFO as Freebird was to Lynyrd Skynyrd. However, UFO proved to be an excellent opening act.

Cheap Trick at the Spectrum. Peter DiPasca Photo

Cheap Trick opened their show with Stop This Game, a song off their new album, and then went into their "official opening song," Hello There. Next came their biggest hit, I Want You to Want Me. This particular tune is the epitome of a song that gets to be sickening after hearing it so many times. For some reason, however, seeing Cheap Trick perform it live somehow made the song bearable. They went on to play a variety of songs from each of their albums, including Dream Police, Heaven Tonight, and the rocker, Gonna Raise Hell.

Throughout the concert, Rick Nielsen proved to be the group's showman as he played his usual variety of guitars. At one point, Nielsen came out on stage with an incredible five-neck guitar, much to the amusement of the audience.

Cheap Trick, which was formed in 1974, hails from Rockford, Ill. The band includes original members Robin Zander, lead vocals; Rick Nielsen, guitars; and Bun E. Carlos, drums. Bassist Pete Comita was brought in to replace Tom Petersson in 1980.

Throughout most of the concert, Cheap Trick relied on many visual effects. As the show went on, the group seemed to go a bit overboard with these effects. During the first encore, for some strange reason, approximately thirty people danced onto the stage wearing cutout Bun E. Carlos faces while two Bun E. Carlos lookalikes played miniature drum sets. This did seem somewhat unusual. However, the group got back to business in the second encore and played the Beatles' Day Tripper and their own California Man.

UFO and Cheap Trick seemed to attract different types of fans. UFO appealed to the older, more sophisticated crowd while Cheap Trick catered to the younger people in the audience. Nevertheless, everyone got what they wanted: a night of great entertainment.

Zevon Fires Up

By AMY MacLACHLAN

F. Scott Fitzevon has returned as a much more naturally excitable boy than in the days when he needed lawyers, guns and money to aid him following his bouts with gallons of vodka. In order to take his mind off of his need for alcohol and his subsequent addiction, Warren Zevon has been studying dance with Joanne DeVito and becoming proficient in the martial arts under the guidance of Aaron Norris. The album, Stand in The Fire, is a live at the Roxy recording of Zevon and band calling themselves, The Dog Ate the Part We Didn't Like.

Basically the album is a greatest hits collection, as half of the songs are previously released singles. The other half of the selections are reworkings of some of the better tracks on his self-titled debut album, which was poorly received when it was originally released.

Stand in The Fire, new selection and namesake of this album, is a "Rock and Roll" number lauding the virtues of dancing with red haired women.

Mohammed's Radio, from his first album, is the best selection on this album. Often bad songs will be pulled down along with good ones when a primarily bad album goes under. This song deserves its second chance.

Lawyers, Guns and Money begins Side Two followed by the second of the two new selections on this LP. Titled the Sin, this song seems to be almost criptic in its message. It is a reformed Zevon talking. Humorous at first, it slowly becomes a warning. Other selections include: Poor Poor Pitiful Me, Excitable Boy, Werewolves of London, and, Zevon's all time favorite, Bo Diddley's a Gun Slinger.

This album is a mediocre one. For beginning Zevon fans it is a must. For the veterans it is a luxury addition to their collection. Warren Zevon seemed to sum it up best during his encore at L.A.'s Universal Amphitheater, "I sing as good as I can, and I dance as well as I want." Totally unrelated and completely unimportant, but never the less very typical of this Peckinpah of Rock.

Bakshi Traces 'American Pop'

By KIM KINGSLAND

American Pop, directed by Ralph Bakshi of Fritz the Cat fame, is one of the most daring films released as yet in 1981. While that does not necessarily attest to its merit in this era of expensive self-indulgence by jaded egotists, Ralph Bakshi has created a vivid, animated panorama of our culture and its music. This, a considerable challenge, is achieved through a synthesis of the most recognizable music of the twentieth century, a montage of its history, and, most importantly, the depiction of the genealogy of one family.

The film begins at the turn of the century, with Zalmie, a young Russian immigrant who becomes initiated into the seamy world of vaudeville. He is not interested in comedy, however, "... the music is everything." This is one of Bakshi's themes: that America's music is one of its strongest unifying forces. This is not a showcase of rock and roll; do not be misled by the publicity. Although current tastes are done justice, their antecedents are as faithfully rendered.

Zalmie's son, Benny, is a piano player. His son, Tony, is a rebel who meanders cross-country to California and becomes a songwriter for a rock group whose lead singer exhibits strong Joplin/Slick overtones. Pete, Tony's son, is the film's anti-hero. The violence of the disappointments of his ancestry has accrued in him, as violence has emerged in our music. Pete explodes into superstardom, and, with the help of the technology of Laserium, fulfills his great-grandfather's dreams.

The film can be explored at several levels. Historically, it gives in believable animation something similar to that which DosPassos attempted in his U.S.A. trilogy. Further, Bakshi depicts the births and deaths of one family, coupled with glances at the societies of their times. But, music is the core of the film, and, although Bakshi's choice of current tunes is debatable, he and his animators deliver a multimedia package that ranges from ludicrously comedic to realistic to hallucinatory.

Bakshi, who also directed the Lord of the Rings movie, was in Philadelphia recently to promote American Pop. He described his particular form of animation as "rotoscope," a process by which live actors' movements are traced by animators. Throughout the film, the "generation" of rotoscope varies: the opening program scenes are very close to live actors, as is the People Are Strange segment, while much of the remainder is "fifth Generation" rotoscope, wherein the actors are traced five times. Although at times the cartoon concept did alienate the audience, Bakshi's achievement of realism in this genre is fascinating.

Mr. Bakshi described Pete, the idol whose life we leave at its peak, as a metaphor. "We care too much for success. You have to decide whether Pete's life is worth the struggle." Bakshi views himself as a documenter, not a critic, but stated his personal opinion on the subject, "I don't think you start your life when you become a rock 'n' roll star, I think you end it . . . We in America have a lot of freedom. I think we mistake that for stardom. I think we idolize our stars too much." However, Bakshi stated that Pete also symbolized today's youth, and its hopes. He makes no judgments and offers no solutions; rather, he closes with Pete at the pinnacle, while each of his forefathers self-destruct or are destroyed.

RSA

ATTENTION: AREA REPS!

NOMINATIONS FOR ELECTED OFFICES WILL BE HELD MARCH 19.

TALK TO YOUR HALL PRESIDENT FOR DETAILS.

Dear Villanova Students,

We at Leisure Unlimited Vacations would like to say that we enjoyed having you at Ft. Lauderdale this past Spring Break.

We're looking forward to seeing you again next year for more fun-in-the-sun!

Sincerely,
L.U.V.

Amity
GMAT
LSAT
MCAT
REVIEW PROGRAMS
Call for Amity's free brochure on the exam of interest to you:
800-243-4767

College Night
76ers vs. Detroit Pistons
Wednesday, March 25
8:05 PM
at the Spectrum
1/2 OFF $8 and $7 Tickets
with valid college I.D. card
Schlitz
Free 76ers Beer Mugs*
to first 1,000 students
Courtesy of the 76ers and Schlitz Beer
Tickets: The Vet, Downtown Wanamakers, Ticketron, and Spectrum
FREE PARKING at these two lots: Broad and Hartranft (next to the 10th Inning Restaurant and the S. E. corner 11th and Pattison.
*students must enter through Spectrum Door No. 14 to be eligible for beer mug giveaway

March Madness in the Big East

By PATRICK FLYNN

The recently-completed Big East Conference Tournament was nothing short of a basketball junkie's dream-come-true. It provided seven intense hoop contests, each of which was undecided until the final minute or so. But for those who ventured up to the frozen tundra of central New York, it was so much more than a game.

It was the challenge of sitting with Boston College fans to the left, Georgetown and St. John's fans in front and Syracuse fans everywhere else and trying to match them all, shout for shout, chant for chant.

It was the responsibility of the Villanova-St. John's Fans Alliance of 1981, whereby both parties pledged to support each other throughout the tournament, unless they faced each other. It fizzled when the Redmen were bounced in Round One.

It was the emotion of the near-brawl between coaches John Thompson of Georgetown and Jim Boeheim of Syracuse, a hostility that was spreading through the stands of the beautiful Carrier Dome, an anxious powderkeg that fortunately never ignited completely.

Editorial

It was the tedium of the long car ride, accompanied by the consumption of the Book of Lists II from cover to cover and the childhood regression that manifested itself in a return to baseball card collecting.

It was money-management. On the last night in Syracuse, at a table for ten, the six C&F students ordered prime rib. The rest of us had club sandwiches.

It was the ecstatic walk from the Carrier Dome to the hotel following the semi-finals, when every car along the fifteen minute route was "decorated" with NOVA, written with frantic fingers in the snow on every windshield. And then the choruses of "V for Villanova" in the lobby of the Hotel Syracuse during the Big East reception with people who had caught the fever of Villanova and weren't afraid to show it.

It was partying with the class of '51, the class of '60, the class of '78 and those of '81, '82, '83, and '84, and watching the class of any year, Rollie Massimino, come so close to the title, but got the last laugh anyway.

It was the stubborn contention that the finals couldn't be as close as the rest, only to be proven wrong by one of the greatest games in many a year.

It was the exhausted depression of Saturday night, transformed by sunlight to the NCAA optimism of Sunday morning, the anxious first few hours on the road, the desperation that grew with every empty sports report and then the euphoria that took over with the news that the phone call had been received. Next stop, North Carolina.

But, above all, it was a time when all Villanovans, those sunning on the sands of Fort Lauderdale, the ones who were digging out from under snow in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, those who waited for the sun in California or suffered Mardi Gras hangovers in New Orleans, and most of all, the handful that found the magic of three days inside the Carrier Dome, could stand up and be proud of a team that never quit and of a season that may be just beginning.

Rosemont Beverage Center, Inc.
910 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PA. 19010
QUICK PICK-UP SERVICE
COLD KEGS, CASES OF BEER AND SODA
525-BEER

SOPHOMORES !!
YOU may qualify for a
TWO-YEAR SCHOLARSHIP including...
...FULL TUITION
...ALL BOOKS
...$100 PER MONTH...,
...and be guaranteed an exciting and challenging job upon graduation...
VILLANOVA NROTC
for more information see
Lt. Walt Wildemann
in Rm. 113 John Barry Hall (ext. 7388)
before March 20, 1981
THE NAVY, not just a job...
...it's an ADVENTURE!!!

The Week in Sports

MEN'S SWIMMING

In the Big East swimming championships Villanova came from behind on the last day of competition of the three day event to edge Syracuse 488-469.

Again it was the freestyle events which paved the way to victory. Tod Russell, who was selected the meet's Most Valuable Player said, "Winning the Big East was the high point of the season." Russell captured three individual firsts. Russell won the 50 yard, 100 yard and 200 yard freestyle. In the 100 and 200 freestyle Russell set Big East and Villanova records.

Ten first place finishes contributed to the 56 point victory over second place West Chester State College. Eleven teams competed in the meet.

Junior Jennifer Whitfield won two individual events, setting track records in each. She won the 55 meter dash in 7.2 seconds and the 600 meter run in 1:33.5. Anchoring the winning two mile relay, Whitfield ran the fastest split in 2:16.2 bringing in the baton several yards and 11 seconds ahead of second place West Chester.

Peggy Stewart dominated the high jump, winning both the open event and that segment of the pentathalon. She also finished first in the half-mile and 55 yard hurdle segments of the pentathalon to win the event and gather 3669 pentathalon points.

WOMEN'S TRACK

The Villanova women's track team won the EAIAW Division II Indoor Track and Field Championships last weekend at Boston College.

ICE HOCKEY

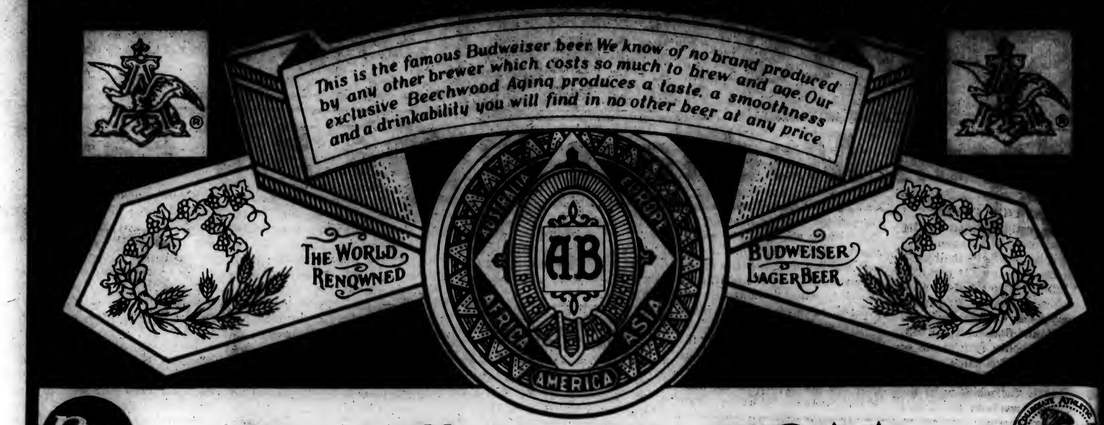
The Villanova ice hockey team will begin their quest for their first ever Mid-Atlantic Collegiate Hockey Conference (MACHC) championship, when they meet West Chester, Saturday morning at 11:30. This, the semi-final round, will be a one-game playoff, while the championship round, which will be held next weekend, will be a three-game series.

Villanova ended their regular season on a winning note, nipping Delaware 5-4. It marked the first ever first-place finish for the Icecats in their 26-year history. This, the final game of the regular season, was supposed to have been the game to decide first place, but the Wildcats got some help from Drexel the day before who upset Delaware, and hence clinched the top spot for the Icecats.

This is the famous Budweiser beer We know of no brand produced by any other brewer which costs so much to brew and age the natural Beechwood Aging produces a taste, a smoothness and a drinkability you will find in no other beer at any price.
Budweiser.
KING OF BEERS.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

This week's Bud Athlete of the week is the Villanova men's basketball team. The team defeated Connecticut and Providence in the Big East Tournament before falling to Syracuse in the finals in triple overtime. The Cats finished the regular season with a 19-10 mark, and were given a bid in the NCAA basketball tournament. In the first round, they play the University of Houston. If they are victorious, they face the University of Virginia, who finished their season at 28-3.



The Villanovan–NCAA Tournament Guide

First Round, Eastern Regionals, March 13–15 at Charlotte Coliseum, Charlotte, N.C.

Granger

Howard

Pinone

University of Houston Cougars (21-8)

Season Summary

Houston is coming off a 21-8 season while playing in the Southwest conference. The Cougars are a young team and are led by third-team All-American Rob Williams. The Cougars are also known to play an aggressive defense. They will press full-court, and then collapse into a zone. If Houston has a weakness, it is in their front line. Their guards can usually break any zone with excellent outside shooting.

Villanova University Wildcats (19-10)

Season Summary

Villanova's longest winning streak this year was five games, which came at the start of the season. Villanova won the Sun Bowl tournament in El Paso over the Christmas vacation, defeating San Francisco and UTEP. This victory was not all roses for Villanova, however, because All-American candidate Alex Bradley fractured his right thumb in the San Francisco game. In early January, Villanova suffered tough defeats to Notre Dame and St. John's. After this, though, the Cats got back on track with victories over Syracuse and nationally-ranked Connecticut.

University of Virginia Cavaliers (25-3)

Season Summary

Virginia, ranked third in the country, finished 25-3 in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference. Led by the collegiate player of the year Ralph Sampson, the Cavaliers have a quick experienced team. Scoring threat Jeff Lamp is able to score from anywhere on the court. Teams have successfully shut down Virginia's offense by double-teaming Sampson underneath, which leaves Virginia's poor-shooting guards open for the outside shot.

Sienkiewicz

Bradley

The Match-Ups

Rob Williams Williams is known for his excellent outside shot and his "shake and bake" dribbling, where he fakes with his body from side-to-side and pulls up for the jumper. Williams is known to shoot from anywhere on the court.	G	Stewart Granger After seeing limited playing time last year, Granger has quickly become the floor leader of the Wildcats. Early into the season, Granger was primarily a passer and penetrator, a role he still basically plays.	G	Lee Raker Raker has been plagued with injuries this year (calcium deposits in his thigh). He is a doubtful starter for Sunday's game. Raker is strictly a streak-shooter.
Clyde Drexler Drexler was a member of the Southwest Conference freshman team. Drexler is an excellent leaper and fights well under the boards for offensive rebounds. Drexler is the first freshman ever to lead the Cougars in rebounds.	F	Aaron Howard Howard remains the quiet man on the Villanova basketball team, even though he has failed to start in only six games in his three seasons on the court. He is very unselfish and usually passes up a shot to a teammate.	F	Craig Robinson Many teams will slack off Robinson to double-team Ralph Sampson. Robinson is not confident in his hands or shooting ability. His main asset to Virginia is his rebounding ability.
Larry Micheaux Known as "Mr. Mean," Micheaux has improved tremendously at center this year. Micheaux is really a converted forward. He likes to take turn-around jumpers from a medium distance from the basket.	C	John Pinone Only a sophomore, Pinone is the leader on the court who shouts signals to his other teammates. He has a delicate touch close to the basket from close to the basket to 15 feet away.	C	Ralph Sampson If Sampson is not double-teamed, it is virtually impossible to stop him. While remaining an offensive threat, Sampson has improved his defensive abilities tremendously this year. He has fouled out only one time this year.
Mike Young Young was also a member of the Southwest Conference freshman team. Young plays very consistantly, and has a line-drive jump shot.	F	Alex Bradley A fractured right thumb kept Bradley on the sidelines for six weeks and a total of 11 games. Since his return, however, Bradley has shot 54% from the field and has averaged 9.6 points per game.	F	Jeff Lamp In Virginia, Lamp is known as "Mr. Clutch." Whenever the game is close, Lamp usually shoots the ball. He has an excellent shot, and has made his last 50 consecutive free-throws.
Lynden Rose Rose is a quick and aggressive guard, but has achieved much notoriety for his defensive abilities. Rose is also an excellent leaper, as noted by his one-handed dunk shot.	G	Tom Sienkiewicz Nicknamed the "Polish Rifle," Sienkiewicz has a deadly touch for long-range jumpers. He will finish his career as Villanova's all-time leading foul-shooter.	G	Jeff Jones Last year, Jones was the only ball-handler on the team. With the addition of Odell Wilson, his duties have been cut, and even though he will start, his playing time will be reduced. Jones lacks quickness, and is not a big scoring threat.

WKVU 840 AM will broadcast all Villanova NCAA basketball games. Al Oxenreiter and Bob Herman will begin with a pre-game show this morning at 9:15.

the Villanovan

Vol. 58, No. 21 — VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. — March 20, 1981

Cats Fall in NCAA Tourney

Villanova Downs Houston in First Round

By BOB CONWAY

The NCAA Basketball Championship has achieved the special ingredient that NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle has been striving to attain for many years — parity. Last weekend was supposed to be the time that the 16 seeded teams ran rampant over such schools as St. Joe's, Kansas State and Villanova. However, things in college basketball do not always go according to plan. St. Joe's and Kansas State ambushed the top seeded teams in the country, DePaul and Oregon State, while Villanova played the East's number one seed, Virginia, chest-to-chest before finally succumbing 54-50.

Unlike top seeded teams such as Virginia, Villanova had to play a preliminary game against the Southwest Conference postseason champion, Houston. The Cougars, who came into Charlotte trying to snap a three game NCAA tournament losing streak, fared no better against the Wildcats.

Villanova's sensational sophomore guard, Stewart Granger, controlled the tempo of the game. Granger only scored five points, but orchestrated a press offense that was executed just like it was written in a textbook. Granger kept attacking the press which enabled his teammates to get uncontested baskets. Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said, "The key to the game was that we executed our press offense extremely well, and kept going at them." On the defensive end of the floor, Granger forced Houston's fine sophomore guard, Rob Williams, to turn the ball over five times, and made him take 21 shots to get his 23 points.

Five Villanova players scored in double digits, with the two starting seniors leading the way. Alex Bradley and Tom Sienkiewicz, who have been on three NCAA tournament teams in their four years of eligibility at Villanova, knew what to do with the ball once Granger got it to them. Bradley asserted himself right from the start. He scored seven of Villanova's first nine points, and ended up with 22 points which was a single game high for Bradley this year. Sienkiewicz shot 6-8 from the floor and wound up with 16 points.

Villanova was leading 41-28 at the half, and the game never again appeared to be in doubt. Houston did close to within eight with 17 minutes left to play, but a patented 21-foot Sienkiewicz jumper from the top of the key put the Cats up by 10 (46-36). Nova never looked back.

The Cats were playing with visible intensity and intelligence. Massimino later remarked, "We played like we wanted to win, rather than playing not to lose. And there is a big difference." The Cats just kept taking the ball to Houston. John Pinone had 19 points and 10 rebounds. Aaron

(Continued on page 16)

John Pinone was hit with a charging call in the last minute of Sunday's game with Virginia. Did Lee Raker really have position?

Dave Coskey Photo

Landlords Discriminate Against V.U. Students

By SARA KELLY

As a result of the Housing Lottery, this time every year students who have been asked by the Deans of Men and Women to seek alternative housing are searching the Main Line hoping to find a suitable home. It has been suggested by many of these students that prospective landlords often refuse to rent their apartments to Villanova students.

In an effort to confirm or deny these allegations, the Villanovan phoned a series of apartment buildings and complexes. Two calls were made to each of the rental offices; the first call requested an apartment for rental to a student from Villanova, and the second call requested an apartment for rental to a married couple and their five year old son.

The first apartment complex phoned was La Maison, in Strafford. When the spokesperson in the rental office received a call from the Villanova student looking for an apartment for herself and possibly two roommates, the spokesperson responded that "there are no openings currently, but we can put your name on our waiting list." When the student asked to visit the complex and be shown a model apartment, the spokesperson responded that there were no model apartments.

The follow-up call from the woman with a family interested in an apartment produced different results. The spokesperson replied that there were currently several vacancies, and that, if the woman was interested, she could be given a tour of the model apartments.

In a related incident, the Villanovan phoned the rental office of the Kingswood Apartments, in King of Prussia, first as the student and then as the married woman. "We have a long waiting list now. It would be a waste of time to even try," said the spokesperson to the student. When the same spokesperson received a call from the married woman, the story was different. The woman very adamantly stressed that she and her family did not want to live near students because "they are so untamed and mischievous." The spokesperson replied that the management refuses to rent to students because "the older tenants wish to preserve the quiet atmosphere."

Under the law, a landlord may rent, or refrain from renting, an apartment to whomever he wishes.

(Continued on page 3)

Free Wheeling...

Dave Coskey Photo

Fans

... following the basketball team's progress through the NCAA competition enjoy the sun in Charlotte, N.C. For a story about these die-hard fanatics, see page 16.

Fury

... and frolics abound as Greek organizations do their part to help charities. For stories concerning the activities last week, see page 7.

Fear

... rages in the hearts of many concerning the upcoming 24 hr. initiation. For views about this mandatory night, see page 3.

V.P. for Academic Affairs to Resign Post

By JAMES DeLORENZO

Dr. James Cleary, Villanova's vice-president for academic affairs, recently announced his resignation from that post effective May 31, 1981. Father Driscoll has named Rev. Lawrence Gallen, O.S.A., as Cleary's successor.

"Six years is the average length of service for most administrators," Cleary stated. "I told Father Driscoll last year that I planned on leaving after this year. It wasn't a sudden decision."

Cleary viewed his years on the job as successful. "I don't know if I can take credit for anything. My job is to help other people do things. The faculty and the individual deans are the most responsible." During the six years Cleary was vice-president, his office had a hand in the development of the Nursing master's degree program, as well as the Communication Arts major.

"I'm looking forward to going back to teaching," Cleary said. "I'll rejoin the full-time faculty in September. Plus, I have a lot of research I've wanted to do." Dr. Cleary will return to the English department, where he is a tenured member of the faculty.

In 1975, Cleary succeeded Father President Driscoll as vice president for academic affairs when Driscoll was named president.

Dr. James Cleary

Rabbi Speaks on Medical Ethics

By BOB HERMAN

Dr. Immanuel Jakobovits, the Chief Rabbi of the British Commonwealth of Nations, spoke about Jewish medical ethics, Tuesday, March 10 in the Connelly Center.

Jeff Page Photo

Dr. Immanuel Jakobovits

Jakobovits began by saying that he became interested in the study of medical ethics in the 1950s when he was the Chief Rabbi in Ireland and he saw the Christian perspective of medical ethics. Realizing that the Jewish people had never seriously dealt with the subject of medical ethics, he began to pursue the topic.

On the subject of abortion Jakobovits said, "The mother is an interested party, but not the sole judge. There are other factors and parties to take into account."

Jakobovits then gave the definition of murder as it is stated in the Hebrew Bible, "murder is striking a man." Jakobovits carefully pointed out that this says a man and not an embryo. He said that one major contradiction between Christian medical ethics and Jewish medical ethics is between the actuality of birth and the potentiality of birth. He also said that the Jewish Bible never refers to therapeutic abortion.

Another area Jakobovits talked about is whether to tell a patient he is dying. The Rabbi traced this question back to a biblical story in which a king demanded to know whether he was dying or not. Jakobovits said, "If you will cause physical or mental setbacks to the person or deny him peace of mind then you do not tell him. The physical welfare of the patient is the primary concern. If the doctor will bring the patient relief the Jewish people believe that a mother should not die so that the child should live."

Jakobovits also said that there are some areas about abortion in which Jewish medical ethics experts are still debating.

Presently the experts feel that if the mother will not be mentally harmed, then the baby should be born.

The Rabbi then addressed the subject of contraception. Jakobovits said that there are no blanket rulings when it comes to this area. "The only time contraceptives are really ever permitted are when they are used for medical purposes. In a way, the use of them violates a commandment," Jakobovits said.

Jakobovits closed by giving a message for the future saying, "The continuity of life today depend upon increasing production and economic tions to problems, but more humans to find a formula peace in the world we have cr ed. We are accountable, not sole power..."

New Course Offered

Due to the increasing professionalism taking place in the field of private security and the career opportunities associated with this professionalism, the Criminal Justice Program of Villanova University is offering in the 1981 fall semester the new course, C.J. 1000-01, Community Practicum in Private Security, Crowd Control and Collective Behavior. This interdisciplinary course emphasizes the social-psychological aspects of private security and collective behavior. Students participate in a supervised field experience which is supplemented by classroom lecture The supervised field e perience is under the auspic of SpectaGuard of the Spe trum Corporation (Spectacor)

In regard to preregisterin for the course, it is import to note that because of a co puter problem the course w not listed in the Preregi tration Master Schedule. Ho ever, students may preregist for the course with their ac demic advisers. Students de ing more information about course should see D McKenna, room 209, Va Hall.

Aid to El Salvador Debated

By ANNE SUYDAM

The Political Union held a debate on El Salvador, Monday, March 16. The House took the position of sending no more military aid to El Salvador.

Brother Ray Tetrault was the main speaker. Tetrault has never been to El Salvador but he has worked in missionaries around the world and in some third-world countries.

Brother May Tetrault

Jeff Page Photo

Tetrault took a strong stand against any type of military aid, feeling the advisors presently in El Salvador should not be there. He commented, "I think we have no right to dictate to another country. We've got to stop playing games with their political lives."

He emphasized that the general military aid was wrong because we are essentially "helping people to kill their own people." Economic aid for better food, education and land reform was Tetrault's suggestion. He felt strongly that it would be good to ask groups representing the people what they want stating, "You have to talk to these people."

Speakers from the conservative, moderate and liberal parties also spoke. The Conservative chairman, Joel Renzo, basically agreed with Tetrault about the continuance of economic rather than military aid.

A representative of the Moderate Party, Bob Monserrat, felt the Junta should get what it needs to maintain stability to allow for land reform. He felt if the Junta is given the opportunity, it has the potential for a government without any Soviet influence.

Owen Evans, the Liberal Party chairman, said "There is nothing we can do. There is no sense in stabilizing it (El Salvador) because of the unpopular regime." He emphasized that the country needs "food and water, not tanks."

Tetrault closed the debate stating that emphasis must be on the people, not personal interests.

Prof Views El Salvador

By RICHARD DI STEFANO

The United States is mistaken in its current policy of giving aid, including the services of more than 50 military advisors, to El Salvador, according to Dr. Michael Burke, associate professor of history at Villanova.

According to Burke, "There has been a stalemate since the mid-1970's between the Left and Right in El Salvador."

The Left consists of well-educated, patriotic Marxists, as well as guerrillas and other radicals of the working class. The Right is an oligarchy: a few dominant families who own most of the land and wield power over the masses.

The present Right regime of Jose Napoleon Duarte is being buttressed by President Reagan's Administration, a position that Burke observes is in conflict with the Roman Catholic Church.

While visiting Mexico during the spring vacation, Burke noted resentful sentiments against United States involvement in El Salvador. The Mexicans have long watched with displeasure the interference of their northern neighbor; cited particularly is the evident hypocrisy characterizing United States admonitions to the U.S.S.R. to allow other countries' freedom in their own internal affairs, while the United States assists governments in other countries.

Burke feels that the United States is playing into the hands of the very forces in Central America the United States is attempting to thwart, namely the Cubans and the Soviets. With the United States embracing the Right, Burke explained, the Left will "cozy up to Cuba," which is eager to become patron to the Salvadorean Left.

The possible results of a change in government for the Left include "the expropriation of property . . . and little pluralistic democracy," commented Burke, who continues that the latter outcome historically has proven to be all but impossible to instill in El Salvador under any conditions; the former consequence is undesirable though preferable to more bloodshed.

In view of this, United States policy toward El Salvador should be to allow that country to settle its own internal problems, concluded Burke.

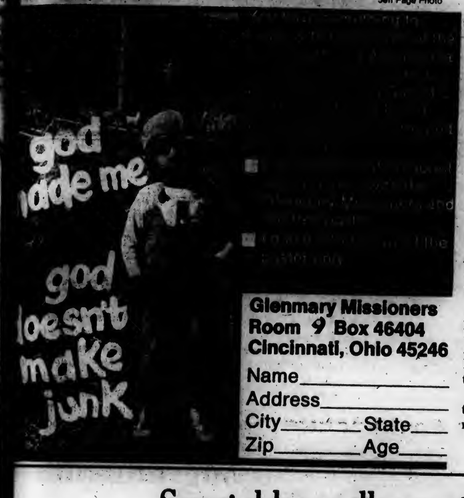
Dr. Michael Burke Jeff Page Photo

Landlords

(Continued from page 1)

According to Peggy Michulka, of the Montgomery County Community Affairs office, "A landlord may deny an apartment to anyone he feels is unsuitable, because he is assumed to be acting in the best interests of his tenants." But a new law passed in Philadelphia, which states that no landlord may deny a prospective tenant an apartment provided that tenant has enough money, has provoked interest as to whether or not such a law would be beneficial in Radnor Township.

Discriminate



Glenmary Missioners
Room 9 Box 46404
Cincinnati, Ohio 45246
Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State____
Zip_____ Age____

TYI (for students)

Miss Villanova

Ladies, wouldn't you love to be crowned as the first "Miss Villanova"! The A.C.S. is sponsoring the first annual Miss Villanova Contest during Spring Fever Week. The contest will include evening gown, bathing suit, and talent competition. Any organization or dorm can nominate someone. Check future Villanovan's for details.

Gamma Phi

Gamma Phi will have an important meeting on Tuesday, March 24, at 12:45, in Bartley 209. All members must attend as nominations for next year's officers will be taken. Also discussed will be the already started high school visitations, and the Dinner Dance at the Paxon Hollow Country Club. Tickets are already on sale and at $32 per couple, they are going fast!

Military Draft

The Social Action Committee presents a discussion panel on "The Military Draft and Draft Registration." The presentation is aimed at answering student questions about conscription, the selective service system, military preparedness registration. Informational and evaluative.

Panelists include:

Mr. James Bristol, Director, Anti-Draft Program, American Friends Service Committee.

Prof. Peter Goldberger, V.U. School of Law, Member of National Lawyer's Guild Draft and Military Law Task Force.

Ms. Joan Lamb, Public Affairs Officer, National Headquarters, Selective Service System.

Brig.-Gen. Theo. C. Mataxis, U.S. Army (Ret.), Assistant Superintendent and Commandant of Cadets, Valley Forge Military Academy.

7 p.m., Tuesday, March 31, in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Free. The public is invited.

Win a Cruise

Win, win, win! The Villanova Sailing Team is sponsoring a raffle. Win an all expense paid Chesapeake Bay cruise on a 42 ft. sailboat. Cheese say weekend in April; bring along three friends. Tickets are only $1.00 and available from Sailing Team members. Drawing is March 29.

Nursing Lectureship

The Fourth Annual Distinguished Nursing Lectureship will be held on Thursday, March 26, in the Connelly Center's Villanova Room.

The lecture will be divided into a morning session, beginning at 10:15, and an afternoon session, beginning at 1:00.

Italian Club Movie

The Italian Club Presents: "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

Academy Award winning film.

Starring Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni.

Time — 7:30, Tuesday, March 24.

Place — Connelly Center.

Price — $1.50 Donation.

Track Meet

The Wildcat Running Club is sponsoring an All-Comers Track Meet on Saturday, April 11. The proceeds of this meet will go to the American Cancer Society. The events of this meet will range from the 100 meter dash to the 3000 meter run. There will also be a pentathalon and a team and Fraternity championship. We are hoping for your support in helping us publicize the meet as well as your support in participating in the meet. Entry fees will probably be $1.00 per event ($2.00 for relays) and awards will be given to the top three finishers in each event. For any further information please contact:

Steve Skrobala, 525-9433, Rm. 16, Sullivan; Jim McNichol or Jim O'Brien, 525-9116, Rm. 322, Fedigan.

Band Dinner Dance

The date of the University Band's dinner dance has been changed to Friday, April 3. Tickets are on sale in the Connelly Center ticket office from Monday, March 23, thru Tuesday, March 31.

Band Elections

Elections for University Band's officers for the 1981-82 season will be held on Monday, March 23, at 6:00 p.m., in St. Mary's Auditorium. All playing members must attend. Band front members will be contacted about their elections.

Bicycle Club Ride

The Villanova Bicycle Club will hold a 10-mile ride on Sunday, March 22, beginning at 1:00 p.m. in front of the Connelly Center. Any questions call 645-7120.

Middle East Lecture

Former Governor General of the West Bank, Acharon Davidi, will be speaking in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall, April 2, at 8 p.m. His address will deal with the Jewish-Arab conflict which exists not only in the West Bank area, but throughout the whole Middle East. Admission is free.

Latin America

Honors Junior Week, 1981, "Latin America: U.S. Policy in a Changing World," announces:

Friday, March 20, Bartley Hall Room 110, 7:30 p.m.

Blake Friscia, head of the Latin American division of Chase Manhattan, will give the corporate perspective on Latin American economics.

Monday, March 23, Connelly Cinema, 7:30 p.m.

C. Gerald Walsh, Professor of Economics, Villanova University, will give an overview of the current political and economic status of Latin America.

Tuesday, March 24, Villanova Center, Connelly 8:00 p.m.

Senator Frank Church, former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will speak on multinational and U.S. policies concerning Latin America — their effect and their future prospects.

Water Polo Festival

The Villanova Varsity Water Polo team invites everyone to come see the "Sport of the 80's." The first annual V.U. Water Polo Festival will be held in the Field House on Saturday, March 21. Villanova games will be at 12:00 p.m. against Temple, 2:45 against Navy, and 5:15 against U. of Penn. All are welcome and admission is free.

Theatre Major

Any student at Villanova may apply to be a Theatre major. The undergraduate major is an academic and practical program which prepares the student for secondary level teaching, graduate school, or advanced professional training in the theatre. Work on the theatre major can begin as early as sophomore year. A theatre minor is also possible. Stop by Vasey 108 or call 645-4760 for further information.

Forensics Evening

Interested in seeing a different type of dramatic performance? The Forensic Society is putting on an Evening with Forensics, on Tuesday, March 31, in the Connelly Center Cinema. Admission free.

Job Interviews

Dr. Don Lombardi, personnel manager of American Hospital Supply Corp. will be speaking to students on the topic of Interviews — from the Employer's Perspective. Dr. Lombardi did his dissertation in the area of interviews skills and will be sharing research results and helpful hints so that you can improve your interview style. The presentation will be held on March 26 at 12:30 p.m. in the Bryn Mawr Room of the Connelly Center.

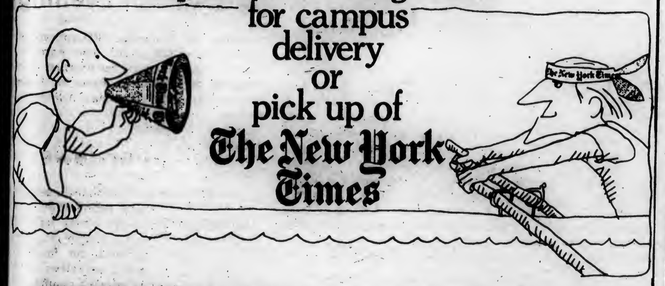
Trip To D.C.

Those still wanting to go on a trip to Washington, D.C. may sign up in the Political Science office. We will leave the Field House at 7 a.m. We will visit the State Department, the Supreme Court, and Capital Hill. We will be back by 7 p.m. The cost is $8.00.

Used Textbook Sale

Those who still have not gotten their money from the textbook sale may pick it up in the Student Activities office next week. Last Chance!

Special low college rates for campus delivery or pick up of The New York Times



The New York Times is now available at a special subscription rate of 20¢ per copy which is 20% below the newsstand price. The paper can be delivered anywhere on campus.

To Start Wednesday, March 25:

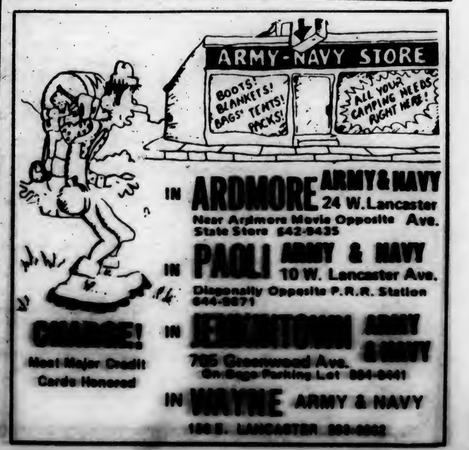
Return this ad, your name, phone no., $6.60 (checks payable to Dan Berninger) & where you want the paper delivered - to the Dean of Men's Office (2nd floor Tolentine). Rates will be prorated if you start after March 25.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

PHONE NO. _____

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118



IN ARDMORE ARMY & NAVY 24 W. Lancaster Near Ardmore Movie Opposite Ave. State Store 642-0435

IN PAOLI ARMY & NAVY 10 W. Lancaster Ave. Diagonally Opposite P.R.R. Station 644-0871

IN JENKINTOWN ARMY & NAVY 705 Greenwood Ave. On Sage Parking Lot 884-0441

IN WAYNE ARMY & NAVY 138 E. LANCASTER 688-6262

CHARGE! Most Major Credit Cards Honored

Is it Another Vietnam?

El Salvador Proves Dangerous

The ghost of Vietnam is still present in America. Our failure in this Southeast Asian country has influenced our foreign policy for the last decade. With the unrest in El Salvador, talk of Vietnam has again risen to the surface. Debate continues on whether El Salvador will become another Vietnam.

By closely examining the situation, one realizes that El Salvador does have several distinct differences from Vietnam. The unrest now is almost in America's "backyard," as opposed to the rice paddiesof Southeast Asia. El Salvador is a much smaller country with a flat and barren terrain. Its coastline is more easily patrollable. Indeed, any American involvement in El Salvador would not have to overcome the serious obstacles present in Vietnam. Still, we are apologetic about even sending advisors to El Salvador. We are afraid of another Vietnam.

Segments of our society view this as a lack of will. They say that America has become a "sleeping giant," afraid to use its vast resources. Perhaps strong action will rid us of the ghost of Vietnam.

Others, including many college students of the time, view the Vietnam era differently; they feel that Vietnam was a mistake. To them, it was an attempt to impose an unpopular government upon a people who did not wish our presence. Even though the experience was painful and costly, we learned a lesson.

When we think of our actions in El Salvador, we cannot forget Vietnam; more importantly, we should not forget Vietnam. Any society which rests solely on force to preserve order is an inherently unstable society. The solution to the unrest in El Salvador lies not in bullets, but in reform.

The present military junta has made gains toward political stability in the country. Elections are scheduled in the next few years. Land reform has taken place to more equitably distribute much of the wealth in El Salvador. After months of battle, the majority of people in El Salvador seem to support the present government.

An American military presence in El Salvador could have the effect of aiding the rebels in El Salvador, rather than eliminating them. As in Vietnam, the people could unite with the guerillas to expel any American influence upon their country. If we learned one thing from Vietnam, it is that force is not the solution to every world problem.

If the United States was truly interested in preserving the stability of El Salvador, it would be more concerned with providing economic aid. El Salvador is basically a poor country, and the fighting proves that many of the poor are not willing to accept their plight. A political and economic solution in El Salvador proves to be the only peaceful solution. If we fail in preserving the present government by these means, we may just be in for another Vietnam.

letters

Florida Fun Criticized

To the Editor:

Re: "Florida offers Emotional Freedom" (March 13, 1981)

I was sorry to read Bill Clark's view on the emotional release which Florida seemed to offer. While I am happy for all those fortunate people to have had the opportunity to enjoy Florida, I think their purposes for going were slightly misdirected. Mr. Clark began with a highly commendable philosophy towards his fellow man when he stated that "the vacation afforded an opportunity to learn more about others, and in turn, to learn more about myself." Sentiments such as these are indeed rare to find in an atmosphere where the ultimate is to get "really wasted." If more people had a positive attitude of oneself and others, and worked to fully develop it, things in general might be better in this world. More specifically, it would be nice if it were "so natural to say things to strangers" here at Villanova to further solidify, or establish for the first time, a true sense of community.

But to return to the sunny shores of Fort Lauderdale, I found it, shall I say, interesting to read that men and women were slinging insults back and forth in bars and people were plotting revenge for rather silly actions. These two examples, while expressing the levity with which they were meant to indicate, have connotations contrary to the idea of universal brotherhood. And, despite the fact that Mr. Clark wished to leave Villanova behind, it appeared that he brought it right along with him with the same topics of Dougherty Hall conversation, such as how little (or how much) dieting females have eaten or how drunk one was over the weekend. Thankfully, however, the need for police patrol is unnecessary most of the time at Villanova; while we do have an occasional nose-busting, the infractions aren't severe or often enough to merit surveilance by the law.

Vacationing is for the purpose of relaxation and oftentimes reflection on one's own life. If it entails observing and learning about people around you, then that is a sign of maturity. To say that police patrol is necessary, even "easy to understand" seems to be a sad contradiction when it is applied to a vacation-land situation. Perhaps Mr. Clark would like to take another look at his life — he might realize that insults, revenge, nightly fights or things like wet-willy contests do not indicate that one is "truly free" but truly irresponsible.

Emily DiFlo
Class of '83

Prison Request

Dear Editor:

Through a socially illegal indiscretion on my part, I find myself an inmate at the Arizona State Prison. Though I was not a pauper on the streets, the law has confiscated everything I own and transformed me into one.

Having no family or income to speak of (15 cents an hour, 4 hours a day), I am appealing to your student body for 4 items that I desperately need:

1.) Pen-pals, correspondence with anyone wishing to write.

2.) Stamps to carry on the correspondence.

Though this may seem like begging, it is the only recourse I have. Someday, maybe I too, can render help to a fallen fellow human. What else can I say except, thank you for your time.

Respectfully yours,
James E. Wor

Editor's Note: If anyone is interested in obtaining the address, please come up to the Villanova office.

Congratulations

Dear Editor:

I would like to congratulate our excellent Villanova Basketball team on their performance at the Big East Conference in Syracuse last weekend. Their victory over Providence in overtime was stupendous — truly an intense game. Their sportsman-like conduct and spirit are no less than praiseworthy. The effort these fine players put out through the entire tournament was recognized and acclaimed by both Villanova and Syracuse fans. The final game of the tournament was one that truly showed the ideal match between the Syracuse Orangemen and the Villanova Wildcats.

Congratulations guys on a superb effort. You've given me one more reason to have pride in my school.

Sincerely yours,
Ann M. Moody
Class of 198

BOARD OF EDITORS

Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey, Sharon Winters
News, Mary Anne Granger, Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone, Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki, Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia, Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida, Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese
Advertising, Dawn Miller

Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

the Villanovan

News: Carol Aikons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Lavelle, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli.

Features: Mary Anne Bilz, Re Crossan, Deidre Flanagan, Susan French, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Edward Lis, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, Catherine Murphy, John Pace, Betty Rutkowski, Cathy Shiels, Kate McDonald.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Raden, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Shehan, Fred Pascatore, Mark Kelly, Echtelmaier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPasca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmstag.

Sports: William Bark, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Dave Glickman, Larry Gomes, Michael Healy, Michael Jacobs, Jeff Lerner, Kathy Maher, Ray Mike, Al Obermaier, Peter Ryan, Jerry Ventresca, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Cosley

Minority Response

Dear Editor

Villanova has the state's lowest enrollment of black students, and that is nothing to be proud of. Excuses from the Director of Admissions (Villanovan 2/20/81) such as, "Our location is against us" and, "It's a hassle for (prospective students) to get here (Villanova)" are very contradictory. Villanova is twelve (12) miles from Philadelphia and has less black students enrolled than schools located in the mountains. The Paoli Local, Norristown High Speed Line and the Z-bus stop on campus. Public transportation on the Main Line will always be in superb condition because this is where the money is. I see no hassles here.

What can be done to attract black students to V.U.? One (1): Ask current black students for names of high school students that are interested in V.U. Yes, despite popular belief, there are black high school students interested in Villanova. Two (2): allow a group of black students to recruit in the City schools. We know the attitudes of the students and can relate to them in a more beneficial manner than an administrator can. More importantly, black students will not go into a high school with the negative attitude of present Villanova recruiters. Villanova's black students do not think, "It's a hassle." If Villanova's black students cannot get black high school students on campus, then it cannot be done.

The falsehood that Villanova's administration bridges the gap for those City students who must adjust to the suburbs can be easily disproved. Once a black student is accepted, he is placed in a freshman orientation group with no other black student. This has been the case in my three (3) years here, and I still call it alienation. Villanova's only black organization (the Black Cultural Society) receives a useless budget year after year; thus, there is no way for blacks to welcome their own.

Villanova black students try very hard to make life on campus livable. Talent shows, award luncheons and dances have all been instituted in the past and new groups like the Gospel Ensemble and the Black Engineering Society are proof that black students care for each other. University support for these efforts would be deeply deserved since we pay activity fees also.

Administrative statements like: It's a hassle for blacks to get here; We make an effort to bridge the city/suburb gap; Black students would rather go to Temple and La-Salle; assure black Villanovans that the administration does not understand our needs, interest, or opinions. Perhaps the Villanovan could have an "On Campus" section for just black student opinions, since we never get in this section at any other time.

1.6% black enrollment sticks out like a sore thumb, and the Villanova black students dislike it just as much as the administration should. We would like to see a change. We promise, it will not hurt.

Stefan Roots
EE '82

on campus

By ROBERT McGOVERN and MARK TOOMEY

Villanova students were asked to give their opinion on the situation that has arisen in El Salvador. How do you feel about the way Reagan is handling it? What do you think we should do?

Deirdre Flanagan, Sophomore, English

The U.S. is most noted for its attitudes on freedom and because of that, we have an obligation to ensure freedom in other countries.

Kevin McKeon, Junior, C.E.

So far I agree with what Reagan has done. We might be able to hurt them economically, but I would disagree with any military action. If the situation perists for any long period of time, I think we should

Suzanne Leonard, Freshman, Liberal Arts

We should concentrate on remedying U.S. internal problems, such as the economy, before pursuing outside interests.

Bob Herman, Sophomore, Accounting

I hope it doesn't become another Viet Nam. Reagan should give our support, but it has to be limited or otherwise our involvement could become too great.

Mark Spencer, Junior, General and Nikolai, Freshman, Undecided

Nick and I feel that as long as we get our officials to use their intelligence to handle the situation, then we should get involved. We should use our brains before our muscle.

Jennifer Murray, Junior, B.S.G.

If it's that important for the revolution to be stopped, then we should intervene. We should give arms and financial support, but send no military personnel.

Vince Gafano, Sophomore, M.E.

We're handling it terribly. We should stay out of El Salvador. They're not bothering us, why should be bother them?

John Nuttall, Freshman, E.E.

Basically we should support any requests for help from the existing government. We shouldn't get involved as we did in Viet Nam, but there isn't much chance of that happening. We should support any movement that insures a peaceful transition.

Septa Strike Prompts 'Nova Car-Pooling

By MARY ANNE GRANGER

The strike by SEPTA transit workers in Philadelphia has prompted Villanova to implement a plan designed to aid commuter students affected by the strike. The plan could be in effect as early as next week.

The plan will encourage students living in the same general areas to carpool to Villanova together. The problems which the strike is causing for students were first addressed Friday, March 13. Jim Gleason, a Villanova student, approached Father John Deegan, vice president for student life, to "see if Villanova was going to have anything to help Philadelphia students affected by the strike," explained Gleason. "He said that was a very good question and directed me to Henry Amoroso, student body president."

According to Amoroso, Gleason pointed out the possible problems the strike could cause. "He was concerned in that SEPTA went on strike four years ago for 44 days. This time it is only affecting getting into Philadelphia. However, if the strike expands, it may affect commuter students."

"We hope to set up a temporary ride board in Dougherty," said Amoroso. "Then we want to organize car-pooling by students. Even if the strike is settled or does not affect students, we hope they will consider car pooling instead of driving separate cars."

Amoroso also said that Dean of Men Tony Martin has offered help in getting computer print-outs of all commuters, listed by zip codes. "Upon obtaining these print-outs," we will then send a copy of the print-out to each person in that zip code area with an accompanying letter." The letter will explain the possible problems of the strike, and inform students of the plans Amoroso is trying to implement.

"I hope to have this in effect at the beginning of next week," noted Amoroso.

Senate Holds Meeting

By DELPHINE STIGLER

The Senate Budget Committee has completed its responsibility of monitoring the preparation of the budget and today the University Senate will meet to discuss the report.

The report of the Senate Budget Committee was approved by a vote of eight to zero, and today it will go before the Senate for final action. If the Senate approves the report, it will then go to the University Council, which will approve the report compiled by the Senate Budget Committee, and follow its recommendations to approve the Administrative Budget Committee's work, the Senate may either make recommended changes to the Board of Trustees or pass the budget with reservations or modifications.

ATLANTIC CITY CASINO TRIP

CAESARS BOARDWALK REGENCY

Friday, March 27, 1981

Bus Departs 5 PM from Field House

ONLY $5.00 PER PERSON

Price Includes:

— Round trip transportation on a luxury bus.
— Open bar on luxury bus.
— Complimentary drinks in casino.

For Reservations and Information Call: 527-5761

*DISCOUNTS AVAILABLE FOR GROUPS.

the Villanovan Classifieds

HELP WANTED FOR SUMMER CAMP

Summer camp for retarded near Lake Placid, now hiring. Campus interviews arranged. Write 2575 Troy Rd., Schenectady, NY 12309 or phone 518-783-1233.

Apt. mate needed to share rent in 2 bdrm., Havertown location. Rent from now to May or August. Only 15 min. from Villanova. Call eve. 789-7017.

Electric Smith-Corona 1979 typewriter for sale. Blue, portable typewriter with case is in excellent condition. Call for more information, 527-6986 before 9 a.m. or after 7 p.m. Asking $100. Don't pass this offer by.

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS

Openings for bunk counselor/instructors in many sports, waterfront, tennis, arts/crafts, general; also group leaders, drama director, music director, Point O'Pines Camp for Girls in NY's Adirondacks. Contact: Andrew Rosen, 221 Harvard Ave., Swarthmore, Pa. 19081, 328-6693.

SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE

Applicants are now being considered for the 1981 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts, Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Theater Director, Piano Accompanist and Singing, Archery, Tennis, Trampoline, Gymnastics, Photography, Cheerleading, Jazzercize, Scouting and Nature Study, A.R.C. Swimming instructor, Boating, Canoeing and Water Skiing instructor or General Athletics. COUNSELOR UNIT LEADERS must be college graduate experienced in camping. Able to plan schedule for activities, evening programs, etc. Supervise large staff. Write Camp Office, 720 Ardmore Ave., No. 102, Haverford Village, Ardmore, Pa. 19003 or phone Miss Sherman, [illegible]

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 765-5999.

PART TIME EVENINGS

Major investment company of Philadelphia is hiring individuals who would like to work as investment representatives. You will receive an excellent base salary, investment and [illegible] training. If you are a responsible individual interested in communicating with investors please call L. Kudas or L. Hunsicker at [illegible] for further information or a personal interview. Begin to plan your career with us

Personals

Tara Shanon (Tear-bear)
So glad you and your aristocratic toes made it to 21. Happy birthday!
Love & Kisses,
Your Friends Who Couldn't Do Better

Dear Cupid and B.M. Blarney, Thanks for the personals. It's nice to know someone really cares. You're the greatest.
Love,
Annie, Boo, CBS, Carol, Carrie, Col, Corky, Denise, Ellen, Farky, Fish, Gailmarie, Ginny, Jeany, Jess, Karen, Kelley, Kathy K., Lynda, Mary, Mag, Mickey, Monica, Nancy, Nap, Patty, Paul, Peg, Poz, Renee, Reśa, Rich, Rose, Shorty, Skip, Sue, Tim, Tony, Vez, Vicky, and Walt.

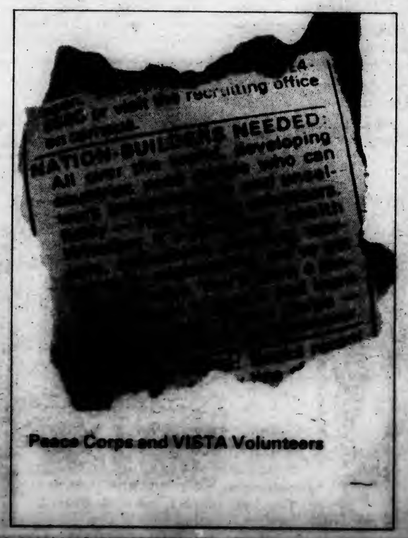
John Corino: RIP

A good man, that's true.
One of the few —
Left to defend himself from Cameron.

He had a good shot.
But the deadly dart he bought—
Down the auto clave a-standin.

Now he's resting in peace.
He'd run out his lease—
From living in the hallowed-halls of Austin.

He may return yet
For on that I'll bet
But the game, one of his nine lives, cost him.
Hot Dog Head
P.S. How high is an Austin fence?



Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES

BAUSCH & LOMB SOFT CONTACT LENSES $59.00

• CONTACT LENSES Fitting, Orientation, and Follow-Up. $25.00
• CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00
• THERMAL UNIT $35.00
• ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00

One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.

30 Day Money Back Guarantee on Cost of Lenses.

CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520

ARDMORE WEST SHOPPING CENTER ARDMORE, PA.

Organizations Perform Services

ΔΚΕ: Basketball

By ROBERT DUOMETSKY

On Tuesday March 24, the Delta Kappa Epsilon "B" Basketball team will take on the overpowering girls varsity basketball team in a challenge of the sexes at the fieldhouse. There will be tickets on sale for this fund raiser in which all proceeds will be donated to the Philadelphia chapter of United Cerebral Palsy. In the event they should lose to the Wildcats , they will match the amount of money collected from ticket sales as to bolster the donation to U.C.P.

The Wildcats will be led by Lisa Ortlip, who will use her 6-4 height in an attempt to dominate the boards against the Dekes. The girls were unwilling to comment on the rumor that they were going to take the Dekes to school and teach them how to play the game of basketball for fear that they might cross the fine line between over-confidence and confidence.

The Dekes are coming off of a 2-4 intramural season in which highlights were minimal. Captain Steve McEvoy expressed the confidence of the Dekes when he said, "I accept nothing less than perfection from my boys, I'm sure we'll put it together for this one." McEvoy will get some strong support from team players like Paul Hartwyck and the ever present Dan Hoffend.

This will be the second fund raiser the Dekes have had for United Cerebral Palsy. The first, a "slave auction," was a great success thanks to the support of the student body. Once again the Dekes are looking to the student body for support to help raise money for the worthy cause in the hope that someday research will reveal a cure for the crippler of many children and young adults.

ΔΚΝ: Swimathon

By CAROL ALKONS

Last year, the sisters of Delta Kappa Nu, a service-social sorority, were asked by the Eastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the Leukemia Society of America if they would consider raising money to help in the fight against leukemia. This year, ΔΚΝ was able to incorporate that suggestion into its plans for community service through sponsoring a Swimathon for Leukemia research.

Leukemia is a disease of the blood forming organs and is the principal killer of children (other than accidents) beyond infancy in the United States.

Marie Petrozziello, ΔΚΝ's service vice-president, and Carol Wyland, treasurer, were co-chairmen of the fund-raising event. "The Leukemia Society wrote to us because they knew we were a service-oriented organization, but left it for us to decide how we would raise the money. We suggested the Swimathon, and everyone agreed. The Leukemia Society thought it was a very exciting idea, and gave us their full support," Petrozziello explained.

On Saturday, March 14, the Swimathon was held from noon to 6 p.m. at St. Mary's pool. As onlookers cheered by the poolside, each of the 48 swimmers, including some not affiliated with the sorority, swam one hour in the fundraising event. The swimmers had obtained sponsors to pledge money for each lap he or she could complete during the hour.

The ΔΚΝ sisters and pledges also collected donations at the door, counted laps, and served refreshments, which were donated by local businesses. Lured by loud music and frenzied excitement, other well-wishers stopped in to congratulate the swimmers for their well-intentioned efforts.

"We won't know how much money we have raised until it has all been collected and turned in, but we feel that the turnout here is a good sign," commented Wyland.

Petrozziello, who was "really impressed by the amount of support we received," said that another Swimathon is "definite for next year, and probably for more hours."

Sophomore Laura Siberski (ΔΚΝ Pledge) swam 74 laps as sisters cheered her on.

Jeff Page Photo

ΔΤΔ: Monopoly Marathon

By SUSAN WILMARTH

If Monopoly is your game, then the West Lounge in Dougherty was the place to be from 6:00 p.m. last Friday until 6:00 p.m. Saturday to see Lamda Tau Delta Monopoly marathon. Sean Boyan, came up with the idea of the marathon as a service project to raise money for the Philadelphia Childrens Hospital. "We picked Childrens Hospital because it is the only hospital in the area which is working on children's diseases," said Boyan.

Drew Gelderman, LTD's service chairman predicted that the frat raised between $1,000 and $1,500 for the hospital. Kevin McLaughlin led the brothers with 85 sponsors and raised close to $200 by himself. Unfortunately, that didn't help McLaughlin's game, since he held the longest Monopoly losing streak of the marathon with eight losses after only 19-1/2 hours of play. Unofficially, it was a close race for frat champ with Mark Hughes, Eric Pippen, and Jack Fernandez who all tied for the most wins with three.

John Burke pictured with brothers during the wee hours of LTD's Monopoly Marathon.

Jeff Page Photo

LTD's pledges were out in full force and made a big contribution to the marathon. Pledge Captain, Dan Capodilupo, even spent his breaks "trying to raise more money." Pledge Art Beck saw the marathon as "a good chance to meet all the brothers in the frat." When asked if anyone was caught cheating or if any fighting went on, the pledges looked shocked and said, "We don't fight . . . we are brothers!"

Don't get the idea that staying up all night playing Monopoly isn't without its advantages. Some really deep philosophical thought resulted from the delerium of Patrick Flynn who was heard to comment, "Monopoly is an island of stability in our ever changing economy . . . I'll always land on Electric Company and owe $75, no matter what happens . . . I'll always lose!" Most of the brothers were just too tired to match Flynn's words of wisdom, but perhaps the words of a bleary eyed Sean Boyan best sum up the prevalent attitude, "after this, I'll never play another Monopoly game again!"

ΑΦΩ: Blood Drive

Alpha Phi Omega, the national service fraternity, is sponsoring its annual blood drive in conjunction with the Red Cross on March 24, 26 and 27.

Giving blood not only benefits the Red Cross but insures an adequate blood supply. Some of the blood is broken down into individual components such as platelets, plasma, and red and white blood cells for medical use.

A bloodmobile will provide over 400 units of blood for hospital patients. Nearly 1,300 pints of blood are needed daily in the Penn-Jersey Region. Red Cross supplies nearly 85% of the blood used by patients in 113 area hospitals. A safe, dependable public blood supply simply won't be available unless volunteers choose to donate it.

Tables will be set up today in Dougherty and the Connelly Center from 9:30 to 4:30 for the purpose of registering potential blood donors. This procedure will guarantee a minimal delay at the actual donation.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be on campus Tuesday, March 24, Thursday, March 26, and Friday, March 27. It will be located in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall from 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, and 10:00 a.m. to 3:30 on Friday.

For any further information please contact Russ Hoblitzell in the Omega office, room 213 Dougherty, at 645-7237.

Health Discussed

By KATE MC DONALD

The College of Nursing and the Academic Committee of the Undergraduate Nursing Senate are sponsoring a series of nursing mini-seminars. These in-depth reviews of selected topics are "offered and geared to a general audience and given without credit," said Donna Zimmaro, UNS Academic Committee Chairperson.

Faculty members volunteered to teach the courses. They will be held in Bartley 110 from 6:30-8:30 p.m. every Tuesday beginning March 24. Mini-seminars include, in order: "Acute Respiratory Distress," "Oncology Nursing," "Neurological Assessment," and "Psychosomatic Illness."

The seminars range from clinical to psychological topics to satisfy a variety of interests. "For example," Zimmaro pointed out, "a course such as 'Psychosomatic Illness' would be of greater interest to most people than something like 'Acute Respiratory Distress'."

The first class, "Cardiac Arrest and EKG Monitoring," was March 10. "The turn-out was very good as approximately 35 students attended the mini-seminar," Zimmaro said. "After the lecture, questions were asked to evoke discussion."

The second course, "Child Abuse," was held March 19. "Students were trained to look for certain signs that a child is being abused." Zimmaro added, "They also learned how to deal with and report a child abuse case."

Most of those who attend the mini-seminars are nurses, but the courses are open to all. "If you are interested, this is a opportunity to learn [illegible]," Zimmaro pointed out.

Campus Clip

The Connelly Center held back nothing in its one-year anniversary celebration. Among the many freebies distributed were balloons, popcorn, and cake.

Jeff Page Photo

Luck O' The Irish To Ye

By MARIE CROSSAN

Sure and begorrah, 'tis that time of year for shamrocks, leprechauns, pots of gold, corned beef and cabbage, potatoes, green beer and red noses. For one day, everyone forsakes their own personal geneology and takes pride in the wearin' of the green. Even though it is now insisted that St. Patrick was not Irish at all, but in fact of Scottish ancestry, he is still the patron of that fair Emerald Isle.

It is difficult to pinpoint the exact origins of St. Patrick's Day celebrations, however it can be assumed that they originated in an Irishman's mind. Historically speaking, St. Patrick was born in Kilpatrick, Scotland in 387 AD. Sold into Irish slavery at the age of sixteen, he escaped to Britain and entered an order of St. Martin monks. He was then sent by Pope Celestine in 433 to spread Christianity in Ireland. After he arrived there he proceeded to perform miracles and spread the teachings of Christ throughout the land. He died on March 17, 493.

The use of a shamrock as a traditional St. Paddy's Day symbol originated as a means of explaining the mystery of the Holy Trinity. Each of the petals represented a part of the Trinity with the stem signifying the unity of the three persons.

As for the snakes, word has it that St. Patrick did indeed rid the countryside of the horrid creatures. Throughout his life St. Patrick was known as a builder of churches and a performer of miracles. Ireland celebrates this holiday as a religious event. Itis similar to the celebration of the church at Christmas time.

Celebrations in the United States first took place in Boston in 1737 by the Charitable Irish Society. The idea soon spread to the city of brotherly love in 1780. Four years later New York City picked up on the idea.

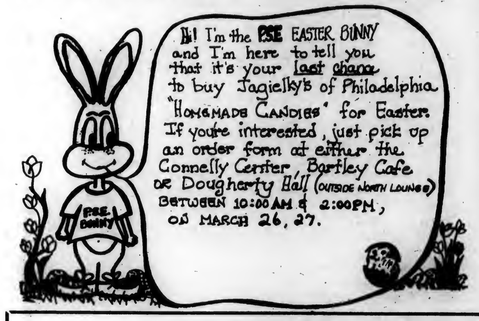
New York seems to be the true leader in St. Patrick's Day celebrations at the present date. Their annual parade draws gazers from far and wide. Villanova even sent several delegations to join in on the festivities.

In recent years, St. Patrick's Day has lost its true meaning. It has now become an excuse for indulging in of all things, green beer. Wilmington, Delaware centers its festivities around the Logan House. Philadelphia spreads its good cheer around the entire city. Even Baltimore probably has some semblance of a celebration.

Villanova celebrated the occasion with the aid of the Clancy Brothers. Their use of wit, humo and traditional Irish Folk song brought the true Irish Spirit to th Villanova Campus. This, course, means the show was lacking any of the pseudo-Iris songs such and "My Wild Iris Rose" and "Mother MacCree." In stead the likes of "The Butche Boy" and "The Croppy Boy" were heard.

To those of us who were stuc among the academically oriente folk and the likes of Dougherty' Irish Stew, I offer my condolence and the reminder that there i always next year. To those wh were lucky enough to have bee able to participate in th festivities, I send my sincere wishes that the day was full o good times and memories.

So, may the road rise to mee you, may the wind always be a your back, and may the remainde of this semester be a pleasant ex perience. Whatever your nam may be, for one day in the year it's easy being green.



EXPERIENCE THE THRILL OF FLYING

THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE OFFICER PLACEMENT REPRESENTATIVE WILL BE ON CAMPUS APRIL 23 AT PLACEMENT OFFICE.

TO CONDUCT INTERVIEWS FOR: FLYING PROGRAMS

ADVANCE SIGN-UP REQUIRED

AIR FORCE
A great way of life.

CAMPUS CORNER RE-OPENS ! !

TOP QUALITY

PIZZA, HOAGIES, GRINDERS, HAMBURGERS, HOT DOGS, ONION RINGS, FRENCH FRIES, ETC.

527-3606

TAKE OUT & DELIVERY SERVICE

DELIVERY: WEEKDAYS 6-10 PM

WEEKENDS 5-11 PM

Open Weekdays 11 AM - 10 PM

Fri. & Sat. 12 noon - 2 AM

20% OFF On Purchase Of Hoagie, Meatball Sandwiches, Steaks and Pizza.
ONE ITEM PER PERSON
Offer Expires April 20, 1981

Mrs. McKenna's

SWEATERS

IRISH • ICELANDIC • SCOTTISH
PERUVIAN • HAND KNITS • TWEEDS

206 E. LANCASTER AVE.
ARDMORE, PA. 19003

PHONE:
642-8110

ATTENTION ENGINEERS:

SKF JOIN OUR GROWING INDUSTRIAL TEAM!

SKF—the world's largest manufacturer of bearings has immediate openings for qualified candidates in several Career Development Programs.

- Manufacturing
- Applications
- Design
- Sales
- International

SKF manufactures, sells and distributes thousands of ball and roller bearing variations—Exact Bearings that range in size from ½" OD to 86" OD and weigh from less than one ounce to more than six tons. SKF rolling bearings are designed to meet every type requirement from home appliances and cars to jet aircraft engines, construction, mining, printing, farming and machine tool applications.

SKF Career Development Programs are designed to help you broaden your skills through diverse training with the industry's marketing and engineering leaders!

You get on-the-job experience as well as formal classroom lectures . . . functional responsibilities . . . multiple department exposure. You'll find challenge and opportunity.

Lend your talents to this vital industry where the promotional opportunities are as great as the many outstanding innovations to be introduced.

Please send a full resume indicating areas of interest to the attention of:

John T. Kerr
Personnel Manager
SKF Industries, Inc.
1100 First Avenue
King of Prussia, PA 19406

M/F An equal opportunity employer.

BILLY NOVA

PRESTIGE TYPING SERVICE

Theses, Dissertations, Manuscripts, Foreign Languages (Linguist on Staff), Medical, Resumes, Etc. — Near Campus Representative:

482-1796

20% DISCOUNT
With College I.D.
at
The Junior League Thrift Shop
604 Lancaster Avenue
Bryn Mawr, (across from Bryn Mawr Acme)
on all non-consignment items during the month of February
525-8513

FULL SCHOLARSHIPS TO MEDICAL SCHOOL!

YOU RECEIVE:

____All tuition paid in full to any AMA or AOA approved school of medicine or osteopathy.

____Reimbursement for all books and fees.

____A stipend of $485/month for 10½ months per year.

____An opportunity for clerkship 45 days per year for clinical or military indoctrination experience.

____A high quality internship and residency program.

____AND MORE!

SOUND INTERESTING? To find out if you qualify, contact LCDR Mary Ellen Quinn or Lt. Mark Walker, Medical Programs, U.S. Navy, 128 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, PA 19102. Or Call Collect, (215) 597-9680 or (215) 564-3826.

MEN'S SINGLE PITCH INTRAMURAL SOFTBALL TOURNEY

REGISTRATION MARCH 13-19

STARTS MARCH 23

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL

REGISTRATION MARCH 13-19

STARTS WEEK OF 3/27

Open to Rosemont Students

CO-ED TRACK & FIELD MEET

REGISTRATION MARCH 13-19

MEET APRIL 2

TURN ROSTERS INTO INTRAMURAL OFFICE IN ALUMNI HALL

LSAT GMAT
GRE/GRE - Psyche

* Experienced Faculty
* Full 36 hour course
* Central Location
* Up-to-date Materials

See our posters or Call or Write for FREE Brochure:

382-3790

DAEDALUS education services
305 Bryan St., Havertown, Pa. 19083

THESIS WRITING?

Because word processing has memory storage, large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.

For Pricing Info, Call

WORD PROS

UNION PAGE

SENIOR WEEKEND

Friday, April 11

Senior Dinner Dance at the Franklin Plaza Hotel
featuring the band Live Wire
Tickets on sale next week in the Connelly Center ticket office.

Free Outdoor Concert
Saturday, April 12
on Kennedy Mall with TRIX.
Time 1:30

FOR
THE BIG EVENT
TALENT SHOW
AILABLE MARCH 10
PRIZES!
$100
$75
50

Did you know that every package of cigarettes is worth free time for a patient in need of a dialysis machine?

The Union is getting involved to help those in need. We encourage you to save all of your empty cigarette packets and then bring them to the Union Office.

It's worth saving a life. . .

VIDEO

SEE COLLEGE BASKETBALL'S BIG TOURNAMENT ON BIG SCREEN TV!

NCAA BASKETBALL

Regional Semi-Finals
	Saturday, March 21	1:00 p.m. EL
	Sunday, March 22	1:00 p.m. WL
National Finals
	Saturday, March 28	1:00 p.m. WL
Championship Game
	Monday, March 30	8:00 p.m. WL

FOR THE

1st Annual Underclassman Weekend

The Villanova Union Presents the UNDERCLASSMAN DINNER DANCE Semi Formal

Friday, March 27, 1981

TIME:
7:00 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. — Dinner Starts at 8:00 Sharp

DATE:
Friday, March 27, 1981

PLACE:
City Line Holiday Inn

TICKETS:
$35.99 — tickets on sale at the Connelly Center Ticket Office

BAND:
Orion

Saturday March, 28, 1981
Free Outdoor Concert in Kennedy Mall
1:30 - 4:30
Featuring the band "Full Moon"

Sunday, March 29, 1981
Surprise event to be announced

UNION PAGE

AN EVENING OF ACOUSTICAL MUSIC
WITH
DAVID BROMBERG

FRI., April 10
CONNELLY CENTER
2 SHOWS 8:00 & 10:00
with I.D. $4.50 public $6.50
NOW ON SALE IN CONNELLY CENTER TICKET OFFICE
CALL 645-7284

CHAIRPERSON APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE

RECREATION: Positions available are Florida Trip, Bahama Trip, Small Trips, Sports and Concert Trips, Outdoor Recreation, and Publicity-Public Relations.

UNIVERSITY SERVICES: Positions available are Special Events, Game Shows, Lunch-time Programs, Small Talks, and Publicity.

VISUAL ARTS: Video position available.

Anyone interested is encouraged to pick up an application in the Union Office.

AUDITIONS

Actors, Singers, Dancers, All. . . come help us with

THE BEST OF BROADWAY!!!

On Monday, March 23, at 7:30 in the NL further information available in the Union Office, stop by or call 645-7286.

CLASS OF '84

Orders will be taken soon for Class T-Shirts.

Stay in touch for more information to follow soon!

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES

MY BRILLIANT CAREER

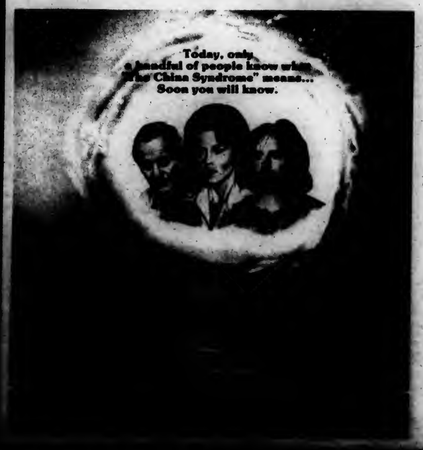
"A sparkling movie . . . a film of shining pleasure. . ." It's the winner of six Australian Academy Awards, including Best Picture.

Shown Sunday, March 22, at 7:30 in Cinema

FAIL SAFE

Tuesday, March 24 at 3:00 and Wednesday, March 25 at 7:30 Cinema.

A very realistic Science Fiction Film in which events might actually happen, bringing an urgency to its gut-wrenching suspense and plummets towards disaster.



NOW SHOWING

CHINA SYNDROME
Friday, March 20, 1981
7:00 & 9:30 in Cinema

COMING ATTRACTIONS

SLAP SHOT
Thursday, March 26 & Friday, March 27
7:00 & 9:30 in Cinema

Fear is a Man's Best Friend

By SHARON WINTERS

Any Woody Allen fan is going to love Side Effects, the latest literary effort of the comic genius. Allen's latest creation is an apt sequel to Without Feathers, which was the offspring of Getting Even.

Effects is a compilation of vignettes and short plays, as were Allen's earlier books. The same preoccupations remain: the ancient Greeks; neurotic relationships; death; philosophical parodies and science. New topics are also included; for example, Lincoln makes a debut with a tale from his presidency that has thus far never been taught in any history class. And, it probably never will.

Allen spoofs the scientific world by charting a failed experiment. Although three learned individuals with the title doctor to prove it, attempt to discover a cure for choking, they fail miserably. After they give up, Dr. Heimlich manages to find the cure through a maneuver of his own.

Another strange tale involves a professor who, bored with his wife and his life, manages to make a leap into fiction so that he can have an affair with Emma Bovary. This relationship comes to be through the Great Fersky and his "Cheap-looking Chinese cabinet." The professor enters the box, the book is opened to the appropriate page, so that Bovary is between affairs and has time, and wonder of wonders, he meets and woos her. Of course, the author of this story has no intention of letting love last; it has too many consequences. In this case, love doesn't last because of a transmission problem. Persky sums up the difficulties profoundly, "Something must be wrong."

Allen's style is such that it is impossible to give information that will discourage a potential reader. He begins with one thought and weaves others through the story; the endings of his tales are not a mere sum of the parts but a whole new neurosis.

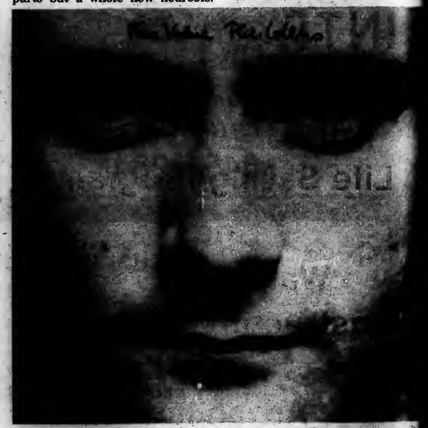
Even if the beginning and end of the story or play were divulged, the curiosity of how he managed to find the way from the initial line to the conclusion would be overwhelming. One can never be sure which psychological trauma or traumas brought the tragedy prior to reading the story.

One appeal of Allen is his attitude of doom in the face of possible success. In "My Speech to the Graduates," he tells the nebulous class of seniors that mankind is at a fork in the road. "One path leads to despair and utter hopelessness. The other, to total extinction." After waxing cerebrally, he turns to the saga of his broken toaster.

Aside from the humor of total destruction, what else can anyone possibly think of? The boring everyday crises that drive most humans crazy: mechanical marvels that don't function; relationships that take unexpected routes and let's not forget the irritation

(Continued on page 14)

There Must Be a Mistake



By KIM KINGSLAND

Phil Collins has taken time out from Genesis to go solo with Face Value, an album which he also produced. Collins, who is predominant on drums and vocals, gets a little help from his friends Eric Clapton and Stephen Bishop, along with a horn section courtsey of Earth, Wind and Fire. One presumption must be erased from the outset in order to even listen to the album: this is not a Collins' version of Genesis' sound. Rather, it is an attempt at a wholly different sound, as the addition of Earth, Wind and Fire brass would suggest.

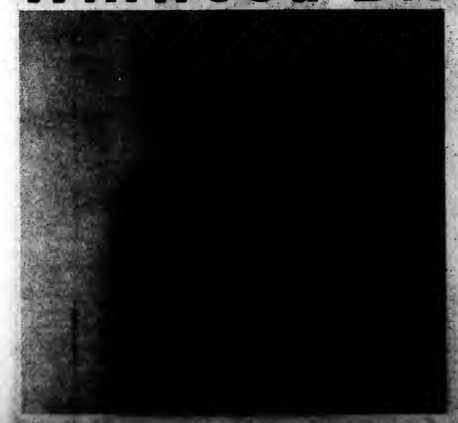
Side One of Face Value is a bland collection of simplistic tunes, opening with In the Air Tonight, which, although initially reminiscent of ex-Genesis member, Peter Gabriel, seems to deliberately spite its repetitive build-up by never progressing. The listener ends up feeling as though whatever it is that's in the air never quite arrives. This Must Have Been Love, continues in the same murky vein; Bishop's backing vocals lend nothing to this slow, sleep-inducer. A revision of Genesis Behind the Lines neither enhances the quality nor adds any angles to the original. Collins is barely scratching the surface, seemingly more concerned with showing us that Genesis can be translated into a dance band. The closing trio of tunes follows the same example: The Roof Is Leaking employs a negligible melody with unimpressive lyrics; Droned is; and Hand In Hand is in no way related to its Dire Straits counterpart. Overall, side one, with its tiring absence of crescendos, is about as captivating as an unfocused snapshot.

Side Two fulfills some of the hope with which a Genesis admirer approaches the album. I Missed Again is a pleasantly upbeat mesh of the styles of Genesis and Earth, Wind and Fire. You Know What I Mean is perhaps the best tune included, utilizing evocative strings and piano that coincide with the vocals of a change. In Thunder and Lightning, Collins proves that his voice is capable of reaching the level and the intensity necessary for the intricacies of the English/Jazz mix. I'm Not Moving, is the lowpoint of the side, suggesting that Collins took time during a break to write a cute little ditty as a filler.

If Loving Me Is Crazy is a haunting tune, beginning with a bluesy sax that fits the form for this mellow, although somewhat streched, lament. The album closes with Tomorrow Never Knows, a Lennon/McCartney song. Musically, this is one of the strongest segments of the album; The percussion holds its own, creating a chant-like atmosphere. Although the lyrics are overpowered, one is merely gratified that the music is at last able to do so.

All in all, the listener is left with the feeling that Collins is trying to straddle some obscure middle-of-the-road fence, but ends up falling off and landing nowhere. The album is overwhelmed by muddy monotony; it is undeniable that even the best tracks are flawed by trite arrangements. It seems throughout that Collins is suffering from a severe lack of conviction, stylistically, musically and lyrically. While Face Value cannot be completely dismissed, Collins remains content with staying within the narrow framework set forth by the album's title.

Winwood Dives in a Perfect Arc



By CHRIS SLAWECKI

When the Spencer Davis Group landed on the British charts in 1964, keyboardist/guitarist/vocalist Steve Winwood was only 16 years old. When Winwood left to explore new grounds at the ripe old age of 19, the group had to disband. These new grounds included Traffic, which existed in one form or another until 1974 and was considered by many to be the most important band of the early 1970's, and Blind Faith, in which Winwood teamed with Ginger Baker and Jack Bruce to produce a single LP and a raucous tour of the States.

But Winwood never lost his musical direction in the shuffle of musical styles his career has taken, rising from the ashes of [illegible] like a Phoenix. He refines the cooks of his talent so that they have through in one direction, then jumps down, and over to allow them other directions. If his past two solo albums are any example, there is beauty in the art of the slow burn. Arc of a Diver is a tremendous album.

Winwood plays all the instruments on Arc of a Diver, playing a synthesizer that sounds like Mel Collins' sax and holding off the demons in his guitar until the second side. But the lyrics are also very important even though they were written by three different people, none of which are very well-known. This is an album about love, and in this age when alienation reeks from almost every twist of the once-gleeful radio dial, it is a refreshing walk through the gardens of memories and sundowns and dust.

There is no room for alienation in [illegible] love poetry. Steve is the love [illegible] settles again to remind me still memories I've cherished so long Winwood doesn't grind his [illegible] or curse the girl with whom he in love. He chooses to celebrate the fact that while the passion love is gone, a friendship with has grown strong. Instead powerchords" of clotted frustration, he offers flowing crystalline acceptance.

Arc of a Diver is very much follow to his previous solo re in that the loose feel of the is still controlled and dire Spanish Dancer is a great song should have been the single stead of Night Train, which exactly a slouch. Spanish Da is the best example of [illegible] blue-eyed soul [illegible] since B Palmer's Sneakin' Sally th the Alley (on which Winwood tributed some keyboard part is introduced by electronic

April Wine Intoxicates

By SUE BREHM

The Montreal-based group April Wine brought their powerful fast-paced style of pure rock and roll music to the Tower Theater on Saturday night, March 14. The youthful audience enthusiastically received them as they opened with six selections from their 12th and latest effort The Nature of the Beast.

Though they are extremely popular in their native Canada, April Wine is virtually unknown in the U.S., primarily due to limited efforts of promotion attempted in the past. They are determined to break into the U.S. music market on the strength of their success in Canada. Seven gold lps., three platinum lps., and one double platinum lp. attest to April Wine's enormous popularity in Canada.

Myles Goodwyn, the only remaining original member of the group, has been the sustaining influence in April Wine. He not only pens most of their songs but also is the lead vocalist, guitarist, keyboardist (piano and moog) and producer. The other four individual talents who make up April Wine include Gary Moffet (guitar and vocals), Jerry Mercer (their exceptionally talented and precise percussionist and vocalist), Steve Lang (bass and vocals), and Brian Greenway (guitar and vocals). While Goodwyn sings lead vocals, the other group members all supply background harmonies.

They cleverly chose to perform their more catchy or more commercial sounding tunes. Some of the selections featured from The Nature of the Beast were Future Tense, Crash and Burn, (from the T.V. movie The Killing of Randy Webster, shown last Wednesday evening), Gypsy Queen, the FM hit and Just Between You and Me, showing the laid back side of April Wine. They continued with the super-paced, sexually oriented Ladies Man into their own version of 21st Century Schizoid Man, both selected from the Harder . . . Faster lp. Like all of April Wine's music, there is no thematic complexity, no lengthy tales of mystery and intrigue. The lyrics are generally about having a good time, which is reflected by their high-energy, good-natured showmanship on stage.

Bring A Friend To Dinner, Lunch, Brunch, Drinks!

GREENHOUSE RESTAURANT

5 MINUTES FROM VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

687-2801 Belrose Lane & King of Prussia Rd. Radnor, PA

BRING THIS AD AND V.U. I.D. FOR A 10% DISCOUNT

INTRAMURAL DEPARTMENT

Annual Advanced Life Saving Program and Water Safety Instructors Course

Advanced Life Saving Program

Starts: Monday, March 23rd
Place: Field House Pool
Time: 3:45 pm

Sign up in Field House Pool Now !!!

Price — Free No Fee V.U. Students

W.S.I. Water Safety Instructors Course

Starts: April 7th
Place: Field House Pool
Time: 4:30 pm

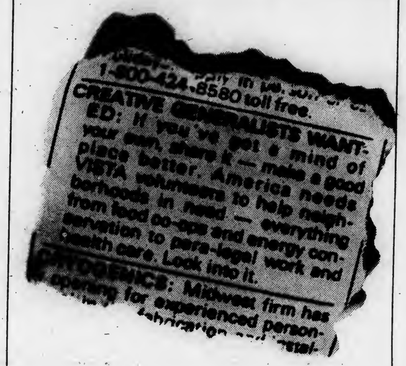
Sign Up Now in Field House Pool Office

CO-ED, OPEN TO ALL V.U. STUDENTS

Villanovan Personals

Joey,
You will always be three years old to me.
Happy Birthday.

Lisa 143,
Baby, you're the best!
143 John
Mares



Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers

Dear Tom Selleck,
Hi. I think you are so cute and sexxy (re: Program of March 12). I think I love you and was wondering if maybe you could cart your macho body to Villanova University in your Ferrari on April 11 to take me to my senior dinner dance.
Keep in mind that you are my idol and last hope.
Yours forever,
MHTP

To the unique bunch from Sullivan 241-248,
You creatures are really something. I'm giving you new names to keep you inconspicuous, after 3/13/81 P.M.
Here you are:
Burt-OJ-Vodka-Gingerale, The Quiet Flirt, Masculine Mealcard Moocher with the Sensuous Eyes, The Radiant Smiler, Vivacious Victor — The Percect Host, The Married Man, 240 lb. Weakling, Bistre Bill, The Party Goers . . . .
You're a lot of laughs. Don't you like to dance? Keep on grinning, you bunch of cuties. You're really unique. Stick together fellows.
Love,
Sincerity

Spring Rainwear Sale $49.99

Regularly $60 to 68.

Now is the time to save on our fresh poplin rainwear! Featuring new detailing for rain or shine. Beige, oyster, lilac & peach. Sizes 5-13.

Sale ends Tuesday, March 24!

Ladybug

112 N. Wayne Avenue, Wayne
Suburban Square, Ardmore
Lawrence Park Shopping Center, Broomall and most major malls.

Woody on Fear

(Continued from page 12)

of rainy days.

Allen combines the profound with the mundane into one large tangled fear. No one can really tell where the reality starts and the comedy begins. The presentation of life that Allen creates is garbled in many ways, although an underlying truth always exists, exaggerated as it may be.

Simply, Allen portrays the odd world that exists. The fear of nuclear war is juxtaposed with common daily failures and foibles and then coupled with the odds that the pessimists will be right some day. The confusion of modern society is reflected and magnified by Allen in all of his works.

Perhaps the reason why this view of the world produces laughter is because Allen seems to have more problems than several people combined. He lives an episodic series of trials. Allen, yet begins anew, as though the old problems never happened merrily stumbling into another disaster.

The formula of the poor soul with countless problems is one that continues to work. It works in Side Effects just as it has worked throughout Allen's career in all his endeavors.

The book is great; it is just too short. The readings are soon over. After Effects, there is no recourse but to wait for the next series of Allen traumas. They will, no doubt, be a few years away.

Winwood

(Continued from page 13)

bles refracted through the prism of a glissando guitar, but when the bass slides way down and Winwood starts to sing, you can throw the reasons why out the window because the beat will simply drive you anywhere you want to go.

The single, Night Train, a guitar-driven song about life on the road in Europe, is where Winwood's guitar is at its frantic best. It punctuates the breaks before and after the chorus sharply, then expands in the larger spaces before and after each verse. The closing solo is Winwood at his most electric: Stomping on the fuzz pedal to create a nasty cloud of rhythmic distortion, then slicing through it in the best Hendrixian fasion with a clear crisp wail that soars higher and higher with the Arc of a Diver.

Rosie, Rita, Karen, Laurie, Diane, Annie, Suzanne, Kathleen, Deirdre, Cathy, Jenny, Dee, Dyker, T.K., Mac, Bilbo, Bobber, Y.A., Juan & Charlie:
Thanks for a super day! Your thoughtfulness is much appreciated.
Thanx,
Tanz

Dear Tommy, Mike, Jim, Lu, Aaron, John, Jeff, Ste, Mike, John, Kevin, Marty an Happy:
Don't worry about defeat . . you'll always be Number with us.
Love,
The Cheerleader

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080
773 E. Lancaster, Villanova

We work with exceptional people. So can you.

Leo J. Riley, Jr., CLU

Rudolph J. Meyers, CLU

The exceptional people who work for Riley-Meyers Associates, representatives of Provident Mutual, are high achievers. And that's the way they're rewarded.

Maybe you ought to consider professional life underwriting as a career. Think about it this way.

It's a field in which you can earn an income virtually without ceiling. And in which you can earn the respect of people whose life goals could not be accomplished without your skills.

Life underwriting is not for everyone, of course not — but if any of this makes sense to you, give one of us a call. It just might be among the most important calls you'll ever make.

Get the most out of life with
RILEY-MEYERS ASSOCIATES
PHILADELPHIA, PA (215) 568-0535
CHERRY HILL, NJ (609) 622-5400
PROVIDENT MUTUAL
LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA
Suite 1919, 3 Penn Center Plaza, Philadelphia, PA 19102
Suite 110, 3 Executive Campus, Cherry Hill, NJ 08002

Attention Villanovans
CENTRAL PARK
PATCHWORK
Monday
SPRING FESTIVAL
FEATURING
ALIEN, SYN, PATCHWORK, THRUST and SHOTGUN

College Night
76ers vs. Detroit Pistons
Wednesday, March 25
8:05 PM
at the Spectrum
1/2 OFF $8 and $7 Tickets
Schlitz
Free 76ers Beer Mugs*
to first 1,000 students
Courtesy of the 76ers and Schlitz Beer
Tickets: The Vet, Downtown Wanamakers, Ticketron, and Spectrum
FREE PARKING at these two lots: Broad and Hartranft (next to the 10th Inning Restaurant and the S. E. corner 11th and Pattison.
*students must enter through Spectrum Door No. 4 to be eligible for beer mug giveaway

Icecats Dominate MACHC All-Stars

By JACK DePIERRO

Seven Villanova hockey players received awards from the Mid-Atlantic Collegiate Hockey Conference (MACHC), this past week, as four members received first team All-Star awards, two second team All-Star awards and two individual awards. Chris Mancuso, Frank Segreto, Paul LaFond and Tom Margiotti were all elected to the first team All-Star squad while Tom Curran and Bill Quinlan were elected to the second team All-Star team. Receiving individual awards were Frank Segreto (Rookie-of-the-Year) and Jim Femia (Defenseman-of-the-Year).

Mancuso led the league in scoring this season after capturing Rookie-of-the-Year honors last year. He netted 22 goals and assisted on 19 others for a team leading 41 points. Coach Skip Probst commented, "Chris is the most talented player in the league this year and his goal production shows it. Not only is he the MVP for our team, but should be the MVP of the league."

Frank Segreto is having the most productive freshman year for any Villanova hockey player has ever had. Frank earned Rookie-of-the-Year honors as well as being elected to first team All-Stars. Frank scored 11 goals and passed out 19 assists for 30 total points.

Chris Mancuso Charles Guida Photo

He plays left-wing for the most productive line in the MACHC, which includes Mancuso and Barry "Killer" Whitaker. According to Probst, "Mancuso and Whitaker played together last year but they were losing their left-wing and I was puzzled at who would fill the spot. But Segreto filled in nicely and has showed great improvement over the year. Having him and Mancuso together for another two years in very satisfying."

Paul LaFond, who won Defenseman-of-the-Year last year, had himself another banner season scoring six goals and assisting on eight other. "Paul is probably the best skating defenseman in the league right now," states Probst. "He moves the puck well and is a big offensive threat every time he is on the ice."

Goaltender Tom Margiotti once again led the league in goals-against-average, posting a 3.18 average and a 89.6 save ratio. Tom, along with the rest of goaltending crew, (Don Clark, Al Salvato and Fred Christie) had the lowest goals-against-average in the league. "The one thing about Tom is that he is so consistent," comments Probst. "No matter how bad the team seems to be going, Tom always seems to come up with the big game."

Frank Segreto Charles Guida Photo

Tom Margiotti Charles Guida Photo

Women Sports Review

WOMEN'S TRACK: Suzanne Shea, junior standout distance runner, led the Wildcats to their 15th place finish in the AIAW indoor championships this past weekend in Pocatello, Idaho.

Shea placed third in the 1,500, clocking a 4:28.15.

The only other individual placer was Peggy Stewart who took sixth in the high jump, tying her own Villanova record at five feet and ten inches.

The relay team of Shea, Jennifer Whitfield, Lisa Maree and Patty Bradley captured third place in the two-mile relay, setting a Villanova indoor record. Defending champions in the distance medley, the Wildcats didn't fare as well when they only recorded a seventh place finish.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING: In setting five school records, the Villanova women's swim team placed sixth in the AIAW Division II championships, held March 12-15 in Marquette, Michigan.

Jenni Franks won the 200-yard individual medley and set a Villanova record with her time of 2:09.9. She also placed third in the 100-yard individual medley, fifth in the 100-yard free, and seventh in the 400-yard individual medley.

Freshman Beth Metzger broke four Villanova marks with a pair of fifths and a pair of eleventh place finishes.

Rita Edge contributed points in four events; taking seventh in the 200-yard free, 16th in the 200 butterfly, 17th in the 100-yard freestyle and 21st in the 100-yard butterfly. And Alice Maben placed 22nd in the 50-yard breaststroke.

The relay team which consisted of Franks, Metzger, Edge and Mary Maier swam to a second in the 400-yard freestyle and fourth in the 200-yard and 800-yard freestyle.

The Icecats are in the race for the Hannigan Cup this weekend with the University of Delaware.

Selected to second team All-Stars were juniors Tom Curran and Bill Quinlan. Curran, last years league MVP, collected 37 points and Quinlan collected 27 points, the most ever for a defenseman in Villanova history.

Jim Femia was elected this years Defenseman-of-the-Year. Jim scored three goals and assisted on 18 others for 21 total points.

But Probst adds that these seven players do not make this team. "The rest of the team means just as much as these guys. Without the hard work from everyone on the team, we would never have a chance at the title. Playing as a team is much more important than going out for individual goals. This whole team won an award by winning first place in the league. Now if they can only prove it to everyone by winning the championship this weekend."

Paul LaFond Charles Guida Photo

It's Miller Time

Intramural Basketball

The finals will be played on the Palestra boards and the uniforms will bear familiar names like Penn, Temple and Villanova, but the players in them may not be as famous. But, make no mistake, the teams playing in the 3rd Annual Miller High Life/Delaware Valley Intramural Basketball Tournament, starting on March 23rd, will be there to win.

More than eighteen schools will send their best intramural team to compete for team trophies and jackets and the title of "Delaware Valley Champions" in large and small school divisions. Each team will have to win their way to the tourney by being the best fraternity or organization team on their respective campuses. Last year Ursinus took the small school honors and the Villanova team was the large school champion.

The top ten seeds in the Villanova mens' basketball intramurals are: The Rags, Backstreets, Nads, Running Rebels, DKE, On Tap, Gimme the Ball, TKO, Exit-In and Mothership Connection. Villanova's Champion will be decided Monday night at 7 p.m. in the Fieldhouse. Then Tuesday, March 24, Villanova's Champion will play Penn's Champion at LaSalle College's Hayman Hall.

Tracksters Outrun in NCAA

By MIKE HEALEY

The University of Texas El Paso added to its ever-growing list of track titles with a convincing victory in the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships. The Miner's total of 76 points was enough for them to win their sixth National Indoor title in the last eight years.

For Villanova, however, it was an entirely different story. The Wildcats placed a distant fifth, tied with Houston and Seton Hall, but Coach Jack Pyrah was generally pleased with his team's performances.

"I don't feel that we fared too badly as a team," Pyrah stated, "a couple of breaks and we could have had a third out of the whole thing. Overall, it was a pretty good finish," he continued, "considering that we only had eight guys out there. They did a fine job."

Strong performances for the Cats included Rodney Wilson's third in the 60 yard high hurdles, Carlton Young's fifth in the 440, John Hunter's fifth in the 1000, and the distance medley relay team's successful defense of its national title.

Anthony Tufariello, Villanova's outstanding senior runner, experienced great misfortune in his 600 yard race. Expected to be a strong contender in this event, Tuf was bumped by another runner at the first turn of the race. This contact caused him to come to almost a complete stop in his tracks. It turned out to be a very detrimental accident because Tuf, although catching up and eventually winning his heat, was unable to qualify for the finals.

"Tuf was in shape to run a 1:09," believed Pyrah, "but he had some really bad luck." Tuf's time was 1:12.67 and the eventual winner's, 1:09.84.

Both Carlton Young and John Hunter posted personal best times in their respective races. Young's fifth place finish in the 440 was especially impressive, for he ran in the outside lane of the track, which is a major disadvantage.

In the 60 yard high hurdles, Rodney Wilson posted the two fastest times of the meet in qualifying. Unfortunately, in the finals, he stumbled at the start and was never really able to regain. Wilson was the defending champion in that event.

The highlight of the meet for the Cats was the distance medley relay team's phenomenal come-from-behind victory. In that event, John Borgese, running the first leg, fell over a fallen Bowling Green runner. Borgese quickly got back on his feet and resumed running, but he was 25-30 yards behind and in fifth place. John later reflected, "It's not an experience that I'd like to encounter again."

It was the next three legs of the race which made the win possible. Willie Sydnor ran sensibly in the second leg of the event, not trying to make up too much of the lost ground. Following Sydnor's efforts, Marcus O'Sullivan came out of the gates very quickly and towards the end, had tired considerably. So, it was up to Sydney Maree.

Not to worry though, because Maree simply blew past all the other runners and insured the medley relay team's second consecutive National title. The Wildcats finished the race in 9:47.20, less than two seconds off the national record that they set last year.

Guard Stewart Granger set the offense in the Houston game, and was the offense in the Virginia game. Dave Coskey Photo

Fans Flock to North Carolina

By BOB CONWAY

To drive to Charlotte, North Carolina from Philadelphia takes at least ten hours. Yet, the Villanova basketball team was not without a few die-hard admirers coming to North Carolina to wish them well.

The Villanova Band was there, of course. They left for Charlotte at 6:30 a.m., Friday. They arrived two hours before the Wildcat's contest with Houston. The band did not get back to Philadelphia until 5:30 a.m. Monday morning. Brian Barker, who is on an internship in Washington D.C., was dropped off in Baltimore at 3:00 a.m. Monday morning. He, too, made it to work on Monday.

The band was also instrumental (No pun intended) in helping Mike McDonald and Joe Roach. These two juniors from Stanford Hall hitchhiked down to Charlotte. This pair started hitchhiking before the Houston games, hoping Villanova would beat Houston and play Virginia. Once they arrived in Charlotte, they were in need of two tickets. Veronica Sienkiewicz, who must be one of Villanova's greatest fans, talked to the right people. She got McDonald an Roach two passes from the Villanova Band.

Saturday evening at Villanova, Frank Calabresi and Ed Sullivan were joking about going down to North Carolina. They told Jack Thawley they were no longer joking. The three of them left for Charlotte at 7:00 Saturday evening. "We arrived in Charlotte at 5:15 in the morning. We pulled into a church parking lot to get some sleep," explained Jack Thawley. "We were laughing because we couldn't believe we were in Charlotte," he added. The threesome filed into Mass at the appropriate time.

Ann Guida and her special group of friends made the trip down. Ann is the person who keeps the official score for Villanova. Certainly, Villanova did not stand a chance without Ann keeping score for the Cats.

Cavaliers Nip Nova in Second Round

(Continued from page 1)

Howard played his usual fine game. Howard gathered in six rebounds, shot 7-8 from the floor to score 15 points in 29 minutes of play. Mike Mulquin was not to be out done. He drilled home 10 points by shooting a perfect 5-5 from the field.

After the impressive victory over Houston the questions soon centered around the most dominating center in college basketball, 7'4" Ralph Sampson. Massimino said, "I want to savor this victory for the evening, and then I will start thinking about Virginia." An evening does not last long for the hard working Villanova coach. He was gathered with his assistants shortly after the game ended, and you can be assured they were not discussing the nice weather in Charlotte.

Saturday, the question was again put to Massimino: How are you going to stop Ralph Sampson? The brilliant members of the press wanted to know if Massimino was going to try and stop Sampson the way Notre Dame had done. Pete Gillen was a former assistant to Massimino and some thought he would give Massimino a master sheet of their plan. Massimino does not have two 6'11" centers; obviously he could not do what Notre Dame had done. Rather, Massimino said, "We will do things to defend him within the philosophy of our team and the framework of their roles."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland brought his team in early Saturday. He watched Villanova's impressive win over Houston on television. He summed things up quite nicely by saying, "They will try to keep the ball away from Ralph, while we will try to get it to him." Games seem so simple at times. The other note that Holland had to pass along was that Lee Raker was doubtful. "He definitely will not start," commented Holland. Raker's status was in doubt due to serious thigh injury, which had greatly limited his performances in recent weeks. Raker is a fine shooter. Without him in the lineup Villanova had a great chance to continue the upset trend.

The game with Virginia was still a day away when the upsets were reported. "It happened!" Rival St. Joe's, whom Villanova beat by 10 (72-62) to cause a five-way tie in the Big Five, upset DePaul. This news, believe it or not, even had the Villanova contingent in Charlotte jumping for joy. The St. Joe's victory was only the beginning of a rash of upsets. Villanova was hoping for one more. Holland, on the other hand, later said, "We made a point of not talking about the upsets to the kids."

Villanova was on top of their game. Virginia had not played since Maryland destroyed them 85-62 nine days ago. The (23-5) Cavaliers were also without NCAA tournament experience. The third ranked Cavaliers were appearing in only their second NCAA tourney game ever. Five years ago Virginia lost to DePaul on the same Charlotte floor. Everything seemed set for the Villanova upset.

Ralph Sampson got the ball and made his first shot from 12 feet out before a national television audience and a filled Charlotte Coliseum, most of whom were Virginia fans. "Forget the upset, a route was on." Villanova's first basket did not make it to the hoop. Sampson erased Sienkiewicz's shot, but was called for goaltending. The Cats were down four (6-2). At the half it was Villanova up by three (27-24) as visions of Atlanta danced in the Cats heads. The route the Virginia fans were hoping for was called off somewhere between Stewart Granger's five first-half buckets.

Virginia was playing scared. Villanova's half-court trap, with defensive specialist Aaron Howard applying most of the pressure, caused Virginia to turn the ball over ten times in the first 20 minutes of play.

Stew Granger picked up where he left off in the first-half by scoring the first two points in the second period. Then the officials [illegible] over. Before you could say, "Villanova just may upset...", Pinone was whistled for his second foul. Sandwichad between those two calls, Howard was whistled for his third. All of this happened before three minutes had been played. The sudden foul trouble forced Massimino to call his tenacious press. He had to protect Pinone and Howard. When Pinone was whistled for his third foul, Villanova led 31-24. The Cats would never again enjoy a lead that large.

Despite the foul trouble Villanova never relinquished the lead until Sampson tied the score (42-42) with 6:21 left. Lee Raker was instrumental in bringing the Cavaliers back. He played 21 minutes on his bad leg, and scored seven crucial second-half points. Villanova's collapsing defense followed Sampson only nine times though he connected on seven of them for 17 points. The defense also forced Jeff Lamp to shoot 0-5 from the field. However, there was no defense designed to shut down a shooter of Raker's stature.

Even with Raker's gutty performance Villanova had chances to win, but could never regain the lead in the final three minutes. With 1:12 left, Jeff Jones hit both ends of a one-one to put Virginia up by three (51-48). Villanova closed within one on a Gminger bomb with 31 seconds left. Sienkiewicz then was called for an intentional foul. Othell Wilson canned both of the foul shots. Nova's last ditch effort failed when Pinone was called for an offensive foul.

Coach Holland, commenting on upsets after his team narrowly escaped being added to the list of them, said, "At this level there are a lot of good teams. I am sure that when you get 32 teams, there are not any underdogs."

Nobody knows that better than Virginia, except perhaps Del[illegible]

Rosemont Beverage Center, Inc.
910 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PA. 19010
QUICK PICK-UP SERVICE
COLD KEGS, CASES OF BEER AND SODA
525-BEER

CONESTOGA CLEANERS
907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010
LA 5-3431
PLANT-ON PREMISES
SAME DAY CLEANING
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

1981 U.S. OPEN MERION
1981 U.S. OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP
June 15-21, 1981
MERION GOLF CLUB
Ardmore Ave., Ardmore, Pa. 19003
Phone: (215) 649-OPEN

NANCY JUPP
Tournament Director
Employment opportunity available immediately for tournament set-up. Will try to accommodate student schedules.
CONTACT: Rich Farley
AT 649-OPEN

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

This week's Red Athlete of the Week is freshman swimmer Barb Metzger. At the AIAW championships on March 12-15, Barb broke four Villanova records capturing a pair of fifth place finishes, setting records in the 100-yard backstroke (1:00.77) and 100-yard butterfly (58.66). Metzger's 11th place finish in the 200-yard backstroke was also done in record time, 2:12.72, as was her 11th place performance in the 200 butterfly, 2:16.77. Both [illegible]

the Villanovan

Next week, the VILLANOVAN will feature a special pull-out tribute to James Francis Elliott.

Vol. 56, No. 22 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | March 27, 1981

Jumbo Elliott Dead at 67

By DAVE COSKEY and MARIANNE LAVELLE

Once there was a man known by many people, and they will say of him: "He brought young men together to make them winners."

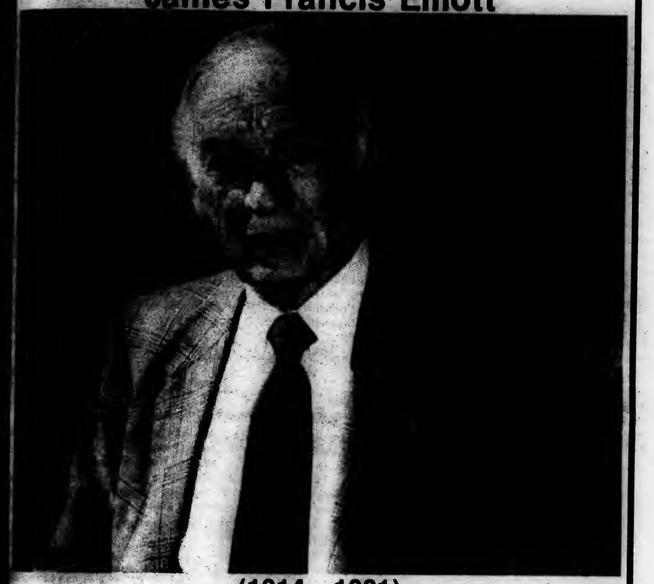
Once there was a man known by few people, and he believed in bringing the winners together to make them fine young men.

Once there was a man named Jumbo Elliott.

During his almost 50 years of coaching track at Villanova, James Elliott attained for the school worldwide recognition as a perennial track power. But so little was he known on campus, that the school newspaper consistently spelled his name incorrectly.

After his death last Sunday of a massive coronary attack, those few men who did know Jumbo Elliott strained to tell his story.

James Francis Elliott



(1914 - 1981)

"I've always called him Mr. Elliott, not Coach," said Don Paige, one of the first middle-distance runners in the world, who graduated from Villanova last May. "He's my adviser . . . in all aspects of life. He was a great man, and like a second father."

After graduating, Paige took residence near Villanova to remain under Elliott's tutelage. "He didn't treat you as an athlete. He always worried about the whole person," said Paige.

"The thing that goes through my mind is how much I owe the man," said Marty Liquori.

"I think he's meant a lot to all the runners able to attend Villanova, in fact they got better because of him." "It's just a shame that so many people at Villanova could not know the tremendous effect he has had on so many," Liquori continued.

Elliott came to Villanova from West Catholic. It was there while in high school that he picked up his nickname "Jumbo." An avid baseball fan, Elliott picked up his paradoxical moniker from a Philadelphia Phillie, Jumbo Jim Elliott.

Jumbo often told how in his senior year of 1935, he accepted the coaching responsibilities because, "I was one of our better runners." Better indeed, Jumbo was in fact undefeated in dual meets in the 440. It was only a pulled leg muscle that kept him from competing with his close friend Jesse Owens in the 1936 Olympics. His career at Villanova has spanned 47 consecutive years, excluding a service commitment in World War II, and will undoubtedly go unsurpassed.

Elliott established Villanova as THE track power on the east coast, if not the country. His impressive record reads like an excerpt from a fantasy; 51 team championships, 467 individual champions, 28 Olympians who won a total of nine medals, and today Villanova currently holds six world records. His peers named him the coach of the century in 1976. Jumbo was a living legend.

1968 Olympic silver medalist Larry James, currently athletic director at Stockton State College, recently called the Elliott coaching technique, "a kick and a kiss." Jumbo was a sterh taskmaster, still caring for you like a father. He demanded discipline from his athletes on and off the track. Several years ago the meet director of the Dogwood Relays wrote to the Villanovan, "I have the utmost respect for the Villanova athletes. Their courtesy on and off the track make them a pleasure to deal with . . . the press and fans were all equally impressed by your very fine track team . . . they are a credit to your school."

Jumbo felt that a college experience should be more than just track. "He was interested in the total person," says Don Paige. Marty Liquori, founder of the flourishing Athletic Attic Chain of Gainesville, Florida, found that, "a lot of my business sense today I attribute to things that Jumbo taught me. In fact I found we would only talk track maybe 20% of the time. Jumbo felt that there were too many other important things in life."

All of Jumbo's athletes carried his training on. Ron Delaney, a gold medalist in the 1956 Olympics comments, "I owe everything I am today to Jumbo. He took a poor Irish boy and turned me into an Olympic Champion, which drastically affected my life in

(Continued on page 0)

Senate Approves '81-'82 Budget

By BOB HERMAN

The Villanova University senate approved the Administration's budget for 1981-82, Friday, March 20, by a 13-11-5 vote.

The proposed budget figures will affect the students in the following way: 12 percent increase for arts and commerce and finance students; a 14 percent increase for science, engineering and nursing students, and a 16 percent increase for law students.

The budget also allows for an additional 1.5 percent increase on top of the already proposed 11 percent increase for faculty and staff salaries.

A discussion preceded the approval of the budget with Student Body President, Henry Amoroso strongly urging the Senate to vote against the budget. Amoroso said, "I cannot understand how the deans or faculty can approve such a budget, seeing how late it was given and how it was formed."

Jim Brogan, the law school student senator said, "At first, when walking here, I thought it would be best to abstain, but after seeing how this budget was thrust upon us, I don't see how any member of this Senate can approve the budget."

Dr. Jeffrey Hahn then questioned members of the Budget Committee about the figures which appeared on the proposed budget. Hahn asked why there was not a line-by-line explanation of the figures, but the Senate Chairman, Warren O. Richardson, intervened, saying that it was the job of the Budget Committee to analyze the figures, and that it would take too many hours to look at each line.

The discussion continued with Amoroso questioning the other Senate members about the budget. Amoroso said, "We would need a 25 percent increase in student aid. This budget only allows for a 12.5 percent increase in student aid. The dorms need improving and many of the academic facilities need improving too. We can't keep deferring improvements until next year."

Amoroso said that Covenant II will not cover all of the quality improvements which are necessary to make this school competitive with others. Covenant II is a fund raising venture which will try to raise money for improving student dormitories and academic facilities.

Richardson also reported on a correspondence sent to him by Father President Driscoll which indicated some areas that the Board of Trustees had addressed in their last meeting. The Board wants to have the budget completed by December, indicating that this is a goal which they have been trying for. The Board said that they are still considering allowing the student body president to address the Board at one of its meetings.

Student Elections Planned

By LEONARD J. LA BARTH

Following two weeks of petitioning, campaigning and debates, the efforts of the candidates running for Student Government Association positions will culminate in this year's SGA elections on Thursday, April 2. Voting will take place in the Connelly Center Cinema between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Running for SGA President are Wayne Remal, Bob Rasenger[illegible] and John Plasso. There will be a debate between the three candidates Wednesday, April 1. The debate will allow each prospect to be screened by a three-person panel as well as by the voters.

For the presidential candidate to claim an outright victory, he must receive at least 40 percent of the vote from the total enrollment. In the event a simple percentage majority is not obtained by the early returns, a run-off will be held.

In addition to the presidential contest, three candidates are competing for three [illegible]rts seats on the University Senate, two for the one science seat, two for the sole engineering seat and one for the nursing seat.

Five candidates are hoping to fill the two vacant seats for the College of Commerce and Finance. Graduate School Senator and University College Senator will have its voting on April 1 and 2 between 6:00-8:00 p.m. in Bartley Cafeteria.

To win a senate seat, a simple majority is needed. To first be nominated on the ballot for Senator, the student must obtain 10 percent of the enrollment on a petition signed by students of the individual colleges. Hopeful can-

(Continued on page 4)

Emotions mirrored on the faces of Student Body President Henry Amoroso and Chairman of Senate Budget Committee Alvin Clay after the 1981-82 budget was passed by Senate. Joni Page Photo

Middle East Lecture

Former Governor General of the West Bank, Acharon Davidi, will be speaking in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall, April 2, at 8 p.m. His address will deal with the Jewish-Arab conflict which exists not only in the West Bank area, but throughout the whole Middle East. Admission is free.

Miss Villanova

Ladies, wouldn't you love to be crowned as the first "Miss Villanova." The A.C.S. is sponsoring the first annual Miss Villanova Contest during Spring Fever week. The contest will include evening gown, bathing suit, and talent competition. Any organization or dorm can nominate someone. Check future Villanovans for details.

Sky Diving

The spring skydiving trip is scheduled for Saturday, April 11. A film presentation, equipment demonstration and lecture will be given by Doug Angel of Skydive W East in the Cinema room of the Connelly Center on April 7, at 7 p.m. The first of two organizational meetings will be held in Bartley, room 209 on Thursday, April 2 at 7 p.m. Trip details, transportation, and deposit money will be discussed at this meeting.

Florida Residents

A meeting will be held on Monday, March 30, the east lounge at 6:30, to organize the trip home for Easter. Several students have expressed an interest in either getting a ride or riders to cut expenses for the long drive. If you are interested in driving to Florida for Easter break come to the meeting.

Also a get-together with the South Florida Alumni Club in May is in the planning stages. Details will be given and suggestions are welcome. For any further information contact Lori Tarabella, Rm. 6 O'Dwyer, 525-9432.

LSAT/LSDAS

The new 1981-82 LSAT/LSDAS Registration packets are now available from the Career Development Center. Since the June 20, 1981 LSAT is the last test of the 1980-81 "processing year" and is also the first test of the 1981-82 "processing year", students need to determine the appropriate set of registration materials to use. This determination is based upon the year in which the student is seeking admission to law school.

Student applying for 1982 admission to law school MUST use the blue 1981-82 LSAT/LSDAS registration packet. This will apply to current Juniors who plan on taking the June 20th LSAT.

Candidates seeking admission to law school for this Fall 1981 must use the red 1980-81 LSAT/LSDAS packet.

Using the incorrect registration form can prevent you from being registered in the appropriate time period thus causing serious problems and delays in the processing of reports. While both packets (red 1980-81) (blue 1981-82) can be used to register for the June 20th LSAT, students should use the appropriate year for establishing their LSDAS file. It is most important that candidates obtain only ONE packet and submit only ONE registration form.

Bicycle Club Ride

The Villanova Bicycle Club will hold a 12-mile ride this Sunday leaving at 1 p.m. from the front of the Connelly Center.

Bicycle Club Meeting

The Villanova Bicycle Club will meet next Thursday, April 2, at 7 p.m. in Tolentine 215.

Forensics

On Tuesday, March 31, Villanova's Forensic Society, in cooperation with the Speech Communication Department, presents Forensics: Fact and Fantasy — a performance of forensics. This event is an opportunity for you to discover one of Villanova's most unique teams.

A highly entertaining evening is expected as the Speech Team performs a variety of events, including poetry, prose, drama, and many surprises. Forensics: Fact and Fantasy will be presented at the Villanova Connelly Center Cinema at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free. An informal reception will be held following the performance where you will have an opportunity to meet the student members of the Speech Team as well as many of the faculty members of the Speech Communication Department. Coffee, tea and homemade pastries will be served. This performance will hopefully help to answer the very common question — What is Forensics?

We hope to see you on the 31st.

Running Club

The Wildcat Running Club is sponsoring an all-comers Track Meet on Saturday, April 11. The proceeds of this meet will go to the American Cancer Society. The events of the meet include: 100 meter dash, 110 hurdles, 400 meter, 800 meters, 1500, 3000 meters, long jump, and pentathalon. There will also be a mile relay and a coed sprint relay. The age group will be 18 and under, Open, and Masters (40 and over), with a fraternity championship included. Entry fees will be $1 per event ($2 for relays) and awards will be given to the three top finishers in each event. For further information, please contact Steve Skrobala (525-9433, Rm. 16 Sullivan) or Jim McNichol or Jim O'Brien (525-9116, Rm. 322 Fedigan).

Military Draft

The Social Action Committee presents a discussion panel on "The Military Draft and Draft Registration." The presentation is aimed at answering student questions about conscription, the selective service system, militant, prepardeness registration. Informational and evaluative.

Panelists include:

Mr. James Bristol, Director, Anti-Draft Program, American Friends Service Committee.

Prof. Peter Goldberger, V.U. School of Law, Member of National Lawyer's Guild Draft and Military Law Task Force,

Ms. Joan Lamb, Public Affairs Officer, National Headquarters, Selective Service System,

Brig. Gen. Theo. C. Mataxis, U.S. Army (Ret.), Assistant Superintendent and Commandant of Cadets, Valley Forge Military Academy.

7 p.m., Tuesday, March 31, in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Free. The public is invited.

Sunshine Day

We wish to thank all those who participated in the "Skip-a-Lunch for Sunshine" held on Thursday, March 19. Over $460 profit was realized. Your help was appreciated.

One-on-One volunteers are still needed for Sunshine Day on April 25. The next planning meeting is Monday, April 6, Tolentine 215, at 7 p.m.

Swim-A-Thon Thanks

Sisters of Delta Kappa Nu would like to express many thanks to all those who participated in the Swim-a-Thon benefitting leukemia. It was a great success. Remember: Success-Money Colected! Being collected April 1, 12:30-4:00 in the Connelly Center.

Business Lecture

Phi Gamma Nu, the business sorority, is sponsoring a lecture on Entrepeneurship Tuesday, March 31, at 4:30 in the Wayne Room of the Connelly Center. If you think you might like to start your own business, come by. Margaret C. Drake, M.B.A., business consultant and teacher at Peirce Jr. College will tell you what you need to know.

Film Buffs

Villanova Cultural Film Series, Connelly Center Cinema located on the Villanova Campus. 645-7267. Sunday, March 29, at 7:30, Ingmar Bergman's Cries and Whispers is to be shown. This film explores the relationships among four women, one of whom is dying of cancer, and their devoutly loyal housekeeper — as their facades are stripped away revealing their personal agonies and unspeakable common fears. It is certainly the most complex, the most perceptive, the most humane of Bergman's works.

Continuing in the line of Sci-Fi films, will be X, The Man with the X-Ray Eyes, shown on March 31 at 3:00. It stars Ray Milland, Harold J. Stone and Don Rickles. In it Milland is an outrageous doctor who invents a special serum that will let him see through things. X- is a rockingly entertaining film.

April 1 marks the date of the third lecture in a series of four. In this lecture, entitled "Of Snakeskins and Wineskins," Dr. Jerry Gill, a professor at Eastern College, will discuss art and religion in the work of Ingmar Bergman.

Balloon Day

Organizations interested in having a profit-making booth must turn in your $15 deposit to Campus Ministry by March 30.

Gospel Concert

The Villanova Gospel Ensemble will perform in concert on Saturday (3/28) at Zion Baptist Church, Broad and Venango Sts., in Philadelphia. The performance begins at 6 p.m. This is the Gospel Ensemble's first appearance off-campus this year, and we ask your support.

Planetarium Show

There will be a planetarium and slide show, Jupiter and Saturn Revisited, on Friday, March 27 and April 3 at 8 p.m. on the fourth floor of Mendel Hall. An observing session with the 6-inch telescope will follow, weather permitting.

CPR

Beta Gamma Tau is sponsoring a CPR class to be held Saturday, April 4 from 1-4 p.m. and Thursday, April 9 from 6-9 p.m. in the North Lounge, Dougherty. Class size is limited to 50.

Forensics Evening

Interested in seeing a different type of dramatic performance? The Forensic Society is putting on an Evening with Forensics, on Tuesday, March 31, in the Connelly Center Cinema, at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Political Union

Villanova Political Union
How do we stop the Soviets?
Speaker: Robert A. Montserrat
Resolution: "This House Favors a Return to the Cold War."
Monday, March 30, 1981
North Lounge, Dougherty Hall, 7 p.m.

Lecture on Rape

Ms. Ann Achoff from W.O.A.R. (Women Organized Against Rape) will be speaking in the East Lounge, Dougherty Hall, on April 1 at 8 p.m. Her talk will deal with prevention of rape as well as how to help someone who has been raped. The lecture is sponsored by H.O.T.

Need a Friend?

Is school getting you down. Are you having problems with your roommate? Do you just need someone to talk to? If so, you've got a friend in Help on Tap. H.O.T. is students helping other students. We really care, so give us a call at 645-7232. Hours: Sunday-Friday, 6 p.m.-12 noon.

Balloon Day

Anyone interested in being a part of the entertainment for balloon Day is asked to sign up at Campus Ministry this week and/or attend the planning meeting on April 2 at 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Ministry office. All talents welcome; jugglers, magicians, singers, dancers, gymnasts, comedians ... the list is endless.

Lecture Series

The Art and Art History Dept. sponsors the next in the Artist Lecture series on Thursday, April 2, at 8 p.m. Jim Nutt, a nationally famous painter, will speak in the Lawrence Hall auditorium on Rosemont's campus. He was a member of the Chicago group of painters who called themselves "The Hairy Who", in the late 60's. His topic will be Chicago art and its impact on the mid-west. All members of the University community are invited to attend the lecture.

Senator Speaks on Foreign Policy

By BOBBIE FRY

Former Chairman of the U.S. Senate's Foreign Relations Committee, Frank Church, spoke on U.S. foreign policy in Latin America at the Connelly Center, March 24.

Sen. Frank Church lectured at Villanova on Tuesday night about America's policy towards Latin America. Jeff Page Photo

Church, is greatly opposed to the Reagan administration's policy towards Latin America.

Church feels Reagan's administration is using El Salvador's revolution as a symbol to stop Soviet intervention throughout the world. Church says, "Not since the days of 'gunboat diplomacy' has there been such an urgent item before an administration."

He believes that "Reagan's rhetorical barrage against the Soviets is reminiscent of the cold war causing a polarized world between Washington and Moscow."

Church thinks "Secretary of State Alexander Haig believes trouble originates in the Kremlin and is exported. The Reagan administration sees the strife in El Salvador as if it was made in Russia.

"El Salvador is seen as a country with its own indigenous problems," Church explains. El Salvador is a non-strategic country with 60 percent of its people living in rural areas and impoverished. Two percent of the population owns 50 percent of the land and there were over 11,000 recorded murders last year in the country.

The reigning government claims that regardless of the Russians, revolution would still be taking place. In other words, Church says, "The problems in El Salvador are home-grown."

"History and past experience suggests our heavy hand embrace may seek to jeopardize the control the reigning government has in El Salvador and cause guerrilla war," stated Church. An example of the clenched fist diplomacy failing was the U.S. embargo on Cuba where, "we succeeded not in isolating Cuba, but isolating ourselves ... and aiding to make Fidel Castro a hero in third world countries," said Church.

"What would distinguish our presence in El Salvador from Russia in Afghanistan?" questioned Church about Reagan's policy in Latin America. He states that, "An attempt to pull out roots of revolution will only make the reckoning worse." Church feels that the policy of giving arms to anti-communist countries is not the answer.

Church suggests we look to countries with more knowledge than we have on the matter, "Mexico knows their Central American neighbors perhaps better even than 'General Haig' and they say we are on the wrong course. . ."

"Our political and moral principles are not wanted and are not applicable everywhere," Church concluded.

"Mexico knows their Central American neighbors perhaps even better than 'General Haig' and they say we are on the wrong course . . . ."

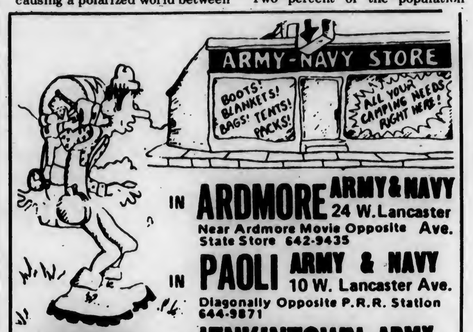
Bring A Friend To Dinner, Lunch, Brunch, Drinks!

GREENHOUSE RESTAURANT

5 MINUTES FROM VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

687-2801 Belrose Lane & King of Prussia Rd. Radnor, PA

BRING THIS AD AND V.U. I.D. FOR A 10% DISCOUNT



IN ARDMORE ARMY & NAVY 24 W. Lancaster Ave. Near Ardmore Movie Opposite State Store 642-9435

IN PAOLI ARMY & NAVY 10 W. Lancaster Ave. Diagonally Opposite P.R.R. Station 644-9871

IN JENKINTOWN ARMY & NAVY 705 Greenwood Ave. On Boro Parking Lot 884-9441

IN WAYNE ARMY & NAVY 156 E. LANCASTER 293-9832

CHARGE! Most Major Credit Cards Honored

the Villanovan Classifieds

SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE

Applicants are now being considered for the 1981 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts, Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Theater Director, Piano Accompanist and Singing, Archery, Tennis, Trampoline, Gymnastics, Photography, Cheerleading, Jazzercize, Scouting and Nature Study, A.R.C. Swimming Instructor, Boating, Canoeing and Water Skiing Instructor or General Athletics. COUNSELOR UNIT LEADERS must be college graduate experienced in camping. Able to plan schedule for activities, evening programs, etc. Supervise large staff. Write Camp Office, 700 Ardmore Ave., No. 102, Haverford Village, Ardmore, Pa. 19003 or phone Miss Sherman, 215-649-9622 or 215-687-7801.

PRESTIGE TYPING SERVICE

Theses, Dissertations, Manuscripts, Foreign Languages (Linguist on Staff), Medical, Resumes, Etc. — Near Campus Representative:

482-1796

TDK cassettes FOR SALE
TDK SA (chrome) $38.00 case of 10 — Save $24.00
TDK AD (ferric chrome) $33.00 case of 10 — Save $18.00
Lowest Prices Anywhere
Call DAVE, Room 422 Stanford

LOFT WANTED

A three-person loft is needed for next year. Must be in good condition and hardware included. We are willing to pay good money. Contact third floor Moriarity, rooms 25 or 19, or call 525-9236 and ask for the above rooms.

House mate wanted for summer months (June-August) in 4 bedroom Bryn Mawr location. One mile from Villanova. Call after 5:30 p.m., ask for Nancy, 527-1294.

TENNIS INSTRUCTORS for city youth program, July-August. Car and experience necessary, excellent salary and gas allowance. Call Program Director for application, 548-7225.

REWARD! A big gold Sarah Coventry cross was lost Monday between Dougherty and Mendel. Strong sentimental value! If found, call Dina at 527-9738. Reward offered.

Large 2-bedroom apartment to rent for two men. Utilities included. $165 each per month. Near City Line, good trans. and shopping. GR 7-0713.

DISCOUNT TYPING
Quality typing at discount prices. Reports, manuscripts, editing. Mail us your work — and save $.
Quick and Dependable (Mon.-Sat.)
7126 Germantown Ave.
Phila., PA 19119
Phone, 247-2267

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 293-9999.

ORIENTATION '81

Applications now available in STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE

Applications due MARCH 31, 1981

In Student Activites Office Rm. 214 Dougherty by 5:00

Nominations Open

Seniors, juniors, and sophomores in all undergraduate day colleges, as well as full-time faculty members of those colleges will nominate candidates for the twenty-first annual Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation awards for distinguished teaching. Student voting for these nominations will be held on Monday, March 30 and Tuesday, March 31, in the main lobby of Connelly Center, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on each day, and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday, March 30. Faculty will vote by mail.

Voters will be invited to choose any three full-time faculty members who are not previous winners. The five candidates receiving the highest number of votes will be the official nominees for the Lindback awards. The President of the University will select two names from the list of five and designate them as winners of the 1981 Lindback awards, and present them with checks of $1000 each at commencement exercises in May. About twenty other faculty members receiving the highest number of votes will be designated as honorable mention, and their names will appear in a subsequent issue of the Villanovan.

The Lindback Foundation annually makes grants available to colleges in the Delaware Valley to encourage effective teaching on the undergraduate level. Previous winners of the award are not eligible for re-election by terms of the foundation's regulations.

Seminars Held

By JACK DEPIERRO

The student government will be sponsoring a series of seminars for students who have been placed off campus because of a poor pick in the lottery or who have decided to live off campus in the future. The lectures will be given by the Legal Information Center.

Two second semester law students, Kevin Gleason and Mary Glah, plan to conduct the seminars. The seminars will be held in various dormitories throughout Villanova's campus.

Primarily, the lectures will be a study in preventative law. Topics to be discussed are leases and lease provisions, which take into consideration property and contract law, business relationships and tenant behavior.

Questions concerning zoning ordinances and any trouble which can be encountered by tenants will be covered. A question and answer period will follow each lecture.

Any questions which may arise can be answered at the seminar series or by contacting the Legal Information Center at 207-B Dougherty Hall or by phoning the center at 645-7212.

The seminar series will begin on Monday, March 30 and the dates and locations will be posted on bulletin boards throughout the dormitories.

Elections

(Continued from page1)

didates began petitioning March 18 with a one week period to get the required signatures.

The SGA Election Committee has laid down the same rules as in the past for this year's campaign. Presidential campaigns are limited to a $100 budget, with candidates for Senate seats being limited to $40. Permission must be obtained from proper University authorities in order to campaign in designated areas.

According to present SGA President Henry Amoroso, the change in location of the voting areas is beneficial to everyone. "This was designed to encourage more voting," Amoroso said. "In the past the voting for each individual college was done at that college. We're looking for a bigger response."

In addition, while not supporting any one candidate, the present SGA Senators are trying to "publicize" for the candidates the rules and regulations for the elections.

"Commerce and Finance is the 'hot race' this year," commented Amoroso. "I'm a little disappointed with the turnout in Arts and Sciences, though. Basically this election is almost identical to last year's. There are three very capable people running for president."

AEROBIC DANCE
"Chorus Line To Better Health"

Increases Cardiovascular Endurance • Trims - Shapes - Firms to Music • Provides More Stamina and Mental Relaxation

8 one-hour sessions $27.00 Twice Weekly

Registration required - Fridays 9 P.M.

Call Mary Ellen McKnight, M.Ed.

Peter Nadel Dance Studio 664-1010
20 Lehigh Avenue, Devon 19333

★ Announcing: ★

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE DEBATES

Wednesday, April 1, 1981

Connelly Center Cinema

12 noon to 1:15 p.m.

COME ON OUT AND MEET THE CANDIDATES.

QUESTION PERIOD.

Sponsored by your Student Government

James Francis Elliott

Jumbo Elliott (c) with Don Paige (l) and Eamonn Coghlan (r).

On April 3, 1981,

The Villanovan

will publish a special 4-page supplement:

"A Tribute to Jumbo Elliott:

The End of an Era."

AIR FORCE ROTC

Gateway to a great way of life.

A FORMULA FOR YOUR FUTURE

Air Force ROTC plus your college degree adds up to a commission as an Air Force officer. While you're still in college our two-, three-, and four-year scholarships can offset the high cost of tuition, fees and books. And you can receive $100 per month for living expenses.

We're looking for young men and women who are working toward degrees in science and engineering areas. We have a very special future for you. As an Air Force officer you'll work at the forefront of technology with modern equipment and support. You'll make the most of your degree and lay the groundwork for the future.

For yourself and your future, find out more about our formula for your future. Find out more about Air Force ROTC. Contact:

Air Force ROTC Det 750
Saint Joseph's University
Philadelphia, PA 19131
(215) 879-7311, 12

Arts Grad Speaks of Career

LEONARD J. La BARTH

Former Villanovan editor Joan C. Barnish visited Villanova Monday, March 16, to address the Communications Society in the Connelly Center's Haverford Room.

Barnish, a 1979 graduate, is a general assignment television reporter currently working at WNEP-TV, Channel 16, an ABC affiliate in Scranton-WilkesBare. Previously, Barnish was employed at WBOY-TV in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Speaking to approximately 30 students, Barnish spoke on many of the problems and incidents awaiting aspiring broadcast journalists and on how she began her own career after graduation.

"Obviously it takes a lot of time and patience," admitted Barnish. "When I left V.U. in May, I didn't know what I was going to do. Everyone with a major had a path to follow except for me. I just started writing letters and sending resumes to television stations and soon I got some back."

Enough return letters requesting an audition tape prompted her to make one and send it along to the various stations along with her own requests for personal interviews. "My mother and I just packed up the car and went," Barnish related. "You have to be willing to just go. I ended up where a lot of beginners do, in a small audience market in West Virginia.

According to Barnish, an important aspect when applying or auditioning for a job is "not to apply until you can do it." "You have to be convinced what you have is better than the person's next to you."

After six months in West Virginia doing everything from covering pet shows to anchoring the Saturday night news, Barnish once again made tapes and hoping for a position in a higher rating market, applied to a number of stations. She accepted her current position after turning down an offer from a Lancaster station.

"There are a lot of openings if you want it," urged Barnish, "Nothing is beyond anyone's reach." She also emphasized that with a major in Communications Arts, the student should have a somewhat easier time. "You have to work and work because that is all you can do. You don't stop learning until you want to stop learning.

"Some things just have to be covered," related the reporter. "At times it can be gory like when the camera has to cover a murder but sometimes there isn't much choice. After a while it gets into your blood."

Joan Barnish, former Villanovan editor. Jeff Page Photo

TheOneDay SpeedReadingCourse©

IS COMING TO TOWN!

Two Nights Only
Wednesday, April 1st, 6 to 10 pm
Thursday, April 2nd, 6 to 10 pm
Holiday Inn, 36th & Chestnut

Double Your Reading Skill for $75. Guaranteed!

The Canterbury Press will be in the Philadelphia area for 2 nights only to present its unique course in speed reading. Conventional speed reading courses cost too much ($325 to $495) . . . take too long (6 to 8 weeks) . . . and aren't designed specifically for students.

The One Day Course changes all that. Tuition is $75, and the complete technique is taught in one highly charged 4-hour class. Results are positively guaranteed, as follows:

The guarantee states:
"If you do not at least double your reading rate within 2 weeks after taking the One Day Course, you will receive a full tuition refund. All you have to do is practice during those 2 weeks for 30 minutes each day."

Will this course improve my grades?
Grade improvement cannot be guaranteed. But, if you invest the same amount of study time, and can read twice as fast, the chances are that you will improve your grades. Studies have shown repeatedly that the better students are the faster readers. These same studies have shown that faster readers also remember more.

Does it work on all subjects?
No. You can't read numbers, formulas or graphs rapidly. You should not even try to read poetry or plays rapidly—they are meant to be read outloud so you can hear their music. Furthermore, trained readers do not read everything at the same rate. They learn how to shift gears depending on the material. During the One Day Course, you will learn how to develop this skill to the fullest. Science, history, literature, economics, finance, law, business and psychology are but a few of the subjects where this technique can be applied.

Will I be able to use the new technique right away?
Improvement is gradual, comfortable, and almost immediate. You will use the technique on current daily studies as soon as you have completed the One Day Course. In addition, all of your practice will be on current daily studies, including preparing for tests.

How does it feel to read this way?
The average college student reads approximately 300 words per minute (that translates to one typical novel page). At 600 words per minute there isn't much difference in the sensation. But when you reach 1000 words per minute, it's been compared to watching a movie. Perhaps that sounds a bit exaggerated, but instead of just words, graduates say whole ideas, scenes and conversations enter the mind. At 1000 words per minute, data is perceived in a more life-like manner, as opposed to 300 words per minute where the information is gathered in bits and pieces. Incidentally, 1000 words per minute is well within the grasp of students who will put in extra effort. Remember, The Canterbury Press guarantees that you will double your rate in only two weeks. Continued practice will further your skill.

How do I know if I need it?
If you can answer yes to any of the following, you need the One Day Speed Reading Course.
(yes)(no) I sometimes daydream when I read.
(yes)(no) I have trouble keeping up with my workload.
(yes)(no) I wish I had more free time.
(yes)(no) I have trouble remembering what I read.
(yes)(no) I want to improve my grades.
(yes)(no) I wish I enjoyed reading more.

With exams coming up, there is nothing you can do in one day that will have as great an effect on your test results.

The Canterbury Press

Class size is limited. To ensure a reserved seat call The Canterbury Press at 215 672 6722.
Or enroll 30 minutes before class. Visa, MasterCharge, checks, cash, etc. are acceptable.
Note: Bring current daily reading material with you.
2 different types; for example, a novel & a biology text.

©1981. The One Day Speed Reading Course is an exclusive program of The Canterbury Press.

If We Only Knew You Better

When the average student thinks of Villanova track, thoughts of such greats as Marty Liquori, Don Paige, and Sydnee Maree often come to mind. The track program at Villanova has become a legend throughout the world. It is too bad that most of us could not appreciate the man behind the legend — James Francis Elliott.

Even though "Jumbo" has coached Olympian after Olympian, we only remember the runners and the gold medals. Even though Elliott was associated with Villanova for over 47 years, one somehow feels that we never got to know him. There had to have been something to this legend, however; something too large for us to understand.

We have heard it from the sportswriters. We have heard it from his many track stars. We have heard it from his friends. Even though we think of his many track victories, they think about "Jumbo" Elliott — the man. And after all, they really knew him best.

In this day when colleges try to breed quality athletes, Elliott was more concerned with breeding quality men. He was more than a coach, or so these people say. "He had a rough-tough exterior; at times he could play the part of a bully — ask the meet directors or the officials who incurred his wrath in days gone by," said Frank Dolson, the Sports Editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer, "but he cared about the kids who competed for him as too few coaches care . . . and he kept caring long after they quit competing."

It must have been something to run for "Jumbo" Elliott. It had to be; "I always called him Mr. Elliott, never coach," said Don Paige, "because I considered him more than a coach. I considered him an advisor, an adviser in my everyday life."

Elliott himself was responsible for the success of the Villanova track program. Villanova could not offer the facilities, the recognition, or the money. We could only offer "Jumbo."

It is sad that we could not have known "Jumbo" better during his years at Villanova. Then again, if we had, the loss to Villanova might be an even greater one.

Why Are We Voting, Anyway?

This Thursday, many of us will cast a ballot for the Student Body President and the Senators from our respective colleges. This is the time when students can choose their elected representatives. Even though this concept may sound very democratic, it will probably be totally useless.

An elected representative can only be as effective as the constituents who stand behind him. If the majority of students do not care about the governance at Villanova, the work of our student leaders will be severely hampered. Unfortunately, this has been the case at Villanova for several years.

This year's budget debate is a perfect case in point. Even though the Senate barely passed the proposed budget by a 13-11-5 vote, its acceptance was guaranteed long before the debate on the Senate floor last Friday. The student body at Villanova approved the budget; not by our actions, but by our indifference.

Reports of the Board of Trustees bypassing student input on the budget prompted little student response. The 12% and 14% tuition increases have, in effect, been accepted by the student body. Even though our elected representatives did their best to block the proposed budget, the odds were stacked against them. If the administration and the Board of Trustees could sense that the majority of students were behind this effort, maybe, just maybe, the outcome would have been different.

We at the Villanovan sense this feeling of apathy towards student government and Villanova. When we report of criticism of proposed tuition hikes, we receive "Letters to the Editor" about an innocuous article on Florida vacationing. When we report on a Presidential appointment of a faculty member, we receive letters about a sign on a women's locker room in St. Mary's Hall. In fact, it sometimes seems that students read "Who Knows, Who Cares" before they read the front page.

Maybe the majority of Villanova students are only concerned with week-end parties and a job after graduation. At least, though, some people are willing to give their time to serve the student body. It is too bad that the majority of students don't seem to care about their efforts or actions.

If students were able to stand together and take an interest in student government, then, and only then, would our votes on Thursday really mean something. Until then, student government elections will not mean that students are adequately represented at Villanova.

letters

Florida Response

Dear Editor,

I am sorry to even waste the space in the Villanovan, but I must ask just one question of Emily Dilfo in reference to her "Letter to the Editor" appearing in last week's issue.

What is your problem?

Sincerely,
Michael J. Twamley

Fan Support

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on the article in last Friday's Villanovan, "Fans Flock to North Carolina." This was one of several times that the Villanovan commented on the tremendous support of VU basketball fans but failed to even mention the cheerleaders. A few weeks back, in your article about the basketball club, it was mentioned that the spirit and enthusiasm of these fans are such that they were dubbed the "Sixth Man" for the basketball team. Certainly all of these fans are deserving of the credit they receive for their dedication, school spirit and support, but how can you so easily overlook the efforts of Villanova's No. 1 spirit raisers, the cheerleaders. This is a group, whose season begins in August and ends in March, that has almost doubled their allotted budget through fundraisers in order to travel, i.e. drive to every football game and all but three basketball games. And the only reason for missing those three games is because the budget was depleted and, at that point, the last fundraising efforts were turned toward raising money to go to the Big East Conference Tournament in Syracuse so that Villanova would not go without being represented in their conference tournament.

I hate to pat ourselves on the back, but I am a firm believer in giving credit where credit is due and in closing I would like to commend the following on a job well done . . . Brian, Ann, Linda, Patty, Mary Jude, Myron, Linda P., Sharon, Rosey, Mark D., Whitey, John, Diane, Patty R., Mark S., and Jerry . . . .With regards to talent, personality, and, most of all, school spirit, you guys are, by far, the greatest group of cheerleaders Villanova has ever seen!!!!

Very Sincerely,
Susan Radwanski

Guys and Dolls

Dear Editor:

I would like to congratulate the cast and crew of "Guys and Dolls" for their fine performance Saturday night. They are a credit to the Theatre Department and Villanova University. It was evident that an enormous amount of hard work and talent went in to the production, and I believe that everyone involved deserves our highest praise. I hope that we will continue to have this high standard of performance in the future. Best of luck for your upcoming plans, and once again congratulations.

Sincerely,
Robert J. Ackerman
Class of 1982

Excitement

To the Editor:

For pure, unadulterated sports excitement, watching the Villanova basketball team play on television in Syracuse, New York and Charlotte, North Carolina these past two weekends may have been recently exceeded only by watching the Philadelphia Phillies win the National League pennant and the World Series. For inspiring pure, unadulterated pride, however, watching the Villanova basketball team this entire season was exceeded by no one. I was very proud indeed to be associated with a University whose basketball team represented its school as well as ours did. My congratulations and thanks to Coach Massimino and his staff, and to all the members of the team.

Sterling F. Delano
Department of English

Complaint

Dear Editor,

Within the last few weeks I was approached by an organization which is doing business in the tri-state area under the alternate names of Energy Age 1 and Solar United National Products, Incorporated. After attending an indoctrination meeting curiosity led me to research the activities of the organization. Their business structure is referred to as a 'pyramid' marketing scheme and operated after the fashion of a chain letter.

The company's product line includes: a fuel efficiency device for automobiles, an in-window solar heater, a line of jewelry and silver flatware. In the course of the sales routine, the promoters emphasize the great potential profits associated with participation in their plan. There is one small problem which goes unmentioned. The

The facts are simple. Of the two nam used in the promotions only one is a r gistered name. The only solar device their line actually decreases the amount solar radiation available to heat livi space. The promoters claim that F. L Bailey is a director of the corporation. M Bailey knows nothing of the organizati The agreement which one is encouraged sign is instantly voidable at the election either party without notice.

All of these factors are not of themselv sufficient for any real legal action. How ever, some agencies are very interested continuing the investigation, including: t FBI, SEC, FTC, Pa. Securities Co mission, N.J. Securities Commission, U.S Postal Inspectors, and the IRS. I would want all of those guys mad at me!

My investigation took an interesting tur when F. Lee Bailey's Washington repr sentative, Mr. Wayne Smith, called the Bu letin about the story. I spoke to a report from the Bulletin. She was very interest in being fed the story which was the produ of my labor. When I suggested that my i vestigative expenses be covered by h paper I was accused of being a "stringer whatever that is. Also I was accused of pa ticipating in a scheme to trade the repu tion of a future attorney for a lousy hundr bucks. We could not reach agreement.

Oh well, why not try the Inquirer? Wh more receptive to the proposition, the I quirer has still not accepted.

Now I know what they mean by the e pression, "Between the devil and the de blue sea." Should I turn over the inform tion and swallow the loss in the interest the public good?

I adopted a three-part plan to bring th case to a close. First, all of my informati was turned over the the FBI White Coll Crime Unit. Second, I returned to the saf of the law school. Third, the Villanov scoops the major metropolitan newspap

Lesson learned — Don't talk to strange

Sincer

Kevin C. Gle

letters

R.A. Concern

To the Editor:

This letter is written in regard to the dismissal of Marietta Hanigan as Resident Assistant of first floor Good Counsel. In my opinion, Dean Drury's decision to terminate Marietta as R.A. was made hastily without a thorough investigation of the situation. If the Dean of Women had listened to all sides of the issue and still felt dubious as to Marietta's capability as R.A., then a review of Marietta's past record, academically as well as R.A., would have resolved the Dean's uncertainty.

The fact that the first floor is now without the proper supervision of an R.A. adds to the irrationality of the Dean's decision. How can the two remaining Resident Assistants at Good Counsel be expected to take responsibility of an additional forty girls each? The relationship Marietta has formed with the residents of her floor cannot be replaced by a "substitute" R.A. Furthermore, it would be totally unfair to expect the residents of the second and third floors, who are entitled to full-time R.A.'s, to share them with another floor. The atmosphere a Resident Assistant establishes on her hall is an ongoing experience and cannot be re-established, replaced or fulfilled by any other than the one who initiated it.

During Freshman Orientation, I was told repeatedly "You make the difference". Several times I came close to believing this. Yet, as I view administrative and bureaucratic tactics more and more, I begin to wonder what difference could possibly be made. Well, on first floor Good Counsel, Marietta Hanigan makes the difference. We sincerely hope Dean Drury will reconsider her decision.

JEANNE CRIBBEN '84

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the dismissal of Marietta Hanigan as my resident advisor. Having been informed of the facts of the incident, I feel that her case was not given due consideration. Although Miss Hanigan's actions may have demanded some form of discipline, it is my opinion that the action taken was somewhat rash and extremely severe.

As a resident advisor, Miss Hahigan has developed a working relationship with the girls on her floor which is based of trust and friendship. Over the past academic year, she has held a perfect record as an R.A. and has initiated and encouraged many programs in our dorm. Her judgement in the past has illustrated a strong sense of ethics and responsibility.

As a resident of Good Counsel, the dismissal of Miss Hanigan directly affects my well-being. Previously there were three R.A.'s in the dorm. Each R.A. was responsible for one floor of 80 girls — a large enough number in itself. Now however, the two remaining R.A.'s are responsible for 120 girls each. Not only is this a fire hazard, but it also deprives the girls of necessary supervision and counseling.

Having observed Miss Hanigan in day-to-day interaction with her residents, I feel that there are many important issues that were overlooked in deciding this case. Villanova University claims to be a school which upholds Christian values and ideas. However, this action hardly appears to reflect the beliefs they profess.

Carol Achtmeyer
Class of '84

Dear Editor:

As a fellow resident assistant I am deeply disturbed concerning the firing of Marietta Hanigan. Although R.A.'s are not above the rules and regulations of the University, Miss Hanigan's action was not cause for dismissal. During our R.A. orientation we were told that we were not infallible and that we were apt to make mistakes, but that the respected Deans would back us up publicly 100% and if we handled a situation poorly they would explain how they felt the situation should have been handled.

Dean (Becky) Drury because of the pressure of a parent removed Miss Hanigan from her position without taking into account her outstanding record as a R.A. Katherine Carter (Resident Staff Director in charge of hiring and firing R.A.'s), fellow R.A.'s and over 200 girls from Good Counsel appealed to Becky but because of her close mindedness and even jealousy toward the excellent job that Katherine Carter is doing, Becky is using Miss Hanigan and Good Counsel as a scapegoat.

Miss Hanigan will not be replaced this semester and Good Counsel (240 residents) will operate with two R.A.'s for the rest of the semester (that's one R.A. per 120 residents). Security is no problem as it is harder to get into Good Counsel then it is to get into Becky's office, but the counseling, programming and administrative tasks that are needed and always stressed will be lacking as the remaining R.A.'s will be put under a heavy burden and the residents will suffer. I feel justice has not been achieved in this case and I hope that some one in the administration will take time and review the case objectively.

Name on File

To the Editor:

After making a questionable judgement call on March 13, 1981, I was dismissed from my position as Resident Assistant. The decision to dismiss me was made without regard to my spotless record. The decision also left no avenue for appeal.

As an R.A., I have worked hard and done many things for my residents. For example, during the first semester I had 7 programs even though only 2 are required. Also, as the RSA moderator, I worked on and supervised many of their social events. I have never shirked my responsibility to enforce rules and regulations.

On March 13, I sponsored a St. Patrick's Day party for approximately 100 students. During the party, one of my residents came to me and asked me to open her friend's door. I explained to her that it was against University policy. She convinced me that she had a serious problem to talk about and there was no other place available for them to talk. I had seen this girl and the girl whose room it was together often and therefore had no reason to doubt that they were friends. Because this resident has a history of emotional problems and I was concerned for her, I could not take her request lightly. I decided to honor her adamant request and open the door.

Evidently, my view of these two resident's relationship was mistaken. On Monday morning the student whose room was opened complained to the Dean of Women and on Monday afternoon I was fired. I contend the decision to release me was a rash one and gave me no avenue of appeal.

When I went to Dean Drury's office she asked me to recount the events of March 13. After doing so, she informed me of my dismissal. I asked her to consider my perfect record as a resident advisor. She said, "Marietta, I have no idea what your record is and I really don't care." She told me I would get written notification from Father Deegan of my dismissal if he approved it. I then made an appointment with Father Deegan.

My meeting with Fr. Deegan was lengthy, but provided little assistance. I explained to him that my record was not considered. His response was that he would set up a second appointment with Dean Drury if I wanted to present my record to her. I asked Fr. Deegan if he would attend second meeting and offer a third opinion. He said he would not. I then asked him if he would speak to Dean Drury in reference to my perfect record which was documented not only in my letter, but in the letter of my supervisor as well. He said he would not. After further discussion, Fr. Deegan explained to me that after my second meeting with Dean Drury he would follow through on whatever recommendation she made with regard to my dismissal. I then asked "if he was only doing what she recommended who was ever to say that the Dean of Women made a mistake?" He explained it was a judgement and I thought it was wrong because I didn't agree with it. Because he had not answered my question I asked it again. He reiterated; just because my decision was different than hers that I felt her decision was wrong. Because he still had not addressed my question I tried to clarify it by asking "regardless of how I feel who will ever check the Dean's decisions". He again repeated "it is because you disagree that you think it is wrong". This is the core of my argument. It is simple for the Dean to say I made a bad decision but there is no check point to say if she made a bad decision.

I did keep the second appointment with Dean Drury. She sat and listened as I reviewed my spotless record. After I finished she stated she was once again going to recommend to Fr. Deegan that I be dismissed. A day later I received notification of my dismissal.

I am aware the system is changing. I am writing and making the faults of the present system public in hopes of preventing this type of problem from occurring in the future. The new administrative structure has great potential and I am confident all of the students will benefit from it.

Sincerely,
Marietta Hanigan

Budget

Dear Editor:

As a member of a governing body of Villanova, specifically, the University Senate, I feel indebted to express my opinion regarding the senatorial approval of the Administrative Budget last Friday.

I believe it was no surprise that students actively opposed the budget with faculty sharing mixed emotions. Although student efforts were aimed at defeating the budget, we did not seek sympathy for the unjust burden placed upon us or our families, but rather a precedent to restore senatorial impact on the budgetary procedure at Villanova.

The fact that certain elements of the budget, namely student tuition and faculty increments, had already received previous approval from the Board of Trustees evinces the mismatched role of our University Senate.

As it stands, the University Senate is to evaluate the Administrative Budget from its three dimensional perspective: Administration, Faculty, and Students. I am happy to report that the Univ. Senate has finally established its procedure for priortizing the needs of this University, yet on Friday some lost sight of these efforts.

Therefore, my dismay at the outcome on Friday is far overshadowed by my concern for the future. If Villanova is to rely on their present system of eliminating uncertainty from its budgetary forecasts by extending decision dates, then I pray for their success.

Louis J. Casari
Caucus Chairman
C & F Senate

Seniors

Dear Editor,

As seniors, the frustration of being a Villanova Student has once again been brought to our attention. Yet another faux-pas has been committed. This time the error (shall we say errors?) has been concerning the senior dinner dance. You know, the Senior Dinner Dance that is supposed to be on Friday April 11 . . . or is that Saturday April 11, or is that Friday April 10, or is that Friday April 11 of 1982? As far as we can tell, Friday April 11 does not exist as such this year. Does that mean this year's Senior Dinner Dance isn't until next year?

Does that mean we have to buy the tickets this year for next year's dance, or should we have bought tickets last year for this year's dance?

Are there tickets for this year's dance at all? You know, the ones that were supposed to go on sale last week or is it this week or perhaps next week? Or do we buy the tickets at the door?

For the past four years at Villanova University, we have heard and read numerous complaints about Villanova's social life, or lack thereof. With organization and planning such as this need we ask why?

Sincerely,
"Irate Seniors"

the Villanovan

BOARD OF EDITORS

Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey
Sharon Winters

News, Mary Anne Granger
Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone
Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki
Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia
Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida
Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese

Advertising, Dawn Miller
Assistant News Editor, Sara Kelly
Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

News: Carol Alkons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Lavelle, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli, Bob Herman.

Features: Mary Anne Bilz, Re Crossan, Deidre Flanagan, Susan French, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Edward Lis, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, Catherine Murphy, John Pace, Betty Rutkowski, Cathy Shiels, Kate McDonald.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Radan, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Brehm, Fred Pescatore, Mark Kelly, Echelmeier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPasca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmetag.

Sports: William Beck, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Dave Glickman, Larry Goanos, Michael Healy, Michael Jacobs, Jeff Lerner, Kathy Maher, Roy Mita, Al Oxenreiter, Peter Ryan, Jerry Ventresca, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Coskey

By ROBERT McGOVERN AND JEFF PAGE

This week, the Villanovan asked the student body to give their thoughts on the death of Jumbo Elliott, Villanova's track coach.

It's a tragic occurrence. He was a great coach and the track program will be hurt, but they should be able to overcome the loss.

Priscilla Bodner, Sophomore, Communications

It's a great loss to the Villanova community. He was Villanova track and he will be greatly missed.

Anne Elnitsky, Sophomore, Bi

A real bummer. An era of track and field has come to an end. I just hope Villanova can keep up the excellent program he built and that we pay proper tribute to such a fine man.

Bob "Bear" Metter, Sophomore," Economics

I feel real badly about it. I never knew the man, but I always held a great deal of respect for him. It is a great loss to the Villanova community.

Robert Hubsmith, Senior, Economics

It's a real tragedy especially since he was to be inducted next week into the NCAA Hall of Fame. I think the school should set aside a day for this great man.

Bob Barbiere, Freshman, C&F

Jumbo Elliot's been a part of Villanova for as long as I can remember. My father and brothers went here and we've always had a deep respect for the man and his ability.

Mary J. Elighton Senior, B.A

I was shocked because it was so sudden, I know he'll be missed by many people and that it will be hard to find someone else with his ability.

Nancy Denise, Sophomore, Marketing

I was shocked and surprised. I feel that it is a great loss for Villanova. He did a lot, not just in athletics but for the school as a whole. He will be greatly missed.

Daryl Murphy, Senior, Psych

Spirit Of Life Reflected In Green

By MIKE GIAMMARCO

It seems that no one is unaware of the tragic slaying of black children throughout Atlanta, Georgia. There have been twenty bodies uncovered, few apparent patterns in the killings, and no clues. The situation has caused so much fear in Atlanta residents that children are advised never to travel alone, never to talk to any strangers — not even policemen, and are not hindered when they arm themselves.

Due to Atlanta's 50 per cent black population, several authorities have labeled the killings as racially motivated, although the parents of several of the victims assume "the man" (the killer) is black. One way or another, he, if it is indeed a man, seems to be able to win enough trust from the child to lure him into his car.

However, the situation has become so severe that one pattern seems apparent. When a black child is reported missing, his parents can do little else than expect the worst; as in the case of the latest two missing children, yet to be recovered. The intense grief and turmoil of the community has prompted community members to take action. Volunteers throughout the city have formed a vigilante group, recognizable by their red jackets, as they scan the streets for children breaking the seven o'clock curfew. Community groups have been raising money for the afflicted families, as well as establishing watch posts throughout the city.

The situation has received nationwide concern. President Reagan has proposed adding $1.5 million to a previous grant of $1 million given to the Atlanta police for expenses in tracking down the killer. Detectives from the area and out of state have been donating their services to help the cause. Nearer to home, a group of Philadelphia banks have pooled their resources and are offering part of a one million dollar reward to any group or individual whose information leads to the capture and conviction of the killer. The other parts will be divided among the victim's families and investigation aids as well.

Many efforts and services have been offered from private citizens, religious organizations, and civic organizations throughout the nation. These efforts have helped to comfort the grieving families. Concerned citizens have also offered suggestions for safety in urban Atlanta, and have spread their concern throughout their own communities.

One small but meaningful reminder, thought of by one black woman living in North Philadelphia, was the wearing of green ribbons. The woman thought that wearing a green ribbon would be the perfect symbol for the spirit of growth and life; a new hope in the minds of those crushed with anguish. The idea has spread throughout the nation.

Barbara Haenn of the Campus Ministry, and the Villanovans for Life, found this cause worthy and appropriate in the religious sense. Hours were spent cutting tiny green ribbons and attaching safety pins, so that they could be distributed at the campus masses. Over one thousand ribbons were handed out. Along with the ribbons came a slip of paper produced by the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Its appeal is directed at anyone who values human life:

Join in sympathy for the children murdered in Atlanta and for the support of their families, the black community and the people of the city. Green represents the color in nature of life and growth. Support life by supporting the human dignity of each person.

(Additional ribbons available in the Campus Ministry office).

Food for thought

Facts That Are Incredible

By SUSAN WILMARTH

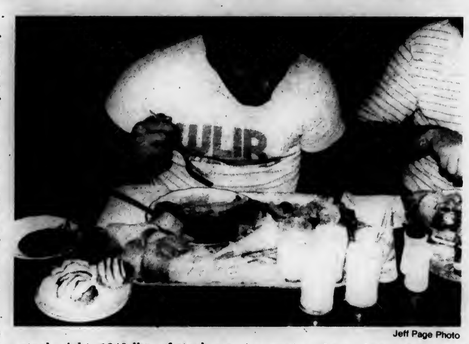
Chances are that if you're one of the approximately 2,900 students on Villanova's meal plan, you haven't given a thought to just how much food is needed to keep all of us going. The job of J. Leslie Gies, director of Food Services, is to order the food. His grocery list is, well, we'll let the statistics speak for themselves.

The amount of food consumed in Dougherty Cafeteria alone is staggering. Everyday, students who dine in Dougherty eat 101 of the 207 loaves of bread which are consumed throughout the entire campus. Six hundred and sixty heads of lettuce are eaten daily. Students manage to make their way through 10-12 crates of oranges with 88 oranges to a crate. That's 1056 oranges a day!

In an average week, students go through 1050 dozen eggs, 3100 quarts of milk, and food services can't even keep track of how much orange juice is drunk! As for those hamburgers students fill up on at lunch, consider this: each hamburger weighs 2-1/2 ounces and they eat 1800 lbs. of them a week. That comes out to be 10,900 hamburgers a week!

Next time you're confronted with tray upon tray of cookies, just remember that when they're all gone, students managed to gobble up 500-600 lbs. of cookies. On any steak night, 1340 lbs. of steak are needed to feed approximately 2900 hungry students. When prime rib is served, 140 full prime ribs are prepared. As to the number of boxes of cereal eaten, Gies couldn't even guess. "We must be the Delaware Valley's biggest user of individually wrapped boxes of cereal; there must be over 100 boxes stashed away in Sheehan alone," Gies said.

If you're wondering how Gies knows what to order and in what quantities, you'll be interested to know that a lot of study goes into his educated guess. Over the years, records of food consumption have been kept and estimates are based on these as well as observations of student behavior.



Jeff Page Photo

Gies pointed out, "Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays require more food than Tuesdays and Thursdays because they are busier class days." In addition, the amount of food needed varies from one day to the next "depending on the activities in and around campus." "Much consideration must be given as to how many people are served," said Gies. Generally speaking, Gies considers it a good policy to guess on "the high side of whatever we're going to have."

Art Enhances Connelly Center

VINCENT HAUSMANN

A 14 by 21 abstract painting designed in blue and violet will be suspended from the roof of the Connelly Center on Tuesday, March 31. The massive work, which will fill the blank wall near the Center's stairway, is the first in a series of projects presented by the graduating senior art majors.

Senior Art major Art Masciocchi decided on the unique project this year as he saw a need to fill the large blank wall in the Connelly Center.

"I thought it was a shame for a nice building to have a blank wall. To put an abstract, something geometric, would liven the place up a bit," stated Masciocchi.

Masciocchi originally had planned to paint Alumni Hall's steps but the proposal did not meet with favor from the Board of Trustees and President Driscoll. Driscoll and the Board suggested the Connelly Center as a possible alternative site and the proposal met with approval.

Tuesday's showing will also feature the work of Tony DiPasquale who does portrait sculptures in Bronze. The art exhibits will continue through April and are the culmination of each studio art major's four year program of study. Each major is required to prepare a comprehensive exhibition of work in all media. The "Senior Project," which is part of the student show, is an investigation of a theme in two or more media.

Subsequent shows in the Art Gallery of the Connelly Center will be Cathy Bradley and Diane Staub, both working in painting and printmaking; Janine Dunn, Chris Wright, and Ellen O'Connell will follow in subsequent weeks.

Happiness Comes In Pairs

By KATE McDONALD

On September 8, 1961, David Lanshe was born in Philadelphia, Pa. But the happiness of his parents was doubled when, 2 minutes later, Michael was born. Dave and Mike are identical twins, sophomore finance majors at Villanova University.

Vince and Armando (Army) Gaetano are also identical twins, sophomore mechanical engineers at Villanova. Army is older by 5 minutes. Neither minded that the other would be attending the same college. In fact, these twins will be roommates next year. "It's more convenient," Army said, and Vince included, "We're usually together and are always borrowing from each other anyway." The Gaetanos reside on the second floor of Stanford Hall.

Looking exactly alike with blonde hair and glasses, the Gaetano's could easily fool their teachers in high school. Every April Fool's Day, they'd pretend to be the other person quite successfully. In order to alleviate the confusion in college, one has a moustache and the other does not.

Even though Army and Vince's personalities are slightly different, and one's cum. is higher than the other's, "we never feel like we're in competition," they emphasized. But they have the same interests and preferences; the same mannerisms including their stride when they walk.

The similarities between Vince and Army Gaetano are many, but there is a big difference between these twins and Dave and Mike Lanshe.

The Lanshes will be living off-campus next year but not with each other. They both agreed, "We didn't mind living in the same dorm but wanted to live far enough away from each other." Residents of Stanford Hall, Dave is on the fifth floor and Mike is on the second. This way, each is able to meet more friends.

Mike is convinced that they look more alike as they get older. They both realize that people will get them confused. "But at times, it bothers me," Dave said. "People will just say 'hi' without saying my name or will avoid me altogether to save themselves from embarrassment." Like the Gaetanos, one has a moustache and the other does not.

The thing that bothers Mike the most are the hassles and the "cute stuff." We have the same soccer shirt and if we should happen to wear it on the same day, we get hassled by the guys. A lot of times girls will stare and point if we're together because twins are cute." Dave emphasized, "Wearing the same clothes is definitely out." Mike agreed, "When we both happen to like the same thing, only one of us will buy it." Incidentally, at the time of this interview, both

(Continued on page 13)

Campus Clip

...D held its annual blood drive ... week in the West Lounge of ...gherty Hall.

UNION PAGE

THE BIG EVENT
TALENT SHOW
AVAILABLE MARCH 10
PRIZES!
$100
$75
$50

We're Going Rafting!

(Sign Up April 11, 1981)

THRILLS! EXCITEMENT! ADVENTURE!

IDEAL FOR FIRST-TIMERS TOO!

MEETING TUESDAY, MARCH 31 at 7:00 in the East Lounge.

THROUGH THE GREAT LEHIGH RIVER GORGE IN THE POCONOS. With the #1 Outfitter in Pennsylvania.

$10.00 deposit required

Underclassman Weekend

Saturday, March 28, 1981
Outdoor Concert
at 1:00
On Kennedy Mall

Featuring:

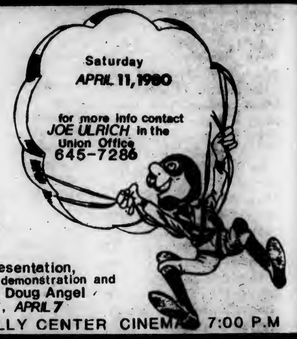
Full Moon

Sunday March 29, 1981
Underclassman

Surprise Event

The Outdoor Recreation Committee of the Villanova Union presents

SKYDIVING



Saturday
APRIL 11, 1980

for more info contact JOE ULRICH in the Union Office 645-7286

movie presentation, Equipment demonstration and lecture by Doug Angel
TUESDAY, APRIL 7
CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA 7:00 P.M.

B.Y.O.B.

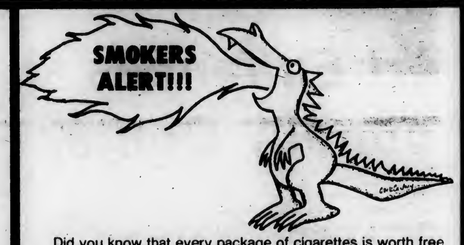
COFFEEHOUSE

Friday, March 27, 1981 at 9:00 p.m. West Lounge

with Tom Serabian

I.D. required
Admission $1.00

SMOKERS ALERT!!!



Did you know that every package of cigarettes is worth free time for a patient in need of a dialysis machine?

The Union is getting involved to help those in need. We encourage you to save all of your empty cigarette packets and then bring them to the Union Office.

It's worth saving a life. . .

SOUTH STREET DANCE COMPANY

explores modern dance on:

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 2:00 P.M.

CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA

Admission: $2.00

Come Celebrate National Dance Week

Enjoyable for young and old alike

SENIOR WEEKEND

Dinner Dance (semi-formal)
Franklin Plaza Hotel
17th and Vine Streets, Philadelphia (Center City)
7:00 p.m. - 1:30 a.m.
Dinner served at 8:00 p.m. sharp
Band: Linewire
Price: $42.00
Tickets on sale at Connelly Center ticket office

Saturday, April 11, 1981

Free Outdoor Concert
In Kennedy Mall
Band: TBA
Time: 1:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Sunday, April 12, 1981

BACCALAUREATE MONDAY, APRIL 13
7:30-10:30 KENNEDY MALL

Presented by the Villanova Union

Election Supplement '81

Candidates: Issues and Ideas

the Villanovan

Editor's Note: The word "candidate" comes from the same Latin root word that forms words like "candor" and "incandescence." Student Government and the Villanovan have compiled this supplement in order to give the presidential and senatorial hopefuls for this year's student body elections a chance to frankly, sincerely express their views, at the same time emitting a degree of brilliance and intensity, as only candidates can do.

ALL PHOTOS BY JEFF PAGE

Presidential Timber . . .

John Pisano

The time has come when a gradual persuasive approach must be made in order to resolve the ever present tension between our administration and the student body. Only after our administrators and students alike rationally approach our problems will a solution be found.

During the next week the election of our student government officials will serve as a constructive debate in outlining many of the problems facing our community. As students, a responsible choice must be made in choosing those representatives whom you feel most capable of communicating our needs.

My name is John Pisano and I am seeking the office of student body president. It is my goal to make this campaign one of issues directly confronting Villanova students. Last year Villanova was granted a renewal of it's accreditation. This renewal was granted stipulating several recommended changes. As the Middle States Association of Colleges complained "The one real failure appeared to be that of communication . . . and when decisions are reached the reasons for these decisions should be explained." It has become obvious that the administration has blatantly ignored a simple recommendation to include the students in the forming of policies and in the making of decisions which directly affect us. In effect, the accreditation committee argued that the students deserve a say in the forming of policies at Villanova. The solution to our problems will only be found when our administration honors the requests of the Middle States Association because it is obvious that the solution to our problems lies precisely in the area of communication. The committee went on in it's renewal to stipulate that the "misconceptions which faculty members have about the university's finances" must be put to rest. Here the committee emphasized "the need for general financial information." Again, these recommendations have been obviously ignored. We still do not have a published budget, furthermore just last month the administration imposed a twelve to sixteen percent tuition increase with no specific explanation of it's neccesity. These claims are not radical, indeed they are factual.

Last year we as students were promised a less stringent liquor policy, an alternate meal plan, student representation on the board of trustees, and a student bill of rights. Today, one year later we have none of these. These unfulfilled needs are not the fault of our last student government administration, they are the product of an administration indifferent to our requests. It will be the goal of my administration to bring about administrative justification for this consistent disregard for the requests of the students. Only when our administrators justify these impositions upon the students will we be able to understand the administrations motives. This explanation will be insured through the publication of an unbiased student government newsletter.

As aforementioned, change will only arise through a gradual approach. My candidacy offers the unique unprecedented quality of being the only candidate who if elected will be serving in his junior year.

I am intent on running as a non by-product of the last administration as I consider my candidacy an option to a student government administration successful in renovating the student government but lacking in the persuasive talent to communicate an explanation for it's inability to successfully attain it's goals.

Frequently, we as students have been accused of being apathetic, I submit that this apathy has been induced by an administration unconcerned with the needs of the students. This week do not display this apathy, instead devote one minute of your time to cast an endorsement of my theme that the students deserve better.

Wayne Remai

In my campaign for Arts Senator last year, I promised to break the barriers of communication between the students, faculty and administration. You believed in me and I am proud to say that to the greater extent, this has been accomplished.

Now I am back, this time seeking the office of Student Body President and I am asking you to believe in me once again.

My year as Arts Senator has been quite beneficial in gaining knowledge and experience in our complex governmental structure. Given the chance, I would like to continue serving the students. I say students because we are elected by our fellow students, to represent our fellow students and that must not be forgotten.

I have played a major role this year as a direct representative of the student body. I am presently in charge of the Grievance forms, which have proven to be a tremendous tool for focusing student concerns. I problem. Being an off-campus resident as a freshman, I am well aware of the problems which arise being off-campus.

The time is now for action. Yes, action, and the typical reaction of the past. Too many times we wait for a crisis to occur before we plan any type of action. Well, many times it is too late. This will not happen if I am elected Student Body President. Time is always working against us so we must act quickly, but also with competency. We must take the initiative and force the administration to play catch up. Then and only then will we have a successful Student Government.

If you want a President that will take that initiative then vote WAYNE REMAI FOR STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT.

presently represent Villanova as a delegate to the Philadelphia Federation of Students, an organization established to enhance communication between the Philadelphia area colleges and universities. I also represented the student government in Harrisburg to organize a statewide lobbying group in Pennsylvania to fight for critically needed financial aid.

In the future, I promise to do more of the same, that is, fight for you the student.

A few areas of major concern are:

— Student Rights. With the rough draft of the Student Bill of Rights being completed, we must push for its passage. It is of great importance that the Villanova Student have a restructured.

— Housing. There has been a continuous housing shortage at Villanova and there must be increased efforts to ease this

Bob Rosengarth

Every year, the candidates for the office of Student Body President deluge the campus and the students with propaganda, posters and promises. They inevitably claim "experience," citing obscure organizations and irrevent qualifications. However, when these candidates, who are concerned more with the glamor and resume potential involved in the office, are elected, the results are disastrous.

Experience is earned and learned; it is also simple for the discerning eye to distinguish between the real things and trumped-up claims. As Vice-President of the Student Body, I have been instrumental in the initiation of projects that are in the process of solving many of the most pressing problems at Villanova. While it is very easy to make promises to clear these trouble areas up, I have already dedicated myself to working within the proven framework.

I am the Chairman of the Alcohol Information Committee, and have singlehandedly completed a nationwide mailing to Congress, Senators, and other colleges to collect the data necessary to eventually alter our strict policies. I feel these policies [illegible] Villanova's social life and I am the only candidate doing somethign about them.

I am the author of the Student Bill of Rights, a document which I feel to be absolutely essential in the assurance of the fair treatment of each student as both a member of Villanova and a citizen. This bill is currently before the Student Life Committee of the Senate for approval. I will, as its creator, work tirelessly to see the Bill of Right through to completion and adoption. The students must be represented, and I will not rest until they are.

Communication with the Board of Trustees is of utmost importance, as they are the ultimate judges in decisions regarding policy. To this end, I have served one year of a two-year term on the Sub-Committee on Student Affairs, which is one of our few avenues of contact with the Board. The voice of the students is the backbone of Villanova. Having already established a rapport with the Board, I will continue to express the concerns of the students to the Board.

I have also been elected to the position of Chairperson of the Facilitating Committee, which is an organization composed of all student leaders, combined to most effectively represent the entire student population. I am also First Delegate to the Philadelphia Federation of Students, an organization of ten area colleges working in an atmosphere of mutual problem solving. If our student body is united and determined, the administration cannot ignore us. Our voices must be heard.

These projects are valuable routes to the solutions of our problems; plans which have taken at least a year to initiate and get into motion. While my experience speaks for itself, that alone is not grounds for your vote. However, the importance of continuity cannot be overemphasized; logically, to elect a newcomer would necessitate a learning phase in which precious time would be wasted. The Student Body President is elected for a year, too short a time in which to both become acquainted with and bring to completion these much-needed solutions. I don't just complain, I work to correct, I ask you to face facts and elect someone who knows what the solutions are and how to get them.

BOB ROSENGARTH
FOR STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT
NUMBER 1 ON THE BALLOT

By ROBERT McGOVERN AND JEFF PAGE

This week, the Villanovan asked the student body to give their thoughts on the death of Jumbo Elliott, Villanova's track coach.

It's a tragic occurrence. He was a great coach and the track program will be hurt, but they should be able to overcome the loss.

Priscilla Bodner, Sophomore, Communications

It's a great loss to the Villanov community. He was Villanova trac and he will be greatly missed.

Anne Elnitsky Sophomore, Bi

A real bummer. An era of track and field has come to an end. I just hope Villanova can keep up the excellent program he built and that we pay proper tribute to such a fine man.

Bob "Bear" Metter, Sophomore," Economics

I feel real badly about it. I never knew the man, but I always held a great deal of respect for him. It is a great loss to the Villanova community.

Robert Hubsmith, Senior, Economics

It's a real tragedy especially since he was to be inducted next week into the NCAA Hall of Fame. I think the school should set aside a day for this great man.

Bob Barbiere, Freshman, C&F

Jumbo Elliot's been a part of Vi lanova for as long as I can reme ber. My father and brothers we here and we've always had a de respect for the man and his abilit

Mary J. Elighto Senior, B.

I was shocked because it was so sudden, I know he'll be missed by many people and that it will be hard to find someone else with his ability.

Nancy Denise, Sophomore, Marketing

I was shocked and surprised. I feel that it is a great loss for Villanova. He did a lot, not just in athletics but for the school as a whole. He will be greatly missed.

Daryl Murphy, Senior, Psych

Spirit Of Life Reflected In Green

By MIKE GIAMMARCO

It seems that no one is unaware of the tragic slaying of black children throughout Atlanta, Georgia. There have been twenty bodies uncovered, few apparent patterns in the killings, and no clues. The situation has caused so much fear in Atlanta residents that children are advised never to travel alone, never to talk to any strangers — not even policemen, and are not hindered when they arm themselves.

Due to Atlanta's 50 per cent black population, several authorities have labeled the killings as racially motivated, although the parents of several of the victims assume "the man" (the killer) is black. One way or another, he, if it is indeed a man, seems to be able to win enough trust from the child to lure him into his car.

However, the situation has become so severe that one pattern seems apparent. When a black child is reported missing, his parents can do little else than expect the worst; as in the case of the latest two missing children, not to be recovered. The intense grief and turmoil of the community has prompted community members to take action. Volunteers throughout the city have formed a vigilante group, recognizable by their red jackets, as they scan the streets for children breaking the seven o'clock curfew. Community groups have been raising money for the afflicted families, as well as establishing watch posts throughout the city.

The situation has received nationwide concern. President Reagan has proposed adding $1.5 million to a previous grant of $1 million given to the Atlanta police for expenses in tracking down the killer. Detectives from the area and out of state have been donating their services to help the cause. Nearer to home, a group of Philadelphia banks have pooled their resources and are offering part of a one million dollar reward to any group or individual whose information leads to the capture and conviction of the killer. The other parts will be divided among the victim's families and investigation aids as well.

Many efforts and services have been offered from private citizens, religious organizations, and civic organizations throughout the nation. These efforts have helped to comfort the grieving families. Concerned citizens have also offered suggestions for safety in urban Atlanta, and have spread their concern throughout their own communities.

One small but meaningful reminder, thought of by one black woman living in North Philadelphia, was the wearing of green ribbons. The woman thought that wearing a green ribbon would be the perfect symbol for the spirit of growth and life; a new hope in the minds of those crushed with anguish. The idea has spread throughout the nation.

Barbara Haenn of the Campus Ministry, and the Villanovans for Life, found this cause worthy and appropriate in the religious sense. Hours were spent cutting tiny green ribbons and attaching safety pins, so that they could be distributed at the campus masses. Over one thousand ribbons were handed out. Along with the ribbons came a slip of paper produced by the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Its appeal is directed at anyone who values human life:

Join in sympathy for the children murdered in Atlanta and for the support of their families, the black community and the people of the city. Green represents the color in nature of life and growth. Support life by supporting the human dignity of each person.

(Additional ribbons available in the Campus Ministry office).

Food for thought

Facts That Are Incredible

By SUSAN WILMARTH

Chances are that if you're one of the approximately 2,900 students on Villanova's meal plan, you haven't given a thought to just how much food is needed to keep all of us going. The job of J. Leslie Gies, director of Food Services, is to order the food. His grocery list is, well, we'll let the statistics speak for themselves.

Jeff Page Photo

The amount of food consumed in Dougherty Cafeteria alone is staggering. Everyday, students who dine in Dougherty eat 101 of the 207 loaves of bread which are consumed throughout the entire campus. Six hundred and sixty heads of lettuce are eaten daily. Students manage to make their way through 10-12 crates of oranges with 88 oranges to a crate. That's 1056 oranges a day!

In an average week, students go through 1050 dozen eggs, 3100 quarts of milk, and food services can't even keep track of how much orange juice is drunk! As for those hamburgers students fill up on at lunch, consider this: each hamburger weighs 2-1/2 ounces and they eat 1800 lbs. of them a week. That comes out to be 10,900 hamburgers a week!

Next time you're confronted with tray upon tray of cookies, just remember that when they're all gone, students managed to gobble up 500-600 lbs. of cookies. On any steak night, 1340 lbs. of steak are needed to feed approximately 2900 hungry students. When prime rib is served, 140 full prime ribs are prepared. As to the number of boxes of cereal eaten, Gies couldn't even guess. "We must be the Delaware Valley's biggest user of individually wrapped boxes of cereal; there must be over 100 boxes stashed away in Sheehan alone," Gies said.

If you're wondering how Gies knows what to order and in what quantities, you'll be interested to know that a lot of study goes into his educated guess. Over the years, records of food consumption have been kept and estimates are based on these as well as observations of student behavior.

Gies pointed out, "Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays require more food than Tuesdays and Thursdays because they are busier class days." In addition, the amount of food needed varies from one day to the next "depending on the activities in and around campus." "Much consideration must be given as to how many people are served," said Gies. Generally speaking, Gies considers it a good policy to guess on "the high side of whatever we're going to have."

Art Enhances Connelly Center

VINCENT HAUSMANN

A 14 by 21 abstract painting signed in blue and violet will be suspended from the roof of the Connelly Center on Tuesday, March 31. The massive work, which will fill the blank wall near the Center's stairway, is the first in a series of projects presented by the graduating senior art majors.

Senior Art major Art Masciocchi decided on the unique project this year as he saw a need to fill the large blank wall in the Connelly Center.

"I thought it was a shame for a nice building to have a blank wall. To put an abstract, something geometric, would liven the place up a bit," stated Masciocchi.

Masciocchi originally had planned to paint Alumni Hall's steps but the proposal did not meet with favor from the Board of Trustees and President Driscoll. Driscoll and the Board suggested the Connelly Center as a possible alternative site and the proposal met with approval.

Tuesday's showing will also feature the work of Tony DiPasquale who does portrait sculptures in Bronze. The art exhibits will continue through April and are the culmination of each studio art major's four year program of study. Each major is required to prepare a comprehensive exhibition of work in all media. The "Senior Project," which is part of the student show, is an investigation of a theme in two or more media.

Subsequent shows in the Art Gallery of the Connelly Center will be Cathy Bradley and Diane Staub, both working in painting and printmaking; Janine Dunn, Chris Wright, and Ellen O'Connell will follow in subsequent weeks.

Happiness Comes In Pairs

By KATE McDONALD

On September 8, 1961, David Lanshe was born in Philadelphia, Pa. But the happiness of his parents was doubled when, 2 minutes later, Michael was born. Dave and Mike are identical twins, sophomore finance majors at Villanova University.

Vince and Armando (Army) Gaetano are also identical twins, sophomore mechanical engineers at Villanova. Army is older by 5 minutes. Neither minded that the other would be attending the same college. In fact, these twins will be roommates next year. "It's more convenient," Army said, and Vince included, "We're usually together and are always borrowing from each other anyway." The Gaetanos reside on the second floor of Stanford Hall.

Looking exactly alike with blonde hair and glasses, the Gaetano's could easily fool their teachers in high school. Every April Fool's Day, they'd pretend to be the other person quite successfully. In order to alleviate the confusion in college, one has a moustache and the other does not.

Even though Army and Vince's personalities are slightly different, and one's cum. is higher than the other's, "we never feel like we're in competition," they emphasized. But they have the same interests and preferences; the same mannerisms including their stride when they walk.

The similarities between Vince and Army Gaetano are many, but there is a big difference between these twins and Dave and Mike Lanshe.

The Lanshes will be living off-campus next year but not with each other. They both agreed, "We didn't mind living in the same dorm but wanted to live far enough away from each other." Residents of Stanford Hall, Dave is on the fifth floor and Mike is on the second. This way, each is able to meet more friends.

Mike is convinced that they look more alike as they get older. They both realize that people will get them confused. "But at times, it bothers me," Dave said. "People will just say 'hi' without saying my name or will avoid me altogether to save themselves from embarrassment." Like the Gaetanos, one has a moustache and the other does not.

The thing that bothers Mike the most are the hassles and the "cute stuff." We have the same soccer shirt and if we should happen to wear it on the same day, we get hassled by the guys. A lot of times girls will stare and point if we're together because twins are cute." Dave emphasized, "Wearing the same clothes is definitely out." Mike agreed, "When we both happen to like the same thing, only one of us will buy it." Incidentally, at the time of this interview, both

(Continued on page 13)

Campus Clip

...d hold its annual blood drive ... week in the West Lounge of ...gusty Hall.

UNION PAGE

APPLICATIONS FOR
THE BIG EVENT
TALENT SHOW
AVAILABLE MARCH 10
PRIZES!
$100
$75
$50

We're Going Rafting!

(Sign Up April 11, 1981)

THRILLS!
EXCITEMENT!
ADVENTURE!

IDEAL FOR FIRST-TIMERS TOO!

THROUGH THE GREAT LEHIGH RIVER GORGE IN THE POCONOS.
With the #1 Outfitter in Pennsylvania.

MEETING TUESDAY, MARCH 31 at 7:00 in the East Lounge.

$10.00 deposit required

Underclassman Weekend

Saturday, March 28, 1981
Outdoor Concert
at 1:00
On Kennedy Mall

Featuring:
Full Moon

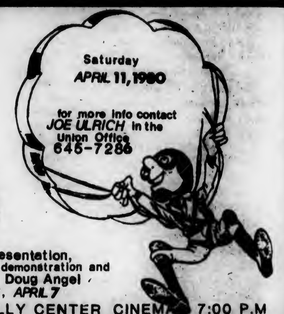
Sunday March 29, 1981
Underclassman

Surprise Event

The Outdoor Recreation Committee of the Villanova Union presents

SKYDIVING

movie presentation,
Equipment demonstration and lecture by Doug Angel
TUESDAY, APRIL 7



Saturday
APRIL 11, 1980
for more info contact JOE ULRICH in the Union Office
645-7288

CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA 7:00 P.M

B.Y.O.B.

Friday, March 27, 1981 at 9:00 p.m. West Lounge

with
Tom Serabian

I.D. required
Admission $1.00

COFFEEHOUSE

SMOKERS ALERT!!!

Did you know that every package of cigarettes is worth free time for a patient in need of a dialysis machine?

The Union is getting involved to help those in need. We encourage you to save all of your empty cigarette packets and then bring them to the Union Office.

It's worth saving a life...

SOUTH STREET DANCE COMPANY

explores modern dance on:

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 2:00 P.M.

CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA

Admission: $2.00

Come Celebrate National Dance Week

Enjoyable for young and old alike

SENIOR WEEKEND

Dinner Dance (semi-formal)
Franklin Plaza Hotel
17th and Vine Streets, Philadelphia (Center City)
7:00 p.m. - 1:30 a.m.
Dinner served at 8:00 p.m. sharp
Band: Livewire
Price: $42.00
Tickets on sale at Connelly Center ticket office

Saturday, April 11, 1981

Free Outdoor Concert
In Kennedy Mall
Band: TBA
Time: 1:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Sunday, April 12, 1981

BANQUET MONDAY, APRIL 13
7:30-10:30 KENNEDY MALL

Presented by the Villanova Union

Election Supplement '81

Candidates: Issues and Ideas

the Villanovan

Editor's Note: The word "candidate" comes from the same Latin root word that forms words like "candor" and "incandescence." Student Government and the Villanovan have compiled this supplement in order to give the presidential and senatorial hopefuls for this year's student body elections a chance to frankly, sincerely express their views, at the same time emitting a degree of brilliance and intensity, as only candidates can do.

ALL PHOTOS BY JEFF PAGE

Presidential Timber . . .

John Pisano

The time has come when a gradual persuasive approach must be made in order to resolve the ever present tension between our administration and the student body. Only after our administrators and students alike rationally approach our problems will a solution be found.

During the next week the election of our student government officials will serve as a constructive debate in outlining many of the problems facing our community. As students, a responsible choice must be made in choosing those representatives whom you feel most capable of communicating our needs.

My name is John Pisano and I am seeking the office of student body president. It is my goal to make this campaign one of issues directly confronting Villanova students. Last year Villanova was granted a renewal of it's accreditation. This renewal was granted stipulating several recommended changes. As the Middle States Association of Colleges complained "The one real failure appeared to be that of communication . . . and when decisions are reached the reasons for these decisions should be explained." It has become obvious that the administration has blatantly ignored a simple recommendation to include the students in the forming of policies and in the making of decisions which directly affect us. In effect, the accreditation committee argued that the students deserve a say in the forming of policies at Villanova. The solution to our problems will only be found when our administration honors the requests of the Middle States Association because it is obvious that the solution to our problems lies precisely in the area of communication. The committee went on in it's renewal to stipulate that the "misconceptions which faculty members have about the university's finances" must be put to rest. Here the committee emphasized "the need for general financial information." Again, these recommendations have been obviously ignored. We still do not have a published budget, furthermore just last month the administration imposed a twelve to sixteen percent tuition increase with no specific explanation of it's neccesity. These claims are not radical, indeed they are factual.

Last year we as students were promised a less stringent liquor policy, an alternate meal plan, student representation on the board of trustees, and a student bill of rights. Today, one year later we have none of these. These unfulfilled needs are not the fault of our last student government administration, they are the product of an administration indifferent to our requests. It will be the goal of my administration to bring about administrative justification for this consistent disregard for the requests of the students. Only when our administrators justify these impositions upon the students will we be able to understand the administrations motives. This explanation will be insured through the publication of an unbiased student government newsletter.

As aforementioned, change will only arise through a gradual approach. My candidacy offers the unique unprecedented quality of being the only candidate who if elected will be serving in his junior year.

I am intent on running as a non by-product of the last administration as I consider my candidacy an option to a student government administration successful in renovating the student government but lacking in the persuasive talent to communicate an explanation for it's inability to successfully attain it's goals.

Frequently, we as students have been accused of being apathetic, I submit that this apathy has been induced by an administration unconcerned with the needs of the students. This week do not display this apathy, instead devote one minute of your time to cast an endorsement of my theme that the students deserve better.

Wayne Remai

In my campaign for Arts Senator last year, I promised to break the barriers of communication between the students, faculty and administration. You believed in me and I am proud to say that to the greater extent, this has been accomplished.

Now I am back, this time seeking the office of Student Body President and I am asking you to believe in me once again.

My year as Arts Senator has been quite beneficial in gaining knowledge and experience in our complex governmental structure. Given the chance, I would like to continue serving the students. I say students because we are elected by our fellow students, to represent our fellow students and that must not be forgotten.

I have played a major role this year as a direct representative of the student body. I am presently in charge of the Grievance forms, which have proven to be a tremendous tool for focusing student concerns. I presently represent Villanova as a delegate to the Philadelphia Federation of Students, an organization established to enhance communication between the Philadelphia area colleges and universities. I also represented the student government in Harrisburg to organize a statewide lobbying group in Pennsylvania to fight for critically needed financial aid.

In the future, I promise to do more of the same, that is, fight for you the student.

A few areas of major concern are:

— Student Rights. With the rough draft of the Student Bill of Rights being completed, we must push for its passage. It is of great importance that the Villanova Student have a restructured.

— Housing. There has been a continuous housing shortage at Villanova and there must be increased efforts to ease this problem. Being an off-campus resident as a freshman, I am well aware of the problems which arise being off-campus.

The time is now for action. Yes, action, and the typical reaction of the past. Too many times we wait for a crisis to occur before we plan any type of action. Well, many times it is too late. This will not happen if I am elected Student Body President. Time is always working against us so we must act quickly, but also with competency. We must take the initiative and force the administration to play catch up. Then and only then will we have a successful Student Government.

If you want a President that will take that initiative then vote WAYNE REMAI FOR STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT.

Bob Rosengarth

Every year, the candidates for the office of Student Body President deluge the campus and the students with propaganda, posters and promises. They inevitably claim "experience," citing obscure organizations and irrevent qualifications. However, when these candidates, who are concerned more with the glamor and resume potential involved in the office, are elected, the results are disastrous.

Experience is earned and learned; it is also simple for the discerning eye to distinguish between the real things and trumped-up claims. As Vice-President of the Student Body, I have been instrumental in the initiation of projects that are in the process of solving many of the most pressing problems at Villanova. While it is very easy to make promises to clear these trouble areas up, I have already dedicated myself to working within the proven framework.

I am the Chairman of the Alcohol Information Committee, and have singlehandedly completed a nationwide mailing to Congress, Senators, and other colleges to collect the data necessary to eventually alter our strict policies. I feel these policies [illegible]

Villanova's social life and I am the only candidate doing somethign about them.

I am the author of the Student Bill of Rights, a document which I feel to be absolutely essential in the assurance of the fair treatment of each student as both a member of Villanova and a citizen. This bill is currently before the Student Life Committee of the Senate for approval. I will, as its creator, work tirelessly to see the Bill of Right through to completion and adoption. The students must be represented, and I will not rest until they are.

Communication with the Board of Trustees is of utmost importance, as they are the ultimate judges in decisions regarding policy. To this end, I have served one year of a two-year term on the Sub-Committee on Student Affairs, which is one of our few avenues of contact with the Board. The voice of the students is the backbone of Villanova. Having already established a rapport with the Board, I will continue to express the concerns of the students to the Board.

I have also been elected to the position of Chairperson of the Facilitating Committee, which is an organization composed of all student leaders, combined to meet effectively represent the entire student population. I am also First Delegate to the Philadelphia Federation of Students, an organization of ten area colleges working in an atmosphere of mutual problem solving. If our student body is united and determined, the administration cannot ignore us. Our voices must be heard.

These projects are valuable routes to the solutions of our problems; plans which have taken at least a year to initiate and get into motion. While my experience speaks for itself, that alone is not grounds for your vote. However, the importance of continuity cannot be overemphasized; logically, to elect a newcomer would necessitate a learning phase in which precious time would be wasted. The Student Body President is elected for a year, too short a time in which to both become acquainted with and bring to completion these much-needed solutions. I don't just complain, I work to correct. I ask you to face facts and elect someone who knows what the solutions are and how to get them.

BOB ROSENGARTH
FOR STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT
NUMBER 1 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Hopefuls

Commerce and Finance (Select Two)

Peter Cieszko

As the school year is rapidly coming to a close, so too is one of your four years at Villanova. We must strive to improve opportunities that will be beneficial scholastically, athletically, and socially.

Scholastically, C&F ranks nationally in the top 10% of undergraduate business schools. I feel, however, that the Career Development Center must be upgraded and expanded to better assist us in attaining job offers deserving of these standards.

Alternative meal plan programs are presently under study. I see a need for an alternative plan to allow resident and commuter students to utilize dining facilities as they see fit.

Socially, the spotlight is focused too intensely on alcohol policies. The administration expects us to act in a mature manner in party situations, yet we are treated immaturely by their policies. When leniency was granted during fall tailgates, we responded with very few problems; the Student Government organized clean-up crews. Leniency must be permitted for on-campus parties, outdoor dorm parties, intramural and Greek Week sporting events, and the like.

As a Senator, your voice can be heard. I am presently Vice-President of the Student Body, President of a fraternity, and a member of the University Senate Budget Committee.

I am the only candidate with the experience to knowledgeably speak out for the students . . .

And, when your four years are gone, you'll want to come back, because you'll know your best years were spent here, with the best people around.

PETER CIESZKO . . . Helping to make V.U. better for you.

Vic Falvo

Villanova is a University with enormous potential. It offers its students many opportunities to make the educational experience four very productive and positive years. Your life should be enriched not just through academics, but through social functions as well. Villanova has done a great deal for me — now I would like to do a few things for Villanova.

Next week you will be electing two students to represent you on the University Senate. This election is the students' voice in who they feel would best represent the students of the Commerce and Finance. A representative should not just sit on the Senate; he should keep students aware of what progress is being made and take an interest in those things that can be done to make this a better place.

I would like to organize a C&F Lobby to keep students involved. This lobby will show student support for your representatives' ideas which will exert more influence for the students sitting on the Senate. This lobby should also have a voice within the college itself. I would like to see a Career Counseling and Placement center in Bartley Hall, solely for C&F students; if enough students show this desire, it can be accomplished.

I would like to assist Dean Clay in his attempts to institute an M.B.A. program here at Villanova. Again, this could not be done without the backing of the students. Our tuition keeps increasing, we should be getting more Doctors to teach here. This would be a step in the right direction toward the M.B.A., along with creating a better learning atmosphere which will provide more opportunities for C&F students.

These are just a few of my ideas. I think my representation will mean more than just a seat in the Senate. Villanova has a great deal of potential, it needs a catalyst. On April 2, vote for VIC FALVO for C&F Senator.

Paul Tufano

Next Thursday, April 2, you'll have the chance to decide whom you want to represent you on the University Senate. I'd like to tell you why you should choose me to work for you.

My name is Paul Tufano, and to be perfectly frank, I hope to be one of the next C & F Senators. To be quite honest, I seek no glory in running for this office. I am spurred on by a desire to voice the opinion of the student when it comes to decisions affecting our welfare. Last year — indeed, even last Friday — I sat and watched the University Senate approve a budget which raised student fees over 10%, but which did not provide for a commensurate rise in student services. All this happened with almost no debate from the student senators. I really wonder if not speaking out on a subject such as this was "acting in our best interests" by those silent senators. The majority of students at Villanova are like me — in need of loans, grants, and jobs to finance their education. Ever increasing costs are closing the door on many students' futures. There are obviously other tough issues — safety, improvements in resident life, upgrading athletic facilities — to which I am devoted to as well.

I am committed to these issues, and if elected will fight for them. But more importantly, if elected, I will be committed to you — to speaking out for you. It would be naive, of course, for any candidate to make unrealistic promises. There is, however, one promise that I can make to you, and it is this: if elected, I will do the best job for you that I possibly can.

Jane Zennario

The students here at Villanova have been directed by rules and regulations of the University, none of which until recently have had any student influence. The Student Government has just begun taking an active part in the decisions which are the backbone of these rules and regulations. I am prepared to put in the time and effort that is involved with the responsibility of representing you, the Commerce and Finance student, in Villanova's University Senate. My main task will be to interpret student needs in a way where the Board of Trustees will recognize them and be more active in helping to achieve these needs, interests and goals.

Some of the goals I hope to help the Senate achieve would be: first, the formation of an effective Student Bill of Rights. As of now students rights are extremely limited and V.U. students need a Bill of Rights to expand them. Second, Villanova students for years have spoken out for a new alcohol policy. I believe that with some time, a new, comprehensive and REASONABLE policy can be developed and passed to become regulation. Third, tuition increases are a big concern to all students. Though we are told that the market dictates these increases, we are also promised that it is to be used for our benefit (ie. new equipment, better facilities, etc.) often we never see these promises kept. The students of Villanova need Senators who will look into proposed budget increases and make sure these increases will be of some benefit to the students.

These are just few of the needs and concerns of the students that I plan to pursue in the office of Commerce and Finance Senator. So remember when you go to vote April 2nd at the Connelly Center Cinema, Vote No. 4 on the ballot — Jane Zennario for C&F Senator.

Nursing

Connie Comins

Fellow Nursing Students,

In running for Nursing Senator, it is my intention to attempt to make Villanova Community the best that it is capable of being. Together we must work to achieve our potential goals. If elected as Nursing Senator, my main purpose will be to strive for total student involvement. I plan not only to work for the College of Nursing, but also to help the University as a whole, and infiltrate the nurses into this open community. Villanova can only be what we make it. Student inputs and concerns are what will lead the University to its peak.

Communication among the nurses also ranks among my top priorities. Without the flow of comments and ideas for improvement, our nursing school will not grow, but rather it will deteriorate. I will work with you, the nurses, to constantly keep you informed of what the Senate is achieving as well as I will tell the senate, administration, and faculty what you are feeling. Through this communication, we can achieve effective nursing representation.

Furthermore, I want to attempt to give the younger nursing students a greater understanding and certainty as to becoming a nurse, possibly by programs integrated by upperclassmen and administration. Furthering this thought, is the improvement of the problem of the transportation system to the clinical learning facilities. Not only would this make it easier for all students, but also it would join us closer as a class.

Committment is probably the question which comes to your mind when judging my potentiality. I realize that seeing is believing, but let me assure you that I will never neglect any task that I believe in my heart can be attained. If drive and perseverance are any indications as to my interest, know that I have it all. Remember, it is an active body that get the work done, effectively and a positive Senator. I am [illegible] your help in a more closed door.

Arts (Select Three)

Tee Hoyne

In campaigning for Arts Senator, I have found few people that realize what the office of Senator actually involves. Thus, before I can propose a platform, I find it necessary to first explain the Senate itself.

The Senate consists of twelve faculty members, twelve administrators, two alumni, and twelve students from their respective colleges. This thirty-eight member body formulates policies and plans for the future betterment of the university. These decisions are then passed on to the President, and later to the Board of Trustees for their approval.

I hope to be one of those twelve important voices which speaks on behalf of the student body. I have questioned a number of students, and now feel able to better represent the student population.

One of the needs which I feel deserves to be addressed is the advancement of Villanova's social life. The administration focuses too much of their attention on the restriction of alcohol on campus, rather than working with students to improve Villanova socially. This can be achieved by more lenient policies toward such things as tailgates, outdoor parties, and other social functions. The Administration expects us to act in a more mature manner yet they refuse us the freedom necessary toward social growth.

I further feel that fraternities and sororities should not be continuously downgraded by the administration, but rather receive more recognition for their student interest, social life, and school spirit.

There is presently an alternative meal plan under study, which I would also like to see implemented. This would allow commuter and resident students the use of dining facilities as they see fit. This would allow students to pay for only the meals which they eat, thereby minimizing the expenses which overwhelm the average college student and his family.

My plans focus on both the student's educational and social advancement. We are all here to learn, but we should also be able to enjoy ourselves. I hope to work for a university in which both exist in a proper proportion.

So remember, TEE HOYNE for Arts Senator because a vote for ME is a vote for YOU!

Terry Mogavero

The position of Arts Senator is one which entails a great deal of responsibility and time. A position which will enable me to bring the needs of the student to the attention of both the administration and the faculty.

If elected as an Arts Senator, I feel the goals that I have chosen are many and diversified, in order to accomodate the student body here at Villanova University. My goals are as follows:

— I feel that the meal plan system is in dire need of change. Currently we are forced to accept a twenty meal plan. This type of arrangement wastes money for the University, but more importantly, the students. I would like to see a compromise whereby the students would have the option of choosing which meal plan best suits their purpose.

— Presently, intramural sports lack the necessary and proficient facilities, and therefore are extremely unorganized. With the substantial increase in tuition, I feel that the students' money will be most wisely used in the construction of a sports complex. Furthermore, such an attraction could be beneficial towards the annual students enrollment in the upcoming years.

— Presently, the student government is fighting for a revisal on the alcohol policy and to allow the selling of liquor in the Connelly Center. I feel that it is extremely necessary to continue working on such a revision and will do my best to fight for this policy; knowing how this particular feature could benefit Villanova's social life.

— Next, it has been brought to my attention that the University Van Service is inefficient and extremely slow. I feel that after the University has spent thousands of dollars to accomodate the handicapped, it is the responsibility of the Van Service to at least transport such individuals to their desired destinations on time.

— Finally, I realize that the relations between students, faculty, and the administration is not flawless. Personally, I would like to see the students better informed on the events and policies which affect their life here at Villanova. If such communications could be improved. I feel that this level of apathy would greatly be reduced.

In conclusion, I feel that my goals best express the needs of the student and, at the same time, are beneficial to the University as a whole. Therefore, I will work for the students as an Arts Senator in the hope of accomplishing such needs and the many others that are essential for a better student life!

Bill Monaco

Often I have heard in my three years at Villanova an assortment of complaints from my fellow students. Many of these complaints, I feel, are generated from the University's policies and regulations. Many people complain and comple[illegible] saying goes, "complaining w[illegible] where." I have heard enough [illegible] the student's needs are and [illegible] done to correct these defic[illegible] which are vital to the better[illegible] University.

The remedy for these factor[illegible] person willing to fight for the [illegible] student, with dedication and [illegible] mitment, willing to accept re[illegible] and to address all problems he[illegible] that person, I have the abili[illegible] perience to work with the stud[illegible] ministration to get things acc[illegible]

Presently I am a member o[illegible] Government serving on Com[illegible] Committee. This enables me[illegible] student feedback about their [illegible]

Science (Select [illegible])

Gerry Malan[illegible]

Every year at this time elections are held for the offices of the Student Government. It seems as though the same promises are made each year, with only the faces being changed. This may be the reason that such an apathetic turn out occurs at these elections; hopefully, this year will be different.

I'm sure many of us can predict these perennial promises: a new liquor policy, a less stringent visitation policy, improved facilities, and a fight against increased tuition. These flowery promises are effective in getting a person elected into office but few, if any, of these promises actually come to fruition. These problems are left unresolved only to be picked up as issues that future candidates may employ to win their election. So we are caught in a vicious cycle in which the needs of the students are used as a means to a candidate's end, and these needs remain unresolved.

I will not resort to making unattainable promises merely to win an election. My promise, rather my pledge, is that I will (1) listen to the needs of the students, (2) convey these needs to the Student Government, and (3) work hard to see that these needs are taken care of. Using this pledge I will fight for sufficient funds to restore and maintain our science facilities, especially our labs. I will also seek to implement a program of greater awareness of job opportunities for science majors. We, as science students, pay the highest tuition on campus and I will fight for a proportional return of these funds.

In short, my promise is that of hard work and detemination. You can help me to help you by voting GERRY MALANGA for SCIENCE SENATOR.

Jim Muller

As a candidate for Science Senator I believe that the University Senate is currently the most effective forum of the [illegible] tween the student and the administration. However, I also feel that the Senate's current role as an "advisory" council stifles much of the impact of the council's decisions. Currently any proposal by the University Senate or Senatorial commentary on the actions of the Board of Trustees is no more than a thoughtful suggestion. It is imperative that this organization gains more than an advisory role if it is going to be truly effective in achieving its goals. This could be accomplished by giving the Senate veto power over the administration and Board of Trustees in issues directly concerning the students of this university.

There are many serious issues concerning Villanova students that as a Senator I would do my best to call attention to. Some of the issues that are pressing in my mind are as follows:

I. The lack of adequate financial aid. With the current economic situation students are finding it impossible to cope with the rising cost of a college education.

II. The housing situation at V.U. must be improved. Incoming freshman must be provided with housing while upper classmen should be given more assistance in locating off-campus housing.

III. Social life should be brought back to campus through greater leadway in the visitation and alcohol policies.

IV. The cafeteria should offer several different meal plans to accommodate different students needs.

There are many more concerns of the students which I feel I could voice to the Senate, if I'm given your support. Please make your voice heard and vote in these coming elections.

UNION PAGE

...ne mentions Villanova to an ...udent, many things probably ... These will include positive ...e college along with negative ...t campus, casual conversation ...y new ideas pertaining to the ...gineering, but they are never ...ked on because no one ever ... them. The University Senate ...uch with student feedback for ...enator to be effective.

...ike to see the office of En... ...nator become a listening office ...n acting office. As a repre... ...he student body, one must be ...n to ideas and then be dedi... ...onsible enough to carry these ...ar stages in which positive re... ...low.

...nova Engineer is eager for ac... ...ling to voice his opinion in the ...ess, results will follow. We ...ve in the University's decisions ...cademic policies, student life, ... many others. This is the only ... insure positive results for the ...Engineering Student.

Byrne Mulrooney

Hello, my name is Byrne Mulrooney and I am running for the University Senate for the college of Engineering. I am currently a junior Mechanical Engineer and have been involved in numerous extracurricular activities at Villanova: the American Society for Mechanical Engineers, the new Student Orientation Program, Tau Kappa Omega fraternity and the Villanova Union, to name a few.

I am running for the Senate position because I feel the need for positive student input in some decisions begin made at Villanova. There are over nine thousand enthusiastic individuals at Villanova who have immeasurable talent and ideas. The Student Government provides us the opportunity to express our thoughts and help direct and improve Villanova's future.

I am confident in my ability to communicate, and present in a professional manner, the ideas of my peers to the administration. I have previously dealt with the administration and have always established a solid rapport.

I am keenly aware of the difficulties and frustrations involved with the job when sound ideas fall on deaf ears but am eager to accept the challenge.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ELECTIONS

★★★ VOTE ★★★

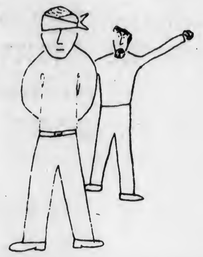
Thursday, April 2 Connelly Center, 9:00 to 5:00

Come support your respective candidates for the following offices:

- STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT
- ARTS SENATOR
- C&F SENATOR
- ENGINEERING SENATOR
- NURSING SENATOR
- SCIENCE SENATOR
- LAW SCHOOL SENATOR
- GRADUATE SCHOOL SENATOR
- UNIVERSITY COLLEGE SENATOR
- ACADEMIC POLICY SEATS

YOU CAN MAKE THE DIFFERENCE !!!

FORMER IRANIAN HOSTAGE WILLIAM BELK TALKS ABOUT LIFE AS A HOSTAGE



April 8, 1981

8:00 P.M.

VILLANOVA CENTER
OF THE CONNELLY CENTER

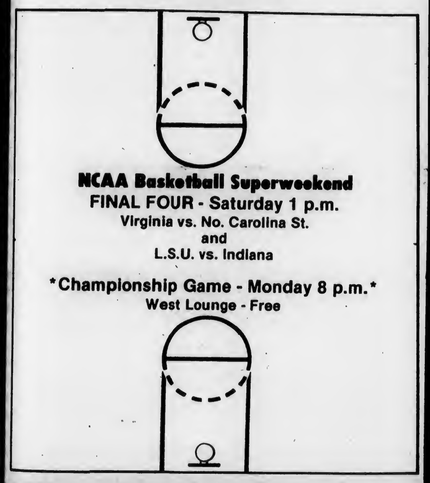
TICKET PRICES: $2.00 WITH V.U. I.D.
$4.00 GENERAL PUBLIC

AVAILABLE AT C.C. TICKET OFFICE.

TUNE IN FOR VIDEO DAY

FIND OUT MORE ABOUT VIDEO DAY
We need people with talent, comedy, acting abilities, artists, etc. Explore the world of television. Video Day Meeting - Monday, March 30 6 P.M. Hayerford Room Stay Tuned!

BIG SCREEN TV



NCAA Basketball Superweekend
FINAL FOUR - Saturday 1 p.m.
Virginia vs. No. Carolina St.
and
L.S.U. vs. Indiana

Championship Game - Monday 8 p.m.
West Lounge - Free

The Best of Broadway. . .

Any interested singers, actors and dancers are welcome to come on Thursday evenings at 7:00 to the North Lounge and help us present an elaborate Broadway review. We are working towards a performance to benefit Project Sunshine.

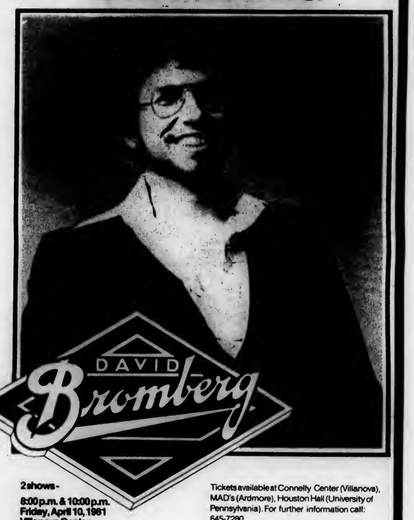
U II Meeting

Wednesday, April 1, 1981 at 5:00

Contact the Union Office for futher details.

The Villanova Union Presents An Evening of Acoustical Music with

DAVID BROMBERG



2 shows -
8:00 p.m. & 10:00 p.m.
Friday, April 10, 1981
Villanova Center

Tickets available at Connelly Center (Villanova), MAD's (Ardmore), Houston Hall (University of Pennsylvania). For further information call: 645-7280

$4.50 for students / $6.50 for the public

Presented by the Villanova Union

A WMMR Concert Event

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES

INGMAR BERGMAN'S CRIES AND WHISPERS

This film explores the relationships among four women — three sisters, one of whom is dying of cancer, and their devoutly loyal housekeeper—as their facades are stripped away revealing their personal agonies and unspeakable common fears.

"Certainly the most complex, the most perceptive, and the most humane of Bergman's works to date."

Sunday, March 29, 1981
7:30 in Cinema

Students $1.00

Tuesday, March 31 - 3:00
in Cinema
X, THE MAN WITH THE X-RAY EYES
It is a Free Science Fiction event.

"UPROARIOUS...lusty entertainment."
- Bob Thomas, ASSOCIATED PRESS

PAUL NEWMAN IN A GEORGE ROY HILL FILM

SLAP SHOT

Co-starring
MICHAEL ONTKEAN • LINDSAY CROUSE • JENNIFER WARREN • JERRY HOUSER and STROTHER MARTIN • Written by NANCY DOWD • Edited by DEDE ALLEN
Music Supervision by ELMER BERNSTEIN • Directed by GEORGE ROY HILL
Produced by ROBERT J. WUNSCH and STEPHEN FRIEDMAN

THEATRE

NOW SHOWING:

SLAPSHOT
Fri., March 27, 1981
7:00 and 9:30
in
Cinema
Admission $1.00

COMING ATTRACTIONS

CADDYSHACK

Wednesday, April 1 - Thursday, April 2, and Friday, April 3
7:00 and 9:30
in Cinema

Admission $1.00

[redacted]

Well, did anyone go to the one-year anniversary party at the Tuchman Towers? . . . that cake was amazing, but tell us something Marc . . . Is the Cardinal going to bless that too? . . . There's a new course for next semester that isn't on the master schedule . . . it's called "The Evils of Having Fun and Leading an Irresponsible Life," . . . taught by Emily Dilfo . . . With all the people who are leaving Villanova these days (Rev. Deegan, Dr. Cleary) we wondered what other jobs some of the people at Villanova could get . . . Tony Martin and Rebecca Drury could specialize in evicting tenants . . . Honors majors could get jobs as . . .uh . . . well, how about the unemployment line? . . . Security Guards could get jobs as exhibits in the New York Museum of Natural History . . . Blue Key members could always get jobs at their daddies' companies . . . Rollie Massimino could get a job coaching the Rosemont College women's basketball team . . . Henry Amoroso could get a job as a professional name dropper . . . The editors of the Villanovan could get jobs at the Villanova Free Press . . . The writers of the Villanova Free Press could get jobs impersonating journalists . . . June Lytel could get a job spreading warpaint on fingernails . . . Father Wilde could get a job doing T.V. commercials . . . "We will sell no time before it's time" . . . WKVU disc jockeys could get jobs as professional stutterers . . . The Villanova Singers could get jobs impersonating the Villanova Women's Glee Club . . . and quite successfully . . . John Doody could get a job impersonating the Rhinestone Cowboy . . . The girls of Good Counsel could get jobs as refrigerators . . . but Who Knows, Who Cares . . .

Center Offers Programs

By JOHN FACE, JR.

The Career Development Center, which is located in the lower level of Corr Hall, is known for their job placement of graduating seniors. The center also offers a number of helpful programs to any Villanvoa student, ranging from freshmen to seniors, and alumni. Many students are unaware of the programs that may start them off in their career after college.

The one program that is open only to seniors is the on-campus recruitment program. This program brings private industries to Villanova to interview qualified seniors for different positions in specific fields. Another program that is aimed at direct placement is the credentialing program, which keeps letters of recommendation in a file and sends them out when the time comes.

Although career placement is one of the programs offered at the center, there are other programs which other students, including underclassmen, can benefit from. An underclassman who is not yet sure what career he or she wishes to pursue may take a career interest test. There is no charge for this test and it is aimed at measuring what type of career the student might be interested in. A student wishing to pursue graduate school after college may seek assistance at the Career Development Center.

One of the new programs that the center is presently working on is called "Discoveries." This is a slide show that will be shown to incoming freshmen to assist them in their career planning.

The center runs a number of seminars that may be of interest to any Villanova student. Some upcoming seminars include the following: The Interview Process, Interviewing Skills, Exploring the Hidden Job Market, Summer Employment, and a seminar on how to apply to graduate school and admission requirements. A calendar of these different programs is available in the Career Development Center.

FREE INTRODUCTORY CLASSES!

DANCENERGY!

We choreograph beautiful bodies.

Dancenergy is a professionally choreographed program of dance and exercise for fitness and weight control, for both men and women. Utilizing the most successful aerobic techniques, Dancenergy is performed to exciting contemporary music. Choreography is updated periodically to maintain your interest, and shape and tone every muscle in your body.
It's fun. It's invigorating. And most important of all, Dancenergy works!

CLASS NOW FORMING!!!

DOUGHERTY HALL'S WEST LOUNGE — MON. and WED. 6–7 P.M.

All University Students, Faculty, Staff, Friends and Family are welcome. Register at class. For more information please contact Jodi at 627-6581.

You'll be amazed at all the opportunities and advantages the Army offers men and women with BSN degrees:

- Excellent starting salaries and benefits, including a liberal vacation policy.
- Real opportunity for advancement and professional growth—every Army Nurse is a commissioned officer.
- No basic training for nurses; just a basic orientation course to familiarize you with the Army Medical Department.
- The chance to travel; time to do the things you enjoy.
- Opportunity to qualify for specialized roles, teaching or additional education.

See if you qualify.

Call collect to
301-677-4891
The Army Nurse Corps.

For more information, write:
The Army Nurse Corps.
Northeast Region, U.S. Army Recruiting
Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755

Name_____
Address_____ Apt.____
City, State, ZIP_____
Phone_____ Age____
CASS/NERRC

SEARCHING ?

THE DISCERNMENT PROGRAM AT MARY IMMACULATE SEMINARY IN NORTHAMPTON, PA., is for you.

- Gives you the TIME to think, pray and consult about your future
- Helps you RESOLVE your vocational doubts
- INVOLVES you in the community life of the Vincentian priests and brothers
- PREPARES you for the seminary, if you choose to enter.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION WRITE OR CALL

Phone: Area Code 609
452-1940 Office
452-2144 Seminary

THE DISCERNMENT PROGRAM DIRECTOR
Box 351 Princeton, NJ 08540

Name_____
Address_____
City & State_____ Zip_____

LENTEN RETREAT DAY

Open To All Members Of The VILLANOVA COMMUNITY

Saturday, March 28, in the Connelly Center:

10:00 a.m. - Breakfast available in the Belle Aire Terrace
11:00 a.m. - Morning Prayer
11:15 a.m. - TALK: THE SEARCH FOR CHRIST IN PRACTICAL WAYS, Dr. Bernie Prusak.
Each talk is followed by time for leisure and reflection.)
12:30 p.m. - Eucharist in Corr Hall
2.00 p.m. - Afternoon Prayer
2:15 p.m. - TALK: A HARMONZING FAITH, Dr. Emily Binns
3:30 p.m. - FILM: A TWENTIETH CENTURY TESTIMONY, Malcolm Muggeridge
5:00 p.m. - PENACE SERVICE: RECONCILIATION AND INTIMACY: GOD, Ralph Montiero O.S.A.

DROP IN FOR ANY EVENT YOU WISH, OR COME FOR THE WHOLE DAY.

Twins

(Continued from page 11)

were wearing the same type of shirt and flipflops without knowing it. Earlier in the day, they appeared at softball practice dressed in the same shirt and sweatpants, again unaware of what the other was going to be wearing.

There is an outstanding mannerism that the Lanshes share. "When we stand up, we rock," Dave demonstrated. With one foot in front of the other, they rock back and forth from front to back.

Again, like the Gaetanos, they have taken advantage of the fact that they were also able to fool teachers. "When we were juniors in high school," Mike explained, "we had assigned seats. Everyday we'd trade but our teacher caught on. Finally, the one day that we stayed in our correct seats, she thought that we were in the wrong ones again." Once during a basketball game, they switched shirts at halftime because one was in foul trouble.

Dave and Mike are avid sports fans. They are both guards in basketball and outfielders in baseball. In Little League, one pitched as the other caught. "The competition is definitely there," Dave said. "It would always be Mike or I who had the highest batting average."

If professional advancement is your goal and nursing with a challenge appeals to you, then you'd enjoy the life as a

NAVY NURSE OFFICER

The Navy Nurse Corps can offer more than just a nursing job. You will have the opportunity to specialize, continue your education, work in hospitals throughout the world, and take advantage of the many benefits including free health/dental care, travel, and 30 days paid vacation.

For more information concerning the many career opportunities contact:

LCDR Mary Ellen Quinn
128 N. Broad Street
Philadelphia, PA 19102
or call (215) 564-3820 collect

Villanovan Personals

Stud got his cream whipped.
Debo got his dream tripped.
With Foot Off The Brake in pain
Wall Street couldn't spell her name.
Gnat found presents in her bags,
And slept with PAM instead of Mags.
Who went for that midnight swim?
And Ivan — What got into him?
Tinkle Maggie, Where was home?
Penguin — Do Not Disturb (In this poem)
Vern's Cornelius had his strap
Gorms jumped for who's lap?
Velour shoes just don't match,
Lucky Eyes, what a catch.
Termites got scared at the boardwalk,
What would Jaws say if he could talk?
We hope a good time was had by all,
But who (In God's Name) banged on the wall.

Love,
The Great White D.

Dear I with an A,
Tests over — Let's go wild — sleeping without you just isn't the same.

Be Psyched EYE

VIC — Do you know what rules and regulations you are breaking? Fire alarms get on our nerves, too!

Dear Tom,
I'm psyched for a SUPER time tonight — the Nighthawks are gonna be AWESOME!!

Love,
Tekh

Burchard S. Martin, Shockers, Victor, Captain, Stevie S., Guido, the Drunken Adulterer, and Ernie — We had a fab time. Get hot for Spring Fever at MHC! We love you to bits! The Holyoke Connection

---

BURT — It was great sleeping with you! We'll have to do it again soon! Love, Ruth, Sarah, Sam. P.S. Burt, you'll never get me irrational, so get psyched for our dinner! Love and Kisses, Sarah

---

Shockley and Stevie Baby — Sorry to leave your room such a mess, but you know how it is! Thank you! Love, Ruth, Sarah, and Sam. P.S. How's the Little Girl, Steve?

Dear Milky,
We're giving away free Arthur Murray Dance Lessons. Shall we put you on the mailing list?

Schamltzy

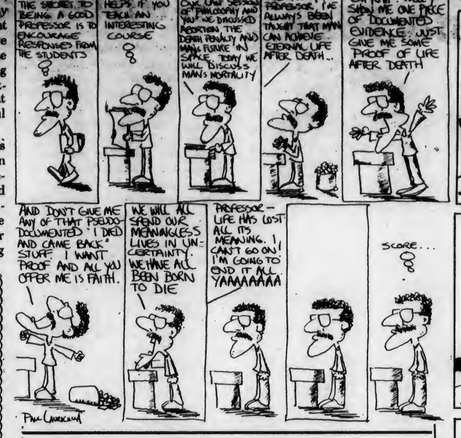
Dear Chris —
Happy 22nd — tonight we'll read you a bedtime story!

Love,
Your roomies in Hotel I-452

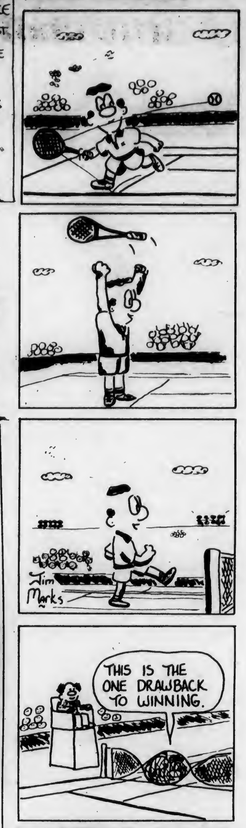
Dear:
A.B., Annie, B.M. Blarney, Boo-Boo, Boom, CBS, Carrie, Corky, Cupid, Denise Ellen, Farky, Fish, GM, Ginny, Granto, Janine, Jeannie, Jess, Karen, Kelley, Lynda, Maggie, Mary, Monica, Paul, Peggie, Poz, Renee, Resa, Rich, Rose, Shorty, Sue, Suzie, Tim, Tony, Vez, Wally. Happy April 1.

Still Caring,
A Fellow Fool

OBLIQUITIES



BILLY NOVA



30 YEARS AGO, WE PIONEERED LOW FARES TO EUROPE. TODAY WE'RE STILL AT IT.

$189
ONEWAY, STANDBY NY TO LUXEMBOURG

Luxembourg to New York return ticket, with confirmed reservation: $249.50 (½ normal round trip fare) when purchased with standby fare. Free wine with dinner, cognac after. Prices effective through May 14, 1981, subject to change and government approval. Purchase tickets in the U.S.A.

See your travel agent or call Icelandair. In New York City 757-8585; elsewhere call 800-555-1212 for the toll free number in your area.

ICELANDAIR
NOW MORE THAN EVER YOUR BEST VALUE TO EUROPE

Susan Cherundolo

SUSAN CHERUNDOLO

Susan Cherundolo, 155 Third Street, Old Forge and 23 Fordham Road, Oakwood Park, Wilkes-Barre, died February 12 at Community Medical Center, Scranton, from injuries sustained in an automobile accident February 9 in Avoca.

Born in Old Forge October 24, 1958, daughter of Maria Lorenzotti Rubando, Laflin and Thomas Cherundolo, Old Forge, she was a member of St. Mary's Church, Old Forge and attended St. Ann's Academy, Wilkes-Barre, Sts. Peter & Paul, Plains, and was a graduate of Bishop Hoban High School, Wilkes-Barre and attended Villanova University.

Surviving in addition to her parents, are her step-father Peter A. Rubando, Laflin and stepmother Carrie Decker Cherundolo, Old Forge. Sisters, Lisa and Lorie Cherundolo, Old Forge, Amy Rubando, Laflin, Brothers, Thomas Cherundolo, Old Forge, David, Peter and Mark Rubando, Laflin. Paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cherundolo, maternal grandmother, Mrs. Viola Lorenzotti, Old Forge. Interment was at Marcy Cemetery, Duryea.

In Loving Memory,

Her Many Friends

THESIS WRITING?

Tired of paying for entire retype revisions?

Because word processing has memory storage, large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.

For Pricing Info, Call
WORD PROS
674-9800

CONESTOGA CLEANERS

907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010
LA 5-3431

PLANT-ON PREMISES

SAME DAY CLEANING
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

Assassins Play

By PAUL HIGGINS

We won't get fooled again.
Roger Daltrey — The Who

The Austin Assassin Tournament has ended. After four weeks of stalking, hiding and shooting, Chris Cameron emerged as the ultimate Austin hit man. Even as the stress of the tournament wound down to a few last players, a cry arose from the chorus of those contestants shot in the early going. The cry began as bitter complaints at having been killed or "set up." Soon, this cry of defeat changed to a cry of revenge. Most Austin residents wanted to play again.

As more and more residents were killed off, the cry became louder and louder, eventually becoming a deafening crescendo. "We want Alumni!" the voices clamored. And so they shall get the chance. On Monday, March 30, at high noon, residents from Austin Hall will take on the girls of Alumni Hall in a revised edition of the popular assassin game.

The game is played with suction cup dart guns. Each participant will be assigned to "Assassinate" one of the players from the other residence hall. Regulations include hours of play (visitation hours), number of witnesses, and techniques for self defense. Each week new "hit lists" will be distributed to the "survivors" until there remains only one "master assassin."

Just who the master assassin will be no one knows. No matter who wins the contest, one warning will be needed. As Bruce Springsteen would say, "one false move and baby, the lights go out."

Balloons To Fly For Peace

By SHARON MILLS

On April 29, 1981 from 12:00 noon to 6:00 p.m., many Villanova students will find themselves participating in a festival to be held at Connelly Center Plaza. The eighth annual Balloon Day, sponsored by Campus Ministry, will take place with a dual purpose: to promote a community atmosphere, and to raise money to help starving people all around the world. This year's balloon day is under the direction of Fr. Cedrick Wilson, Barbara Hahn, and Gary Belkot, along with other Campus Ministry members and approximately twenty-five student volunteers.

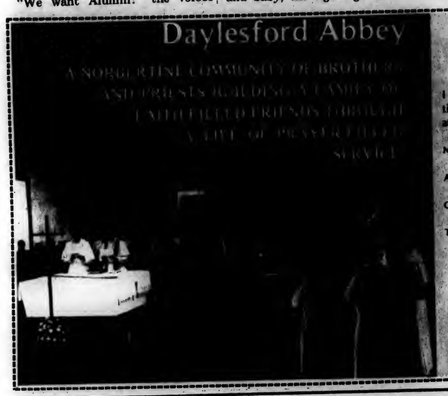
"The carnival-type atmosphere is a perfect one for beginning relationships" feels Gary Belkot, in charge of publicizing the event. "Campus Ministry wants to build Villanova into a community, as well as work on social and justice issues."

Several committees have been formed in order to organize the planning of the event. Among these are publicity, booth, balloon, refreshment, tickets, and entertainment. An open invitation is extended to all students who wish to become involved in any way. Any group organization (club, frat, sorority) is encouraged to run a booth and become involved in the activities.

All proceeds will be split sixty-forty, with the runners of the booth receiving sixty percent of the funds raised. For a fifteen dollar rent fee, some fund raising could take place on a group level. Any individual or group interested should contact the Campus Ministry Office by March 29, 1981. Volunteers will be needed on Balloon Day itself to set up and lend a hand. The idea is for everyone to get involved in some capacity.

With the exception of the cut allowed for booth sponsors, all funds raised will be sent through OXFAM to Somalia, a country in Eastern Africa whose food supply has been severely crippled by drought. The decision as to where to send the funds was the result of careful analysis by the staff to see which organization showed the most need.

One major feature of Balloon Day this year is a huge helium gondola balloon which will be set off during the afternoon.



I am considering a religious vocation. Please send me information about the Norbertine way of Life.

Name _____

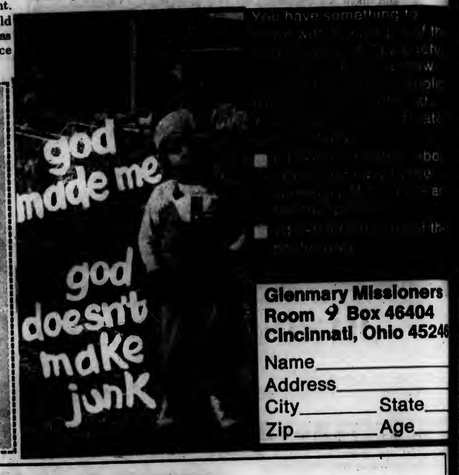
Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

Telephone (___) _____

Mail to:
Fr. Francis Dorff, O.Praem.
Daylesford Abbey
220 South Valley Road
Paoli, Pennsylvania 19301

OR Call: (215) 647-2530



Glenmary Missioners
Room 9 Box 46404
Cincinnati, Ohio 45246

Name_____
Address_____
City_____State___
Zip_____Age___

CAMPUS CORNER
RE-OPENS ! !

TOP QUALITY

PIZZA, HOAGIES, GRINDERS,
HAMBURGERS, HOT DOGS, ONION RINGS,
FRENCH FRIES, ETC.

527-3606

TAKE OUT & DELIVERY SERVICE

DELIVERY: WEEKDAYS 6-10 PM

WEEKENDS 5-11 PM

Open Weekdays 11 AM - 10 PM

Fri. & Sat. 12 noon - 2 AM

20% OFF On Purchase
Of Hoagie, Meatball Sandwiches,
Steaks and Pizza.
ONE ITEM PER PERSON
Offer Expires April 30, 1981

London Is Still Calling

But Are You Listening?

By GREG ANTON

Sandinista! the Clash's fourth album, proves that more is less. The triple album set runs over two hours long, but simply comes up a bit short. Although the album contains more political statements than the previous three, Sandinista! is also the Clash's latest organized work. They have gone too far and have spread themselves too thin.

The album includes a lot of performances by guest musicians, which only adds to the diversity. Allen Foley, the Blockheads, and reggae's Mikey Dread perform while the Clash simply play backup. Also, Mickey Gallagher's children sing silly versions of "Rebel Rebel" and "Brixton and Career Opportunities," taking away the harshness and powerful force of these two songs. Diverse elements like jazz, dub, and reggae also give way to the confusion. Songs either refuse to take on a direction or go on far too long. All in all, Sandinista! would have made a terrific single or double album, but not a triple.

Although Sandinista! could use a thorough editing job, it does contain many great tracks. Side One opens with the Magnificent Seven, a long controversial tune that emanates energy with its somewhat disco beat. Hitsville U.K. enjoys an inspirational vocal performance by Ellen Foley. Set to a peaceful and passive melody, this lively tune delivers an encouraging message to the record industry. Another great track on Side One is Ivan Meets G.I. Joe. This wild, driving and blazing song deals with the cold war.

The political commentary continues throughout sides Two and Three, until it explodes into harsh and biting statements on Side Four. This side is by far the best side on the three albums, both musically and lyrically. It begins with an angry version of Eddy Grant's Police On My Back. This track is done with so much energy and conviction it is reminicent of early Clash songs. The Call Up is an anti-draft (U.K. version) song, also done with great conviction. The song emphasizes, "It's up to you not to heed the call up, you must not act the way you were brought up." The side closes with Washington Bullets, Joe Strummer, lead vocalist, sympathizes with the people of Nicaragua who overthrow their dictator. Washington Bullets is a somber and simple statement about freedom. Throughout the song strong jazz influences can be detected.

The other sides are generally collections of sloppy, amateurish music. The album probably will have a hard time selling due to its $14.98 list price. However, this 36 song collection firmly implants the Clash as an institution to be dealt with. The Clash, and a handful of other ones English groups, seem to be the only ones willing to take a stand and put out protest songs. Strummer commented about Sandinista! "It's a bit over the top, isn't it? . . . We seem to really get up the people's noses, though. I think it's really good. We always bring out some reaction in people."

The album does not have the American appeal like London Calling, and the Train In Vain single had. The album is unique and interesting because there is so much there and so many variations. Everytime you listen to it, you pick up on something different and can get into that for a while. Despite the epic and somewhat tedious journey Sandinista! sends one through, the good, by far, compensates for the bad.

Just a Working Man

By MIKE JONES

In the summer of 1979 Robert Fripp embarked on an experiment in the marketplace which he termed an anti-tour. The purpose of this venture was to attempt to greatly increase the level of dialogue and audience participation in concert events by limiting the size of these events to between 100 and 250 people. Other objectives included an examination of certain vaules which he espoused as a personal discipline. The purpose of this musical endeavor was not to make large sums of money or to reach large groups of people. In a radio interview in 1979 he said that it "is intended for anyone with a sufficient degree of self-knowledge and who intends to do work" (that is disciplined spiritual effort).

Unlike his two previous solo albums, this effort is shared by Barry Andrews, keyboardist from XTC and a rather non-descript bassist and drummer. The characteristic taped conversation segments serve to expose the subject matter amid the unifying quality of the taped segments of the teachings of Fripp's musical metaphysics. Fripp is attempting to create within the world of quality. This involves the disdain for all the conventional measures of success which he first discarded when disbanding the experimental avant-garde group King Crimson. The group had been standing on the threshold of true commercial success, even having lured Bill Bruford away from the very successful Yes group in 1972. It was at this time that he decided that spiritual development was preferable to commercial advancement. Fripp has said that the attempt to create something worthwhile in the sphere of quality is different from the same attempt in the sphere of quantity. A comparatively small act of quality has a deeper impact than an apparently large act of quality.

The League of Gentlemen marks the continuation of dance-oriented Frippertronics which were first exposed in his second solo effort, God Save The Queen/Under Heavy Manners.

The League of Gentlemen: Sara Lee, Barry Andrews, Robert Fripp, and Johnny Too-Bad.

Favorite tracks of this writer include, Inductive Resonance, Heptaparaparshinokh, and Indiscreet III. It is indicative of Fripp's adaptability that this album contains both pieces in which the rhythm section accompanies the wanderings of the Andrews' organ and Fripp's guitar solo and pieces composed entirely of tape loops in which guitar and organ runs are continually added until there are many different levels to the music.

The album has a raw sound which Fripp seeks through the use of singletake improvisations in order to directly convey the feelings and impressions of the artist unaltered or distorted through fancy mixing and slick production. Even without these aids Fripp has again demonstrated his ability to create crisp, dicipllned though unpredictable musical forms.

Next in Vasey

Josephine: The Mouse Singer, winner of the Obie award for the best Off-Broadway play of 1979, will be the next presentation at Vasey Theatre. The play, making its Philadelphia debut, is a poignant exploration of the role of the artist in society. The play tells the story of a singer whose devotion to her art is both puzzling and inspiring to her tribe, who flock to hear her without really understanding why her singing affects them. To quote Josephine, they do not understand "the transcendence I feel when I'm singing."

Playwright Michael McClure adapted Josephine from a Kafka fable. McClure's striking use of poetry and ritual enables him to retain Kafka's ironic viewpoint towards Josephine and her audience. At the same time, he transforms the fable into myth, a celebration of the joy and pain of artistic vision.

Lon Winston, assistant professor of theatre at Villanova, will be the director. Winston has worked with contemporary theatre innovators Richard Schechner and Jerry Rojo, and has extensive teaching and directing experience throughout the U.S. Winston is also designing the set for the Production.

Josephine: The Mouse Singer will run Wednesday, April 8, through Saturday, April 11, and Wednesday, April 22, through Saturday, April 25 at Vasey Theatre.

AT THE MOVIES:

'The Competition'

By KIM KINGSLAND

The Competition is a pleasant, although unremarkable film, providing little to no innovation suspense, or surprise. However, the performances of Richard Dreyfuss and Amy Irving enable the rather lame plot to occasionally waltz gracefully. If the viewer can get past the tired boy-meets-girl, boy-and-girl-argue and-fall-in-love syndrome, overcome the ennui resulting from too many scenes of piano rehearsal to notice the fine acting of Dreyfuss and Irving, the film can be appreciated. If you do not feel up to such efforts, stay home and watch "Dallas." It's cheaper and more entertaining, if that's possible.

A major flaw of the film is the total lack of exploration of the fine supporting cast. Although Lee Remick, as Irving's instructor, is a strong character, she is one-dimensionally bitchy, a all-knowing, all-saying, all-perfect prune of a master pianist. Ty Hendershot and Joseph Cali, two participants in the competition, are grossly neglected, although both are promising in their roles. It seems as if the editor had a field day with their parts, leaving them to appear as little more than anecdotes to prove that a competition truly is taking place. This is a terrible shame; the scenes which they are allotted are amusing.

Dreyfuss is, as always, excellent. He is slimmer, handsomer, and completely believable in his sweet/sour role. Irving is also memorable; she's improves with each role she takes on. However, even these efforts are wasted: The Competition is merely 1980's version of the romance of The Goodbye Girl, with a classical music background that impedes rather than enhances. The performers should have saved their valuable energies and waited for a better script.

Rock 'N' Rolling with a Punch

By ROBERT M. McGOVERN

It's not uncommon in today's music circles to hear a band being promoted as having paid their dues and that any success they encounter is well deserved and not merely accidental. Sometimes this is true, but in most cases, if a band fails it is deservedly so. The former happens to be the case for Franke and The Knockouts, a melodically powerful group composed of five members including leader/vocalist Franke Previt.

How these five musicians got together at all is a story in itself. Franke Previt was a leader of a heavy-metal band called Bull Angus. Never heard of them, right? Well, most people haven't, but that's not important. What is important though is that this is where Franke met lead guitarist Billy Elworthy. During a brief tenure with singer Rozetta Stone, Billy met Knockout keyboardist Blake Levinsohn. The nucleus for the band was completed. The remainder of the band is composed of bassist Leigh Foxx and

(Continued on page 17)

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080
773 E. Lancaster, Villanova

LSAT GMAT
GRE/GRE - Psyche
* Experienced Faculty
* Full 36 hour course
* Central Location
* Up-to-date Materials
See our posters or
Call or Write for FREE Brochure:
382-3790
DAEDALUS
education services
305 Bryan St., Havertown, Pa. 19083

Attention Villanovans
CENTRAL PARK
ALIEN
DOING THEIR "DOORS" SHOW
Mondays
DRINKS ARE HALF PRICE
Monday SHOTGUN

we've brought it to VILLANOVA talent and reputation!
PC & C
Haircutters
1040 Lancaster Ave.
Bryn Mawr
527-CUTS

JUST FOR THE RECORD, INC.
INFLATION FIGHTER SALE!!!
ON SUPER STAR LP's & TAPES
JOHN LENNON • THE BEATLES • POUSETTE-DART BAND • BOB SEGER • LINDA RONSTADT • CAROLE KING • BEACH BOYS • GORDON LIGHTFOOT • DON McLEAN • AND MANY MORE.
POUSETTE-DART BAND Amnesia
ROCK 'N' ROLL JOHN LENNON
THE BEATLES Rock 'n' Roll Music Vol. 1
Mind Games JOHN LENNON
DON McLEAN AMERICAN PIE
THE BEST OF GORDON LIGHTFOOT
LP AND TAPE
FORMERLY $7.98
$3.94
APRIL 25
1981
WE PAY CASH FOR YOUR OLD UNWANTED ROCK & JAZZ LP's
WE CARRY LARGEST SELECTION OF ROCK POSTERS
JUST FOR THE RECORD, INC.
ROSEMONT VILLAGE MALL

NURSES, RNs
OPEN HOUSE
Learn a few facts about Oncology Nursing at The American Oncologic Hospital.
If you have ever considered a career in Oncology Nursing or you want to learn more about this challenging field, plan to attend our Open House.
WEDNESDAY
APRIL 1, 1981
7 PM to 9:30 PM
Refreshments will be provided as well as a slide show and a tour of the facility.
Join our nursing staff to discuss the challenging opportunities available at A.O.H.
R.S.V.P.
Please contact ERV SCHEUNEMANN at 728-2951 for more information. If you are unable to attend please call for a private interview.
AMERICAN ONCOLOGIC HOSPITAL
At the Fox Chase Cancer Ctr.
CENTRAL AND ENSLAVEN AVENUES
FOX CHASE • PHILADELPHIA • PA 19111
An Equal Opportunity Employer

International Film Exposition

By BARBARA ZICKA SMITH, Assistant Director of Filmex

"FOCUS on Film" is a service of FOCUS — Films of College and University Students sponsored by Nissan Motor Corporation, distributors of Datsun cars and trucks. Awards for the FOCUS '81 competition will be presented at a special Premiere and Awards Ceremony held in association with Filmex . . . The Los Angeles International Film Exposition. The event will be held on April 13th in Los Angeles. For the fourth year, Chevy Chase will be presiding as Master of Ceremonies, and Gene Roddenberry, writer/producer of "Star Trek" will be one of the presenters of the awards.

It's not particularly hard to stage a first-rate international film festival. All it takes is about a year's time and the service of, oh, maybe 300 full-time, part-time and freelance employees and volunteers. Plus, of course, those little extras — like obsessive dedication, fanatical hard work and heroic quantities of good old fashioned blind luck all around.

At least that's all it takes to put together the Los Angeles International Film Exposition — whose latest incarnation, Filmex '80, was held March 4 through 21 at Plitt's Century Plaza Theatres in the ABC Entertainment Center, in the striking Los Angeles high-rise village called Century City.

Work on last year's exposition began late last March, when the projectors had scarcely cooled down from Filmex '79. Now, there's one thing you need above all else for an international exposition of movies, it's movies. So that's what the Filmex staff (14 of whom are full-time, year-round employees) started looking for.

Around the beginning of January, preparations for Filmex '80 began in earnest: Press screenings of more than 75 new films and a good number of the special programs were arranged, and press conferences were conducted; an companiment for the silent films to be shown as part of this year's archive programs); accommodations for out-of-town guests, foreign and otherwise, were arranged; promotional film clips were selected and prepared. And then there is the Filmex premiere itself — an extravaganza of performers, costumes, lights, camera and action that seem at times to be as big a production as the premiere film (Volker Schlondorff's "THE TIN DRUM").

The support of the FOCUS Board of Judges and Governors, comprised of prominent members of the film industry, demonstrates that today's film community actively seeks young and talented filmmakers. Through their assistance, FOCUS is able to introduce winning students to renowned individuals working in the area of the industry that most interests them. Among those on the Boards are Peter Yates, John Avildsen, Allan Carr, Neil Simon, Steven Spielberg, Tony Bill, Garson Kanin, Lee Strasberg, and many more.

Rosemont Beverage Center, Inc.
910 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PA. 19010
QUICK PICK-UP SERVICE
COLD KEGS, CASES OF BEER AND SODA
525-BEER

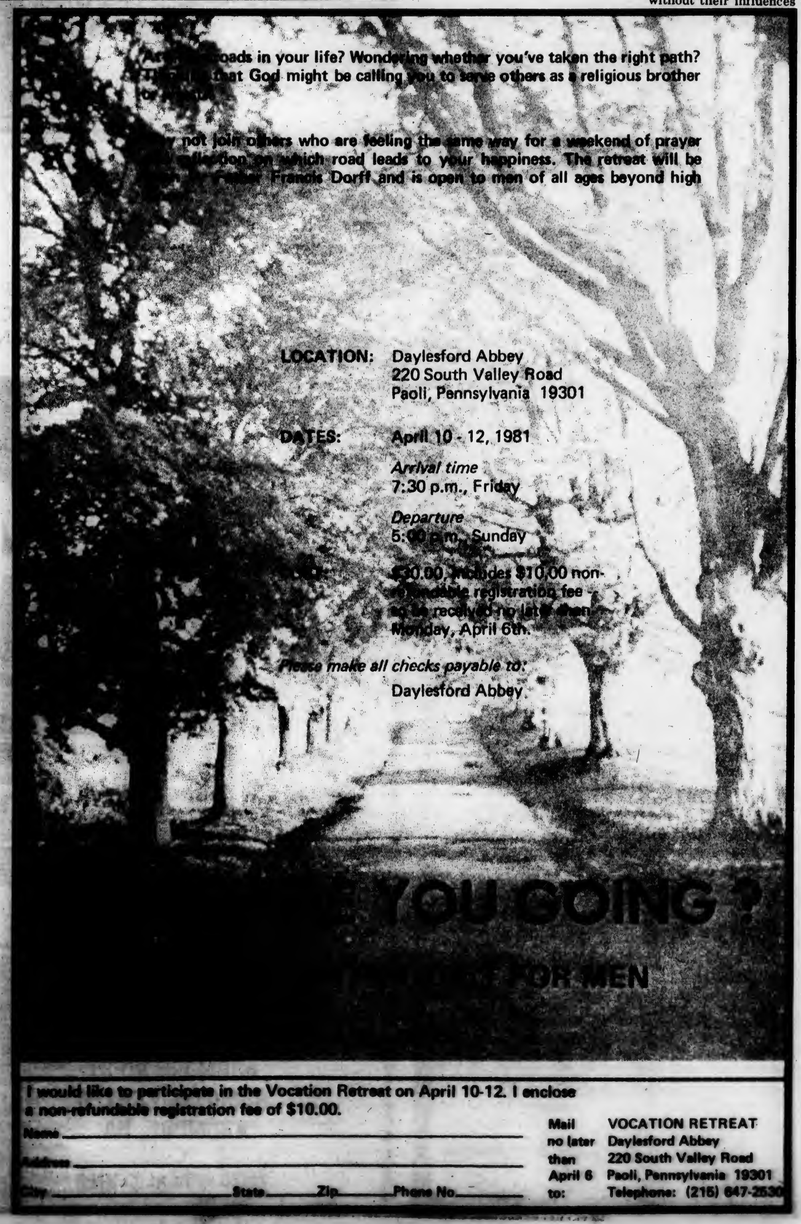
Frankie Gets Hit

(Continued from page 16)

drummer Claude LeHenaff. Additional keyboards and vocals are provided by Tommy Ayres who adds, as Franke says, "the jazzier notes on the album."

To say that The Knockouts are without their influences would be coached by his opera singer father which helped give power and direction to his voice. His background as an R'n'B singer helped add a melodic quality and a bit of punch to his vocals. Because of the bands history of being previously associated with heavier metal groups, one would expect such sounds to surface on their debut album. But this is not what they deliver. Instead there is a mixture of such mainstream AOR components as early Boston/Foreigner as is heard on one of the albums better selections, Tonight. It is a hard-driving rock song that showcases Previt's talents as a vocalist and Elworthy's as a lead guitarist. Come Back, the albums opening track, is another fine example of the groups ability to bring forth a clean, polished fusion without forsaking energy and excitement. And while the group successfully appeals to the AOR audience, there are also songs that will appeal to an even larger, more MOR, Top-10 oriented market. Sweetheart, the first single, is a flashback to rock roots with Franke's vocals, as well as very well-executed three-part harmonies. The group can also write compelling ballads as is witnessed in Annie Goes Hollywood.

Overall, the album is an especially successful debut and the "good people at Millennium" have something to be proud of. No one's denying the fact that the group draws from a number of popular sources, but it is done in such a way as to build upon and not completely mimic them.



I would like to participate in the Vocation Retreat on April 10-12. I enclose a non-refundable registration fee of $10.00.
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____ Phone No. _____
Mail no later than April 6 to:
VOCATION RETREAT
Daylesford Abbey
220 South Valley Road
Paoli, Pennsylvania 19301
Telephone: (215) 647-2530

THE GALAXY
In Somerdale Park
Somerdale, N.J.
609-435-1888
SALUTES
VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY STUDENTS!
No admission charge with this ad and college ID.
SPECIAL PRICES
Tuesday-Saturday
TUESDAYS
"PREACHER"
FRI. & SAT. - "FRENZY" AND "CREATURE"
Sundays
Columbia Recording Artists
"QUINCY"

Profile: Trainer Jake Nevin

By MIKE HEALEY

Over the past 51 years of Villanova sports, there have been four basketball coaches and 12 football coaches. But only one man has taken care of all those coaches' players, nursing their injuries and treating their ailments. That man's name is Jake Nevin, and he is as much an institution at Villanova as the chapel itself.

Perhaps one of the most popular persons in Villanova history, Jake is characterized by his ever-present cigar and undeniable quick wit. This sense of humor became rather apparent when Jake was asked the question, "How long have you been at Villanova?" "Since 8:30 this morning," was the tongue-in-cheek reply.

Despite training Wildcats' sports teams for so long, Jake has no intentions of slowing down, although he is still "trying to find a steady job." Since he has been at Villanova, Jake has an all-time basketball record of 818-438 (.651%).

Certainly one of the reasons why Jake has lasted so long in the training business is the personal satisfaction he derives from befriending so many athletes. "Training at college is much different than the pros," explained Jake, "because the athletes come in a little timid, but they leave as men. It's great to see how they develop over four years."

Jake's main hobby over the years has been collecting medals and photographs of Villanova athletes and record holders. His display room in his Bryn Mawr home provides him with countless memories of the many, many comrades he has acquired.

"The time has gone very quickly," stated Jake. "It seems as though you just get to know the kids and their senior year has already rolled around. The four years are here and gone."

As far as personal highlights go, Jake was named the official trainer of the 1961 U.S. Track Team which toured Europe and Russia during that summer. In addition, he is in select company as a member of the Big Five Hall of Fame.

Jake has seen more than his fair share of great athletes and teams over the years, yet he remains impartial in choosing a favorite. "There have been too many highlights in my day to say that there's one good team or one good player," believed Jake.

"I'd be hurting one kid to say that another was better," he continued, "but we've always had good kids here, every one of them."

The basketball team's recent appearance in the NCAA Tournament was the 13th time that Jake has been involved in a quest for a national title. "It was one of those things where the ball didn't bounce our way," asserted Jake concerning the UV game. "If we could have won that game, I think we could have gone all the way."

Few men have had as profound an effect on Villanova as Jake Nevin. He has touched the lives of innumerable people in a special way. One could probably fill the football stadium with the athletes whose aches and pains that he has catered to. For Villanovans everywhere, Jake is the little guy with the big heart. If only other schools could be so lucky.

C & F STUDENTS:
ADD UP THE FACTS!

TUFANO IS COMMITTED TO CUTTING COSTS AND OFFSETTING TUITION INCREASES.

+

TUFANO PLEDGES TO CONTINUE UNIVERSITY EFFORTS TO SOLVE SAFETY PROBLEMS SUCH AS LANCASTER AVENUE, AND RT. 320

+

TUFANO WILL FIGHT FOR IMPROVED AND EXTENDED ATHLETIC FACILITIES

THE BOTTOM LINE IS

TUFANO FOR C & F SENATOR

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES

BAUSCH & LOMB SOFT CONTACT LENSES
$59.00

- CONTACT LENSES Fitting, Orientation, and Follow-Up. $25.00
- CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00
- THERMAL UNIT $35.00
- ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00

One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.

30 Day Money Back Guarantee on Cost of Lenses.

CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520

ARDMORE WEST SHOPPING CENTER
ARDMORE, PA.

20/20 OPTICAL CENTER

HELENE FULD

Freedom of Choice Doesn't End With Your Degree

As a matter of fact, we believe one of the key elements to a successful career is choice. As a multi-faceted Medical Center we can offer you career opportunities in a wide variety of nursing disciplines:

CRITICAL CARE
RENAL/DIALYSIS
AMBULATORY MONITORING
MEDICAL/SURGICAL NEWBORN NURSERY
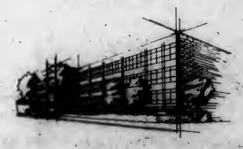
OPERATING ROOM
PEDIATRICS
EMERGENCY ROOM
MATERNITY

In this way you will be maximizing your career potential from the beginning. You'll also receive the advantages of working in a prime location conveniently situated between New York and Philadelphia.

IT'S YOUR CHOICE...MAKE THE MOST OF IT.

For more information about nursing programs contact our Nurse Recruiter ELLEN DIMITRUK, RN.

HELENE FULD Medical Center
750 Brunswick Avenue
Trenton, NJ 08638
(609) 396-6575
Ext. 2279



Growing to Serve the Community

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

Baseball Splits Weekend Series

By LARRY GOANOS

The 1981 Villanova baseball team has just begun its new season, which coach Larry Shane hopes will end with a repeat of last year's conference title. "We've got a real solid team", says Shane, "No real weaknesses that I can see." Add that physical ability to a team which Shane feels, "Has a great attitude", and there is ample potential for a winner.

The Cats opened the season with a convincing 9-2 victory over Swarthmore. The next outing wasn't as successful however, as the pitching was stung for 14 runs in a 14-6 loss to the Owls of Temple University. The Wildcats managed to bounce back though with a 3-2 trimming of West Chester State.

Junior outfielder Bob Loscalzo has started off the season on a tear, hitting three round trippers in as many games. Loscalzo, who led the team in hitting last season, seems to be heading into another fine campaign.

Freshman Randy Robinson has been impressive from the bullpen. The lefty hurler threw 6-1/2 innings of shutout baseball against West chester, and is looking forward to a strong season.

This year's team is relatively young, only five seniors dot the 23 man roster, but nonetheless it has all the ingredients of a winner, including a fine coaching staff which is headed by Larry Shane, who is now in his ninth year at the Wildcat helm. Senior co-captains Steve Skammer and Bob Sullivan Jr. will provide the on-field leadership for the Cats.

Coach Shane has set no long range goals yet. He wants to take the season one game at a time, a philosophy which will hopefully lead Nova to Harrisonburg, Virginia, the site of the ECAC playoffs.

Villanova opened their baseball season last week splitting a pair of games.

Popdan Challenges English Channel

By KERRY LYNCH

Tom Popdan is almost ready. He's contracted the pilot, he's begun swimming up to three hours straight and he's putting on weight. Come the neap tides of September 21-25, he'll face the swimmers ultimate challenge: the crossing of the English Channel.

Ever since Popdan swam around Wildwood this past summer he has been planning to swim the channel. Even though the training is rigorous and the swim, the toughest of all marathon swims, he is undaunted. "I'm looking forward to the commitment, it is a tremendous opportunity. I'm confident because I swam around Wildwood so easily."

"I'll do whatever I have to do to make it."

The preparations for such a swim are extensive and expensive. The pilot of the companion boat is the main concern. Popdan wrote to the best one and was "biting my fingernails waiting for his reply." Reg Brickell wrote back, giving him the dates of September 21-25 at a cost of 500 pounds.

Once the pilot was contracted, Popdan began to ready himself in earnest. He prepared a training schedule with the advice of Dennis Carey, the last American to make the swim, and Villanova Swim Coach Ed Geisz.

The channel is usually about 58 degrees so for insulation and energy storage Popdan plans to gain about 40 pounds in order to weigh about 200 by September. He explains "I'll be training two to four hours everyday and taking cold water baths. Everything has to be 100 percent, the training takes up your whole mind."

The cost of the challenge is about 4,000 dollars. Popdan hopes to raise some of the needed money, with the help of the Big East champions Villanova swim team, in a 24 hour swimming marathon. It will be held from 10:00 a.m. Saturday, April 4th until Sunday, April 5th in the Fieldhouse pool. Those wishing to help sponsor Popdan's challenge of the channel can pledge a certain amount per hour. Sponsor sheets will be posted in the Villanovan office on the second floor of Dougherty or through Coach Geisz in the Fieldhouse.

Popdan adds that "It is all the obstacles at once that makes the crossing so challenging. This is a personal goal and I'll do whatever I have to do to make it."

Synchro Second

By STEPHEN LANSHE

When seven swimmers bring home fifteen medals, one knows that it has been a successful meet. That is exactly what Villanova's Synchronized Swimming team did at the Eastern Intercollegiate Synchoronized Swimming Championships held at State University of New York Albany last weekend. Competing against larger, more experienced teams from the East, Villanova captured second place, finishing behind only Millersville State in the two day meet. The surprising second place finish was the highest place a Villanova team has ever achieved in regional competition.

On Friday, Villanova finished the day in third place after figure competition. Susan Giordano took second place in senior competition and Victoria Wagner clinched fourth place. Wagner was followed by the remainder of the team, Priscilla Bodner, Marilyn Buckley, Barbara Hageney, Suzan Roop and Eileen Pelkofsky. Everyone performed exceptionally well.

On the second day of competition, Villanova placed at least one routine in the top three places in every event. Since regionals are open meets, Villanova's many first year swimmers had to compete against more experienced athletes.

In solo competition, Villanova had its strongest finish with Giordano taking second and Wagner finishing third. In duet competition, Giordano and Wagner teamed up to swim a near perfect routine, capturing a silver medal. Nova's other duet of Hageney and Pelkofsky also swam well. They finished in sixth place.

The final event of the day was routine competition in which Villanova was pitted against Millersville State's top two teams, as well as squads from Wheaton and SUNY Albany. The team met the challenge finishing third. Only one tenth of a point behind Millersville. The third place finish was all Villanova needed to capture second place in the overall meet.

DTD Downs Nads in Intramural Basketball Championship

By ROBERT L.P. WALSH

DTD, using a balanced attack and a strong bench, captured the 1981 Villanova intramural basketball championship by defeating last year's champion, Nads, 46-39 Monday night at the Fieldhouse. After a slow start in which the Nads failed to score on several open fast breaks, baskets by Ed Rohrbacker and Bob Laverte broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Delts the lead which they held for the rest of the game.

Led by Rohrbacker's 14 points, with 12 in the first half, DTD was able to build a 42-28 lead with 4:20 left to play. Steve Kirk, named MVP of the game for DTD, added 11 points for the winners and Laverte and Jeff Sliter contributed 10 and 6 points respectively. When the Delts went to the bench, the subs, led by Walt Anthony and Mark Pagni, maintained the level of play of the starting five.

Paul Jeulis was high scorer for the Nads with 13 points. Tom Anthony was named MVP of the Nads for his outstanding defensive work and 10 points, scored mostly on floating moves patterned after BC's John Begley. John Nadzak aided the Nads' effort scoring all of his seven points in the second half and Howie Long chipped in five with some strong rebounding. The defense, shot blocking and rebounding of Pete Harrington also helped the Nads to stay in the game.

DTD

The Nads made several runs at DTD, at one time cutting the lead to one on a difficult spinning, one-hand shot by Anthony, but that was as close as they could make it. The Delts used a disciplined passing game, deadly accurate perimeter shooting and controlled the boards with the inside strength of Kirk and Sliter to pull ahead after each spurt by the Nads. "We won with organization," stated Ed Rohrbacker, emphasizing the controlled teamwork of the Delts which enabled them to win.

"We were ranked 21st coming into this tournament," said DTD Coach Jamie Ciarrocchi. "Kirk, Rohrbacker and Laverte were the key to this season. Last year we lost to the Nads in the semis, but we really peaked coming down the stretch."

The Villanova intramural championship earned DTD the right to play in the Miller High Life/Delaware Valley Intramural Basketball Championship. Ciarrocchi feels that the Delts "have a really good chance in that tournament and should do well."

The Nads combined the Delaware Valley championship with their Villanova intramural championship last year. Ciarrocchi added that the Nads "played great and are a really good team."

Icecats Win Hannigan Cup

By JIM FEMIA

It was in the cards. Afterall, they did finish the regular season atop the Mid-Atlantic Collegiate Hockey Conference (MACHC) with its best record in the team's history (20-6-2). They did score more goals and allow less than any other team in the league. They did have the league's leading scorer in Chris Mancuso. They did have the league's best goaltending crew led by Tom Margiotti. They did dominate the 1980-81 All-Star team and they did crush the University of Delaware at the tail-end of the season, 13-1. So it seemed fit that this team should win the championship round of the playoffs. But past Villanova teams could also boast of all these fine accomplishments but could never seem to win the "big one." Not this year. The Icecats won the best-of-three series whitewashing Delaware in two games, 8-2, and 6-3.

It was the first time in Villanova's hockey history that the champagne was flowing in an Icecat lockerroom. They had won first place trophies and been in the finals many a time, but never had they won the Cup. All those years of frustration and let downs were reconciled last Friday night.

The first game of the series was played on Villanova's home ice and the Cats waltzed away with an 8-2 victory. The game was never really close as Villanova forged ahead on three first period goals. Junior Tom Curran powered the Cats with a four goal effort, while single goals were tallied by Chris Mancuso, Bill Quinlan, Jim Femia and Frank Segreto.

Coach Skip Probst commented on the first game win, "It's always a big plus winning the first game. And winning it by such a large margin took a lot out of the Delaware team."

Less than 20 hours later, the Icecats were in Newark, Delaware hoping to skate away with the championship. Villanova's momentum seemed to carry over from the previous night as the Cats shot ahead to a quick 3-0 lead. By mid-way through the second period, the Cats were out in front 5-0 and the Icecats could almost taste the champagne.

Villanova might have been celebrating a bit premature as Delaware managed a goal by the period's end and pulled even closer at 5-3 half-way through the final period. But a shorthanded goal by Bill Quinlan with only six minutes left to play sealed the victory and the championship.

Curran was named MVP of the series scoring four goals and being an instrumental penalty killer. According to Probst, "Tom hit a dry spell at the beginning of the season but was fantastic ever since. He's a clutch player who will always play his best in the most important games."

This year marked the first year ever for a Villanova hockey team to win 20 games. With the departure of only one senior, Barry Whitaker, the Icecats look forward to another championship season next year. But for now, the Cats are not worried about next year. They are still savoring the win last Friday and they will be for a long time.

Defenseman Paul LaFond gets upended by a Delaware player but the Icecats upended Delaware in two straight games, 8-2 and 6-3 to win the Hannigan Cup.
Charlie Guida Photo

Freshman Jeff Beck poses another Villanova offensive threat as he controls the puck into the Delaware zone.
Charlie Guida Photo

Laxmen Lose Openers

By KYLE GOTHNER

After excellent pre-season play, the men's lacrosse team opened their regular season with an 0-2 record.

Opening strongly against Morgan State on Wednesday the attack was led by Paul Grady with four goals, Danny O'Brien with two, and Tom Kelly with an assist. Chris Clark, John Gallaway and Tom Gravina also each scored goals helping to keep the game close until Morgan State scored nine goals in the final quarter.

The same problem arose against Western Maryland on Saturday. After three goals by Chris Clark, two by Paul Grady and one by Kenny DelGado the team failed to score again after the third quarter and Western Maryland also went on to score nine goals in the fourth quarter.

1981 LaCROSSE SCHEDULE

March	18	Wed.	# Morgan State	H	3:30
	21	Sat.	Western Maryland	H	2:00
	25	Wed.	Swarthmore	H	3:30
	28	Sat.	# C. W. Post	H	7:00 p.m.
April	1	Wed.	Drexel	A	3:30
	4	Sat.	Mt. St. Mary's	A	2:00
	8	Wed.	Lehigh	A	3:00
	11	Sat.	# Montclair State	H	7:00 p.m.
	14	Tue.	# Georgetown	H	3:30
	22	Wed.	# Kutztown State	A	3:30
	25	Sat.	F.D.U. - Teaneck	A	2:00
	28	Tue.	# West Chester State	H	3:30
May	2	Sat.	Alumni	H	2:00

Elliott Dead at 67

(Continued from page 1)

every way." Delaney adds, "Most importantly for all these years he was my friend." Jumbo made sure all his athletes learned one very important lesson; how to become men.

In recent years Jumbo had been very low key about his health. According to his personal physican and life-long friend Dr. Theodore Berry, Elliott suffered from high blood pressure and a severe heart condition. "He knew he had it but he wouldn't let it effect his daily activities," said Berry. In 1968 during preparation for the Mexico Olympic Games Jumbo suffered a stroke. "We kept him in bed at home instead of the hospital," says Berry. "We tried to shun the publicity." Following the 1976 NCAA championships Elliott suffered a near fatal heart attack. He was forced to come right off the plane into the hospital. "He knew his heart and blood pressure were not the best, and he was on a limited diet, yet he was content," adds Berry.

Even with the recent death of his wife Kay, Dr. Berry doesn't accept grief as a theory for his friend's sudden death. "He seemed too content; he was like a new man. Kay suffered so badly for so long, (a ten year bout with cancer) that her death was a relief that she wouldn't have to endure the intense pain any longer."

Jumbo Elliott

There was also speculation that Jumbo would retire in the near future. According to Berry," He told me not too long ago that he would retire after Kay's death, but I really doubt he would have. He loved Villanova too much." Berry points out though that Elliott did assert new responsibilities to his assistants Bob Burdette and Jack Pyrah. Burdette, a new-comer, joined the staff this September and Pyrah had been Elliott's assistant since 1966.

Pyrah had a special relationship with Elliott. Jumbo would often bicker with his good natured assistant, and the two often fought like cats and dogs. Berry remembers chiding Elliott after hearing his scold Pyrah on the phone. "I remember saying, Jumbo why do you pick on him, someday he'll decide to leave, and you need him." Elliott responded, "I depend on Jack and I love him, he knows it." Pyrah was one of the many that could see that heart of gold inside the sometimes gruff exterior. However, that is the magic of the man and Jumbo Elliott was a very special man.

The Philadelphia newspapers carried headlines this week, "Jumbo Elliott the legend," and "The end of an era." They were half right. It won't be the end of an era. Jumbo wouldn't allow that. The one man who could honestly be called a living legend passed away, but could never die. The legend of Jumbo Elliott has only just begun at Villanova, especially for those who were lucky enough to have known him.

Budweiser.
KING OF BEERS.
ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

This week's Bud Athlete of the Week is junior Tom Curran. Tom scored four goals in the first of two Icecat victories last weekend giving the Cats their first ever league championship. He was also named Most Valuable Player of the tournament. Tom finished the season second on the team in scoring with 20 goals and 23 assists for 43 total points. He was also a member of the second team MACHC All-Star squad. Curran was nominated by the Villanova ice hockey team.

Inside: Tribute to James Francis Elliott

the Villanovan

Vol. 56, No. 23 — VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. — April 3, 1981

Campus Mourns Track Coach

By BOB HERMAN

More than 700 people celebrated Mass of Christian burial last Thursday, March 26 for James (Jumbo) Elliott in the Villanova Chapel.

Father President Driscoll led the mass and gave the eulogy as well. Driscoll said, "Jim Elliott's professional achievements, both in business and in sports, were overshadowed by Jim Elliott's worth as a man, a memorable legacy indeed. A loving husband, devoted father, a loyal friend, a Catholic gentleman, Jumbo touched the personal lives of many people in ways that profoundly influenced them."

Many of Elliott's present as well as former track stars attended the service. Some former stars included Ron Delany, Eamonn Coghlan, Marty Liquori, Charlie Jenkins and Don Paige.

Delany, the 1956 gold-medal miler from Ireland said, "This sort of breaks my tie with America, Jumbo was Villanova to me, you could say he was America to me."

Driscoll also said in his eulogy, "Jim was a model of constancy, fairness and integrity to his student athletes, over whom he ruled with a fatherly concern, treating them always as individuals and ever sensitive to their problems and needs as human beings."

One present track star who Elliott took a special interest in was Sydney Maree. Elliott acted as Maree's father two months ago at the runner's wedding. Maree said at Elliott's viewing the night before, "I still can't believe that we've lost him. He was my father, my mother, my family, my everything at Villanova. But he prepared us for the future, for when he wasn't there, like now."

Elliott had been the coach of the Villanova track team since 1935, when he assumed the responsibility while still an undergraduate at the school.

After the mass, a procession of over 100 cars traveled to the Calvary Cemetery in West Conshohocken where Elliott was buried next to his wife Kay who died on February 21.

Elliott died on Sunday, March 23 while vacationing in Juno Beach, Florida. He is survived by four children; sons, James, Thomas and Jeffrey and daughter, Mrs. Joy Anne Shugrue. He is also survived by two grandchildren.

Driscoll closed the eulogy saying, "Many will remember Jim Elliott as a highly professional man who made an unrivaled contribution to the glorious history of the most ancient of sports."

The funeral Mass for track coach, Jumbo Elliott. Attending priests (right to left); Rev. George F. Riley, O.S.A., Very Rev. Robert M. Hanson, O.S.A., Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., Rev. Patrick Rice, O.S.A., Rev. Sean Tracy, O.S.A., and Rev. James Martinez, O.S.A., (closing casket).
Jules Schick Studio

Military Draft Discussed

By DOUGLAS EARL

The Social Action Committee sponsored a discussion on the military draft and draft registration in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall, March 31.

The event featured James Bristol, Anti-Draft Program director, Peter Goldberger, a professor of the Villanova Law School, Joan Lamb, public affairs officer for the Selective Service and Brigadier General Theo Mataxis, American Conservative council, as panelists.

Goldberger said, Draft registration is the first part for war mobilization. "The Solicitor General of the United States said that you can't separate mobilization and registration."

Lamb said of the Selective Service, "Our mission remains the same, to provide the Department of Defense with manpower during an emergency. The Defense Department is looking at plans for mobilization. If Congress called men into induction in one month, there would be 100,000."

Mataxis, claiming to be a staunch conservative, said "We're in a death struggle with Russia. We're faced with retreating isolationism." Mataxis is in favor of a draft without women. He asked, "can they march 25 miles?" Then stated, "You can't win a football game with a woman at tackle."

Asked about the possibility of having drafted people in controversial third world nations, he said, "My enemy's enemy I'm more prepared to call a friend, no not a friend, a client."

Bristol said, "The draft gives the military establishment unwarranted control of American foreign policy. We believe that people are precious. You don't go around killing or maiming or preparing to. Love has been prostituted too much." Bristol believed that the kinds of war that people will be drafted for would be like Vietnam. He said that any war between the superpowers would be decided by nuclear weaponry.

Goldberger was asked about the need to improve the educational and technical quality of the military. He replied, "Drafting people presumes that we accept the status quo of our social and economic condition in society. That's saying that we remedy its effect in society by conscription."

Speakers at the military draft discussion were (L to R) James Bristol, Joan Lamb, moderator Kevin O'Leary, General Theodore Mataxis, and Peter Goldberger.
Jeff Page Photo

Candidate Penalized by Election Commission

By BILL CLARK

A presidential candidate was not permitted to campaign during the last day before the election due to several violations of the rules set down by the Villanova Election Commission.

John Pisano, a sophomore, was not permitted to post any materials, distribute any materials, verbally campaign, or participate in the presidential debate on Wednesday, April 1. This decision was based on the fact that the Commission ruled Pisano had violated three election rules.

The Commission found Pisano in violation of the Election Commission rules "regarding authorization of posting material," "use of sheets and posting of sheet in an unapproved area of Austin Hall," and "Presidential stipend for campaigning."

The Commission report of March 31 said that Pisano had unapproved material posted in Sheehan Hall. Also, Pisano had a 1/4 sheet in Austin Hall which was unapproved for posting.

The report went on to say that, "Additionally, a complicating factor is that candidate Pisano indicated that the sheets to be used were to be contributed by a 'maid' and were said to be defective. University Policy requires that a student wishing to attain defective sheets for this purpose should make their request through the Housekeeping Office. Secondly, the sheet found in Austin Hall in addition to other sheets located by the Election Commission were found to be new." Finally, the Commission said that Pisano had exceeded his $100 limit by using the sheets and spray paint.

John Pisano
Jeff Page Photo

Pisano felt that the charges were untrue. In reference to the materials in Sheehan Hall, Pisano said that his sister had accidentally posted unstamped signs instead of the signs which were approved. "I didn't know what my sister did," said Pisano, "but I don't see how that could have affected anything. They were the same posters."

Pisano said that he originally agreed not to use sheets for campaign purposes. "I was told that I could use them by Henry Amoroso and Claire Cassidy. They told me that I would not be assessed anything for the paint and tape. They have changed the rules in the middle of the game," said Pisano.

"There have been accusations of theft, but I have a personal slip from the maid saying that she gave them to me," said Pisano.

Henry Amoroso, student body president and chairman of the election commission, defended the

Continued on page 6

Hostage to Speak

By MARY ANNE GRANGER

Former hostage William Belk, held hostage in Iran for 14-1/2 months, will speak on his experiences April 8 at 8 p.m. in the Connelly Center.

Belk, the hostage who was blind-folded and paraded around the American Embassy in Tehran, appeared on the cover of Newsweek magazine upon his release. Newspaper and magazine pictures of him blind-folded became the symbol of the hostage take-over.

One of 52 hostages, Belk had been a communications specialist at the Tehran embassy before its takeover in November 1979. He spent 10 days in isolation following a futile attempt to escape, which almost cost him his life.

The event is being sponsored by the Villanova Union. According to Mike Fagan, Union Lectures Co-ordinator, "I was talking with an agent about other programs, and I mentioned that we were thinking of having another hostage speak, but that he was booked. She said that she had an exclusive on this hostage."

fyi (for your information)

Volunteers

The Alumni Annual Fund office is seeking volunteers for a fund drive. Students will be asked to call area alumni from the offices of T.V. Guide in Radnor for one or two evenings. We urge Fraternity/Sorority Presidents, Club Officers to encourage your members to help us raise needed funds for V.U.!! Contact Ed. Rideout, Austin Hall, Ext. 4575.

Tutoring Available

Beginning April 8, tutoring will be available on Wednesday and Thursday in math and history. Students interested in this service are asked to call Corr Hall (645-4050) and schedule an appointment. Students will be served on a "first-call" basis.

Wednesday — 1:30-2:30 Math, History; 2:30-3:30 Math, History.

Thursday — 2:00-3:00 Math.

Fantastic Friday

Fantastic Friday is coming. Some of the best things in life are free — like health screening for Villanova students and faculty, on April 10, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. This health fair is sponsored by SNAP in the Villanova Room of the Connelly Center. Come see us April 10 for a truly "Fantastic Friday."

Fantastic Friday speakers:

"Cardiac Auscultation" 10-11 a.m.; "The Holistic Way to Cope with Stress" 11:30-12; "Prevention and Treatment of Running Injuries" 12:30.

All are in the Wayne Room.

Former Hostage Speaks

One of the 52 freed American hostages will speak at the Connelly Center on Wednesday, April 8, at 8 p.m.

William Belk, who was a communications specialist at the Tehran embassy before its takeover in November, 1979, will discuss his experiences during the 14-1/2 months of captivity.

The event is being sponsored by the Villanova Union. Admission information can be obtained from the Villanova Union Office in the Connelly Center.

Ultimate Frisbee

If you're interested in playing Women's Ultimate Frisbee, but you missed the meeting, contact Julie Roberts at 527-6986.

Glee Club

The Villanova Women's Glee Club and The Villanova Union will present "A Spring Concert" with the Georgetown University Madrigals, Saturday evening, April 4 at 8:00 p.m. This event will take place in the Main Chapel on Villanova Campus. All are invited to attend. Admission is free.

Track Meet

The Intramural Co-ed Track Meet scheduled for Thursday, April 2, has been postponed. Track meet will be held on Thursday, April 9, at 4:00 p.m. The meet will be held at Villanova Fieldhouse. See the intramural office for further details.

Skydiving

Anyone interested in participating in the skydiving trip scheduled on Saturday, April 11, should attend the skydiving presentation to be given by Doug Angel of Skydive East on April 7 at 7 p.m. in the cinema room of the Connelly Center. Deposits of $10 will be collected at a mandatory meeting on Thursday, April 9, in Bartley Hall, room 110.

New Band Officers

Congratulations to Villanova University Band's new officers for 1981-82:

President — Brian Barker, Vice-President — Stephanie Pugliese, Vice-President, Fund Raising — Mike McGuckin, Treasurer — Paul Gillin, Secretary — Kathy Samsel.

On behalf of the 1980-81 Executive Board and the Class of 1981, I wish you the best of luck in the coming year. Thanks to the band for allowing me to serve as your president and for a great year!

S.P.

Economics Contest

Each year the Department of Economics awards two Adam Smith prizes to those students who submit the best research papers on topics in Economics. If you wish to submit a paper, please contact Dr. Thanawale (Room 307, Bartley Hall).

Bicycle Club Ride

The Villanova Bicycle Club will hold a ride to Valley Forge National Park on Sunday, April 5th, beginning at 12:30 p.m. from the front of the Connelly Center. Non-members are welcome. Call 645-7120 for further information.

Cheerleading Tryouts

Cheerleading tryouts will be held in Alumni gym on Saturday, April 11. Applications are available in Student Activities Office. Practice in Alumni gym is Tuesday and Wednesday, April 7 and 8, from 4:00-7:00 p.m.

Pre-Law Society

There will be nominations and elections for officers on Tuesday, April 7, at 12:45, in Bartley 109. All members must attend.

Black Cultural Society

The Black Cultural Society will sponsor a Memorial Service for the kids of Atlanta on Monday, April 6, at 6:30 p.m. in Kennedy Mall. All are welcome to attend!

Cruise Winner

The Villanova Sailing Team is pleased to announce that Nadine DeLucia, 8 Amy Drive, Sayville, New York, is the winner of the 1st Annual Spring Cruise Raffle. Nadine, along with three friends, will spend an all-expense paid weekend aboard a 42' sailboat cruising the Chesapeake. The team wishes to thank everyone who bought raffle tickets for supporting V.U. Sailing.

Films

The Villanova Cultural Film Series announces:

Saturday, April 4 — 2001: A Space Odyssey

Sunday, April 5 — 2001: A Space Odyssey, all at 7:30 in the Cinema

Monday, April 6 — 2001: A Space Odyssey

Sunday, April 12 — CRIA, 7:30 in the Cinema

Tuesday, April 21 — Farenheit 451, 3:00 in the Cinema

Wednesday, April 22 — Farenheit 451, 7:30 in the Cinema

Sunday, April 26 — Small Change, 7:30 in the Cinema

Wednesday, April 29 — Lecture by Wes Shank on Science Fiction, Memorabilia, 7:30 in the Cinema

Sunday, May 3 — Children of Paradise, 7:30 in the Cinema

Admission is $1.00 for students and $3.00 for general public.

Basketball Tourney

The Villanova-Penn Invitational ROTC Basketball Tournament will be held on Saturday, April 11, and Sunday, April 12. All the games will take place in the Drexel University Field House and are open to all interested spectators.

Track Meet

The Wildcat Running Club is sponsoring the Villanova Track Classic on April 11th. This meet is open to anyone who wants to participate. The proceeds of the meet benefit the American Cancer Society; so, everyone is encouraged to enter. The events range from the 100-meter to 3000-meter and long jump. Applications can be picked up in the Connelly Center. For any further information, call:

Steve Skrobala — 525-9433, Rm. 16 Sullivan

Jim McNichol — 525-9116, Rm. 322 Fedigan

Jim O'Brien — 525-9116, Rm. 322 Fedigan

Lecture on Values

If you want to get better in touch with your values, here's your opportunity. On April 8, Help On Tap will present Fr. Eigo to speak on Personalization and Values in the Bryn Mawr Room, Connelly Center, at 8 p.m. All are welcome!

Discount Theatre Tickets

Sizeable student discounts will continue to be available at Villanova Theatre for the last production of the season, "Josephine: The Mouse Singer." Josephine, which will run April 8-11 and April 22-25, is an award-winning play never before seen in the Philadelphia area.

Ticket prices for students are $4.00 on Wednesdays and Thursdays and $5.00 on Fridays and Saturdays.

The student rush policy will also be in effect for "Josephine." Tickets unsold by 7:50 p.m. on nights of performance will go on sale to students for $2.00 apiece.

A valid 1980-81 Student I.D. will be necessary for all student discounts.

The Villanovan prints FYI as a public service to the Villanova community. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee that every announcement will appear.

Union Debates Cold War

By RICHARD DISTEFANO

Robert A. Montserrat, former conservative party chairperson of the Villanova Political Union, was the keynote speaker for the political Union debate, Monday, March 30. The resolutution: "This House favors a return to the Cold War with the Soviet Union."

At the beginning of his talk, Montserrat asserted that, "The only basis for the realities of politics is power and strength." He continued that the United States has been at war with the U.S.S.R. since 1945, and that Soviet ideology called for "the subversion of our society and civilization."

"The Soviet Union accepts the possibility of nuclear war, and the Soviets are preparing for it," Montserrat stated. He maintained that during the 1970s the United States did not feel this way, and the result is that the Soviet Army is twice the size of all the American armed forces, including the "destitute" American Army, a term he used "loosely."

Montserrat pointed out that Soviet military activity is not defensive, rather, the U.S.S.R. moves into a country when it feels that country is "neutral" and that the United States will do nothing about it.

One of Montserrat's suggestions is to give equipment to Afghanistan rebels, for example, in order "to check Soviet aggression." He also noted the presence of 20,000 Cubans and Russians in Africa, warning of Soviet intentions to dominate that continent.

Most of all, Montserrat asked his listeners to realize that the oil rich Middle East, located at the junction of three continents, is a key strategic foothold for the U.S.S.R., and it is also critical to the United States for its petroleum.

"We must look the Soviets eye to eye, and someone has to blink. We must face the Soviets with force," concluded Montserrat.

Following this half-hour presentation, members of the audience were given the opportunity to react to the remarks.

Joel Renzo, chairperson of the Conservative Party, accused Montserrat of delivering a speech having "nothing to do with Cold War strategy." He offered the opinion that the USSR is moving strategically about its borders in East Europe for the USSR's own protection, and decried the "smokescreen of ideology, statistics, and cliches."

Owen Evans, liberal party chairperson, outlined four basic criticisms of Montserrat's lecture. First, Evans charged, "the idea that the Russians only understand force is outmoded." Second, the United States "cannot today exert pressure on nations developed since World War II." Third, with the lamentable exception of automobiles "United States technology is better than anywhere else." Finally, he pointed out that the past decade has been "lousey" for the USSR, and reiterated his stand against the Cold War.

Robert Montserrat speaking at Political Union Debate. Jeff Page Photo

When called to rebuttal, Montserrat reminded the audience that "moral suasion (and) reason failed." He charged the Kremlin with using detente as a lever for gaining concessions.

The resolution failed to pass. The concluding vote was 19 to 9 with one abstention.

Students Guilty of Phone Fraud

By MARY ANNE GRANGER

A number of Villanova students have recently been involved in fraudulent use of public pay phones on the Villanova campus.

"The phone company has made me aware of a large number of fraudulent phone calls made by students," said Acting Dean of Men Tony Martin.

According to a student involved in the incident, resident students have found they can make long-distance calls on pay phones in the dormitories by charging the calls to other numbers. "There are only two ways to make phone calls fraudulently," said the student. "You can use a third party number or a credit card. I used the former. I never used my dorm phone."

The student claimed that students he knew were engaging in this practice both last year and this year. "I only made seven calls to Massachusetts in a span of under a month," he continued. "Obviously I did not think I would get caught. But, we were all charging the calls to the same number and didn't know it. That was probably the main reason we got caught."

"Apparently there has been some confusion about the phone company's willingness to follow fraud up," said Martin "I have dealt with representatives of the phone company in the past in discussion of the problem. The impression I got was that they would act differently if the University was willing to help. They are concerned about restitution of monies that had been stolen. They are prepared to take people to court if necessary."

Asked what action has been taken against students involved in the problem, Martin said "I can't answer that. I cannot discuss disciplinary conduct on the part of students." However, according to the student the Villanovan spoke to, "I got put on probation for a year, not allowing me to participate in the housing lottery, thus effectively kicking me off campus."

The student claims he has had to make restitution for the calls he made.

"The guy from Bell Telephone in Boston told me that next time I want to do it, to use a pay telephone number. That way, he said, they'll never catch you," remarked the student.

N O T I C E - - -

The telephone company has recently reported a number of Villanova students suspected of making long-distance calls from pay phones in the residence halls and charging them illegally or with fraudulent credit cards. It has been regularly publicized that individuals stealing from the phone company in this fashion are subject to criminal prosecution.

It should be noted that the phone company spends a significant amount of time and money investigating each and every fraudulent long-distance call to determine the individuals responsible. Students who are found to be responsible for such theft are in violation of the University's Code of Conduct and are subject to serious disciplinary action.

Anthony M. Martin,
Dean of Men

A GOOD HAIRCUT!!

You'll get one at our get acquainted special

FOR MEN ONLY
APRIL 7-8 EVENINGS.
WINE AND CHEESE!
$1.00 OFF on all haircuts

Call for an appointment.

Shear Appeal
Chetwynd Apartments
527-1890

NEW EXCITING DOUBLE CHALLENGE DOUBLE FUN

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER — ONLY $4.95 SET, POSTAGE PAID.

WITH DOUBLE DISC NESTED, THROW AS ONE, CATCH TWO. NEW FINGER SPIN RING, WITH FOURTEEN FUN CHALLENGES.

INDOOR OUTDOOR DOO-ZEE DUOS DO MORE.
SEND NAME & ADDRESS WITH CK./MO. FOR $4.95 TO DOO-ZEE BOX 826V,
DEVON, PA. 19333

Find your world at...
LaSalle College
DAY and EVENING CLASSES
SUMMER'81

FIRST SESSION
Monday, June 1 thru
Thursday, July 2

SECOND SESSION
Monday July 6 thru
Thursday, August 6

MORE THAN 250 COURSE OFFERINGS

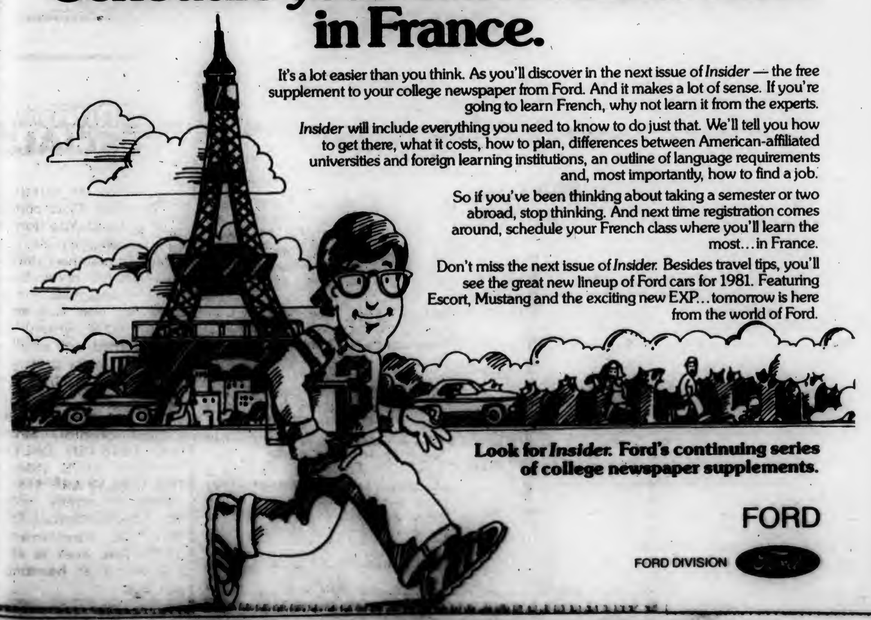
STUDENT HOUSING AVAILABLE
NOW! Send for the current Summer Bulletin.
Simply fill in the coupon and mail today.
"An Equal Opportunity College" Or, if you prefer, call: 951-1234

LaSalle College SUMMER'81
Olney Avenue at 20th Street Philadelphia, Pa. 19141 22
Please mail me Summer Sessions Bulletin
Name _____
Address _____
City/State/Zip _____ Phone _____

SPRING SPECIALS

Authentic or surgeon's scrubb suits. More comfortable than jeans. You won't ever want to take them off... wear maybe sometimes? 100% cotton, colorful, reversible and roomy. Small, med. and large. Girls get one size smaller. Colors: O.R. green, I.C.U. blue. In med. and small only we have misty-grey green and white. $10.95 for V-neck shirts and $10.95 for drawstring pants. Complete set $20. SPRING SPECIAL: PINK SETS (SM. ONLY) AND YELLOW SETS (SM. AND MED. ONLY) ARE $18. Send check or money order to Scrubbs, by Raphael, Dept. 1, Box 756, Havertown, PA 19083. One week to 10 days delivery. $1.50 handling and postage.

Schedule your next French class in France.



It's a lot easier than you think. As you'll discover in the next issue of Insider — the free supplement to your college newspaper from Ford. And it makes a lot of sense. If you're going to learn French, why not learn it from the experts.

Insider will include everything you need to know to do just that. We'll tell you how to get there, what it costs, how to plan, differences between American-affiliated universities and foreign learning institutions, an outline of language requirements and, most importantly, how to find a job.

So if you've been thinking about taking a semester or two abroad, stop thinking. And next time registration comes around, schedule your French class where you'll learn the most... in France.

Don't miss the next issue of Insider. Besides travel tips, you'll see the great new lineup of Ford cars for 1981. Featuring Escort, Mustang and the exciting new EXP... tomorrow is here from the world of Ford.

Look for Insider. Ford's continuing series of college newspaper supplements.

FORD

FORD DIVISION

Holiday Inn®
Valley Forge

Welcomes the families of the 1981 graduating class of Villanova University

CONGRATULATIONS!

- 304 Luxurious Guest Rooms
- Sentry Post Dining Room
- Enclosed Year-Round Swimming
- 20 Minute Drive From Villanova

260 GODDARD BLVD.
King of Prussia, Pa.
215/265-7500

Buying 'News' Leads to Corruption

The freedom of the press, guaranteed by the Constitution, is one of the most important rights in this country. The dissemination of the news is crucial to the proper workings of a republican form of government. After all, how can a citizen properly assess issues and vote for representatives unless the news, information, is freely available.

Thomas Jefferson, writer of the Constitution and later president, felt strongly about the press. Given a choice between living in a society with government and no press or living in a society with press and no government, Jefferson answered that he preferred the latter.

The rights of the press have been well protected over the years, reaping benefits for everyone. One need only to look at Watergate, Vietnam or the Pentagon papers to realize the importance of free, unfettered media.

Recently, The National Enquirer lost a 1.6 million dollar suit to Carol Burnett for portraying the actress-comedian as a loud drunk. Some have felt that this libel victory would encroach on the freedom of the press. This is not so. The National Enquirer is not a newspaper, nor is it a news vehicle.

Legally, The National Enquirer, was ruled to be a magazine by the court that heard the case. A magazine does not enjoy the full-range freedom that newspapers do. The jury in the case was duly informed of the legalities involved.

However, one need not be a jury member being instructed by the court to note the differences between the magazine in question and the news media. The selling point of such magazines has always been gossip. Stories of divorce, turmoil and woe accentuated by a large color photograph of famous person prompts buyers.

The magazines are displayed near the checkout counters in groce stores. The strategy is simple; while people wait in line with their baske they become attracted to the bold headlines, the prominent photograp The selling technique and the packaging work .

Slick methodology for sales is but a minor portion of the supermar gossip magazine. The manner of gathering the "news" for th periodicals is perhaps the most important feature that distinguishes th from the rest of the media.

The National Enquirer has long been alleged to have "tempor stringers": one-time reporters that are, in reality, bartenders, hotel e ployees, waitresses and others who sell information to the magazines. T method of gaining "facts" is potentially corruptive.

One could readily imagine how easy it would be to exaggerate celebrity's behavior for a fee. Happiness could become inebriation for t right amount of money.

In the Burnett trial, The National Enquirer could not validate th methods of gaining information. In fact, the story content was doubt prior to publication, according to one of their own staffers.

The integral difference between the news media and the gos magazines was exhibited at the Burnett trial. The methods of informati gathering are extremely different. The news media gathers informati from sources and confirms those sources. Gossip magazines attempt buy "news" and use the information gained in this manner as vali

letters

El Salvador Reply

Dear Sir:

After reading the dribble regarding a possible Vietnam in El Salvador in the VILLANOVAN Opinion Page (March 20, 1981), it seemed to me that William Clark had obliged himself to such an opinion, only because he is a college student (Believe it or not Bill, most of us took the flowers out of our hair a long time ago).

Frankly, I am tired of being beaten into a comatose state by the Vietnam mistake (We can all agree that it was a mistake). It is time this country stopped shrinking from the international political theater. Fortunately, President Reagan has taken strong, but prudent steps in El Salvador. Leave the old man alone.

As for Clark and his buddies, they'll certainly be protest-marching down Pennsylvania Avenue if one of our advisors comes home with a cut finger from opening a case of Southern Comfort.

Sincerely,
Philip W. Kessel

Reagan Shooting

To the Editor:

Let me make one thing clear from the outset, I don't care for Ronald Reagan's politics. Actually, I don't care much for him as an actor either. I can't say how I feel about him personally because I've never met him. But what I have to say really has nothing to do with anyone in particular. It deals with an ideal, one that I always felt was intrinsically guaranteed by human nature. It's the right of a person to express his/her opinions freely and to pursue any lifestyle that doesn't interfere with anyone else. It's all there in the constitution, but there are some peoople who couldn't care less about anyone's rights if they aren't the same as theirs. In fact, if a person doesn't agree, usually they have no rights as far as they are concerned.

No one knows for sure if that was John Hinkley's thinking, or if that's the opinion of all those people you talked to yesterday that were glad or weren't concerned either way. It sure is a sad reflection of the state of American society today when a person can't speak freely or when they are persecuted for that opinion. Until the situation changes, we as a country really have no right to condemn other countries for their lack of human rights.

Robert M. McGovern

Complaint

Dear Editor:

In your article on nursing mini-seminars, "Health Discussed" (March 20, 1981), I believe that I was misquoted. In response to your reporter's question about whether non-nursing students could benefit from the seminars, I replied that non-nursing students should consider their knowledge, experience, and judgment. For example, they might be interested in Child Abuse or Psychosomatic Illness rather than Acute Respiratory Distress which is more clinic oriented. I did not say nor would I im that one course is of "greater interest most people" than another.

Donna M. Zimm
UNS Academic Committee Chairper

Concert

Dear Fellow Students,

On Saturday, March 28, the Social Fu tions Committee of the Villanova Un sponsored an outdoor concert as part of Underclassman Weekend. Contrary tradition, a few students remained beh to scour the mall. These students were brothers of the newest fraternity on c pus, L.T.D. All of the L.T.D. brothers were there stayed as much as 45 minutes ter the event and cleaned up. Th students took it upon themselves to ret Kennedy Mall back to its original state behalf of the Social Functions Committe the Villanova Union, I would like to sonally thank the brothers of L.T.D. other students who stayed.

Sincer
Paul Mar
Social Functions Coordina

P.S. A special thanks to the one L brother who was on crutches and helped as much as anybody.

the Villanovan

BOARD OF EDITORS

Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey
Sharon Winters
News, Mary Anne Granger
Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone
Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki
Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia
Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida
Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese
Advertising, Dawn Miller
Assistant News Editor, Sara Kelly
Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

News: Carol Alkons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Laveile, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli, Bob Herman.

Features: Mary Anne Bilz, Re Crossan, Deidre Flanagan, Susan French, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Edward Lis, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, Catherine Murphy, John Pace, Betty Rutkowski, Cathy Shiels, Kate McDonald.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Redan, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Brehm, Fred Pescatore, Mark Kelly, Echelmeier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPasca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmetag.

Sports: William Beck, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Dave Glickman, Larry Goenos, Michael Healy, Michael Jacobs, Jeff Lerner, Kathy Maher, Roy Mita, Al Oxenreiter, Peter Ryan, Jerry Ventresca, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Coskey

R.A. Concern

To the Editor:

I was shocked when I heard the news that Marietta Hanigan, the first floor R.A. in Good Counsel Hall, was dismissed.

After learning the facts and surrounding circumstances of the case, I am deeply concerned about Villanova's policies regarding this type of situation. It seems quite unfair and undemocratic that one person, namely the Dean of Women, has the power to make such decisions without any real consultation with other members of the Administration. I find it hard to believe that an institution which commands the respect Villanova does, operates without proper democratic procedure.

I do not think Marietta's past record, or reason for her judgment for allowing one of her students into another's room, was taken into consideration by the Dean when she dismissed her, or by Father Deegan who had to approve of her dismissal.

The only way Father Deegan proved to be any assistance at all was to allow the Villanova student body to see how powerful the Dean of Women is. When Marietta asked him, "wasn't it possible that the Dean of Women could make a mistake," he replied that the only reason she thought the Dean was wrong was because she disagreed with her.

So it seems that from Father Deegan's point of view, the Dean is infallible. There are no checks and balances in this system.

I think it is imperative that the Judicial Board be organized to review cases like Marietta's. It is unfair and undemocratic to have it any other way. The decision cannot be made by one person. Hanigan Vs. Villanova is a landmark case and should be used to change the system.

M.B. 1981

To the Editor:

Hamlet said it well, "To be or not to be, that is the question?" Marietta Hanigan, former R.A. to Good Counsel, must have been asking herself the same question on the night which caused her dismissal.

I'm sure she debated whether it was more important to be so concerned with her personal committment to care for her residents that she should not stringently abide by school policy, or not to be sensitive to the needs of the residents so that she can ritualistically carry out the position of R.A.

It seems much more humane and Christian-like to choose (as Hanigan did) To be. Unfortunately, the administration, especially Dean Drury, wanted Hanigan to choose the alternative — not to be compassionate.

In addition, the administration also chose not to be flexible, considerate, Christian-like or just in their decision to fire Hanigan.

They chose not to be pragmatic or rational when they forced the two remaining Good Counsel R.A.'s with 80 more girls.

And worse yet, they chose not to be consistent in their judgement.

Obviously they thought Hanigan had some unique and highly qualified characteristics if they hired her as one of the 16 female R.A.'s from the multitude of applicants.

How can they now disregard her personal record and stoop as low as to debase it? (Let's face it, the word "fired" on a student's file is not going to hit it off big with employers).

A great injustice has been done to Hanigan and it is only fair that the situation be rectified. The most important correction is that her record be cleared.

Classmates, I ask you to be concerned enough about the mistreatment of a fellow student that you will write to Dean Drury in Hanigan's behalf. The letter doesn't even need an 18c stamp. Just write "I want Hanigan's record 'to be' cleared," sign your name and slip it under the Dean's office door, (Rm. 119 Tolentine).

Is Miss Hanigan's case to be brought to the Dean's attention so that we will not let the administration rule over us unjustly, or is her case not to be given any attention so that our rights can continue to be abused by a tyrannical administration?

That is the question. I want you, the student body to answer it.

Lisa Ann McFadden '84

Budget Comments

Dear Editor:

On Friday, March 20, the University Senate approved the Administrative Budget for the 1981-1982 academic year. This action went relatively unnoticed by the University community. The Student Caucus voted against this Budget in its entirety, the Faculty Caucus was split, and the Administrative Caucus supported it. The Budget was passed by a vote of 13 in favor, 11 opposed, and 5 abstaining — a minority of the membership of the Senate.

The figures here are telling. This budget is not reflective of the needs of the University; it is not equivocal across the board. The students, again, receive the heaviest burden, despite the fact that it appears that financial aid will be drastically reduced and that prices will continue to increase. While no one will argue that the economy is stable, there still seems to be little consideration by the members of our administration of the plight in which this Budget leaves all concerned with Villanova.

This Budget meets neither the priority of financial aid, nor that of the acquisition of academic equipment. This Budget attempts only to maintain the present quality of academic equipment, while we should, in fact, be striving toward the improvement and expansion thereof. Rather, Villanova is years behind in planning and facilities, because each year the needs of the University are deferred.

Although the budgetary process for this year is now complete, I feel obliged to reiterate the position maintained by the student members of the University Senate.

The entire process must be shortened in the future to enable faculty to make contractual decisions and to allow students to decide whether or not they can afford to attend Villanova the following year. If the Budget is approved midway through Spring semester, both students and faculty are left adrift regarding alternate plans.

I call upon all in the Villanova community to speak up. We cannot continue to silently ratify the actions before us, we must think about Villanova five years from now. If we continue down this path of ruin, our facilities will be even worse, while the cost of our education will be affordable only by the wealthy.

The future of this University lies in the hands of a unified effort on the part of all Villanovans. We must have the courage to vote and speak our minds. Persistent and determined, we can realize a stronger and a better Villanova.

In closing, I would like to emphasize to future Senates that it is the students who comprise this University; the students who are the underlying basis of Villanova. They must be considered as heavily as faculty in future decisions. To exclude the students' welfare so completely marks a black day in Villanova's history.

Respectfully Submitted,
Henry J. Amoroso
Student Body President

on campus

By DELPHINE STILLGER and JEFF PAGE

In the wake of the assassination attempt on President Reagan, the Villanovan decided to ask students what they thought our society could do to prevent assassination attempts on our leaders in the future?

"If someone is going to have a shot at the President there is not much they can do to prevent it. I think the secret service did a very good job in preventing a fatal wound."

Peter Marengi-Senior Political Science

"Not much because he has great Secret Service as it is. Extracting him from the public would be the only alternative and that is impossible."

Sue Reiley
Junior-Communications

"We should increase secret service security and have more extensive coverage on potential suspects, like the guy this week. President's should realize their responsibility to protect themselves, they could do this by limiting their public exposure to open crowds."

Bill Tucker
Senior-Accounting

"Reduce the level of press activity when the President is in the public because it creates too much confusion."

Nikki Armata
Senior-Sociology

Visiting Prof Gives Lecture

By SARA KELLY

A professor at Johns Hopkins University and a well-known critic of works by great authors and poets, delivered a lecture on "Technology and Literature" at Villanova March 26.

Professor Hugh Kenner, who has published books and articles about Chesterton, Joyce, Pound, T. S. Elliot, Beckett, Buckminster Fuller, geodesic math, and a variety of other subjects, has written over 20 books in 20 years.

Kenner referred to 1910 as the time in history when this country began to grow technologically mainly because of the rapid growth of mass transportation, and also because, in that year, Mark Twain died; an event which Kenner feels marked the end of old America.

Among the technological advances which, according to Kenner, changed the way in which works of literature created was the typewriter. The typewriter made it possible for the author or poet to create the finished product, when previously, the author or poet could write his article or poem, but then would have to send it to a printer to be typeset and printed.

He also made a reference to the camera which, according to Kenner, freed the painter from trying to duplicate an object on canvas, because duplication could now be done simply and quickly. Kenner stated that the camera is a "phantom artist."

In speaking of the rhythm which is a necessary component for the production of good literature, Kenner quoted T. S. Elliot by stating that the "internal combustion engine was altering our conception of rhythm by its erratic beats."

According to Kenner, technical innovations of the time caused one problem: books were being published in mass quantity with decreasing quality. "The art of creating finely manufactured books designed to last for generations was becoming less and less commonplace, and the hastily produced machine-made books, which only lasted for a few years, were becoming more and more commonplace," stated Kenner.

The lecture was co-sponsored by the English department and the Intercollegiate Studies Institute.

Professor Hugh Kenner Jeff Page Photo

Seminar Held

A Modern Languages seminar considering career opportunities in the languages area was held March 30 at Villanova.

Representatives from the fields of health care and teaching discussed career opportunities that combine foreign language skills with other job skills. Villanova Professor Maria Alter, moderator, explained that the point of the lecture was to discuss where foreign languages can be used.

Also speaking at the conference were Dr. Barbara Heller, assistant dean of the College of Nursing; Mr. Jeffrey Raplowitz, corporate director, employee development at the Siemens Corporation; and Mr. Jack Comminos, director for corporate college relations at the SmithKline Corporation.

Each speaker explained where language skills can be used in occupational fields.

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118

Elections

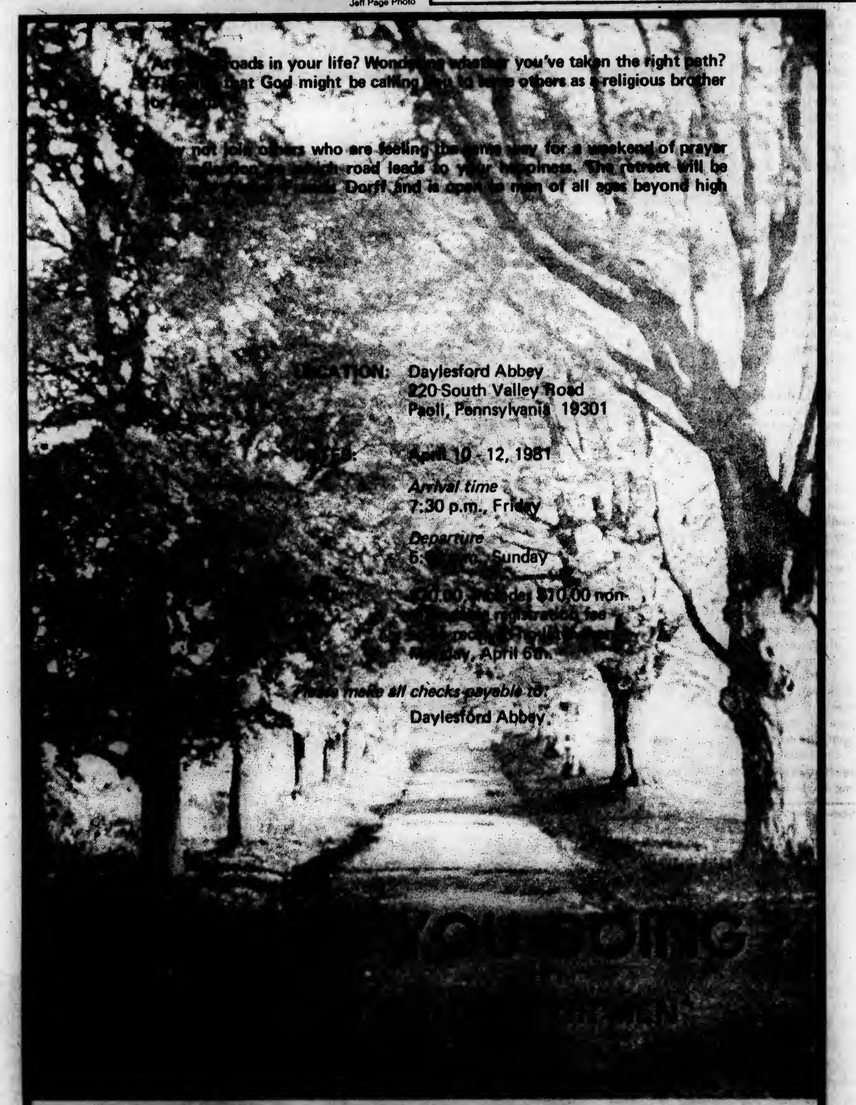
(Continued from page1)

decision. "They (Pisano's campaign workers) were upset with the decision and found it to be harsh, but I think it is fair and the commission will stand by it." Amoroso said that the decision was reached by a majority of the commission, with only one abstention preventing it from being unanimous.

Pisano said that he intended to appeal the decision to Rev. John E. Deegan, vice-president for student life. "They have stifled my campaign. They have gone far beyond what a first infraction calls for," added Pisano.

AEROBIC DANCE
"Chorus Line To Better Health"
Increases Cardiovascular Endurance • Trims - Shapes - Firms to Music • Provides More Stamina and Mental Relaxation
8 one-hour sessions $27.00 Twice Weekly
Registration required - Fridays 9 P.M.
Call Mary Ellen McMonigle, M.Ed.
Peter Kadel Dance Studio 964-1610
28 Lehigh Avenue, Devon 19333

THESIS WRITING?
Tired of paying for entire retype revisions?
Because word processing has memory storage; large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.
For Pricing Info, Call
WORD PROS
674-9800



New Jersey

Look Before You Laugh

By BILL CLARK

The state of New Jersey is often forced to bear the brunt of many jokes. "God sneezes on New Jersey;" "New Jersey — the armpit of the nation;" we hear them all the time. There are many students at Villanova who live in New Jersey, yet defenses of the state are few and far between. In fact, many of them join in with jokes merely to appear as part of the crowd.

It is about time that the real story of New Jersey be told. This story does not consist of the sights bordering the New Jersey Turnpike. It does not consist of factories and over-congested cities. No, this story consists of the New Jersey few out-of-staters see, but one many residents appreciate.

A recent Eagleton poll shows that two-thirds of the New Jereyans polled said New Jersey is a "good" or "excellent" place to live. The poll also showed that two out of three residents feel that life in New Jersey is about the same or even better than in other states.

With such high approval ratings from its residents, Why do people constantly insult the state. Apparently, it comes from misperceptions about New Jersey? It is about time that these be put to rest.

One common charge against New Jersey is that it is merely a "bedroom" state for people who work in New York or Philadelphia. The same Eagleton poll, however, showed that four out of five of New Jersey's principal wage earners are employed within the state. Only nine percent of these wage earners travel into New York, with only four percent working in Philadelphia.

Another common criticism against New Jersey is that it is an industrial wasteland. No one can deny that New Jersey has a thriving economy. New Jersey is one of the foremost research centers in the world. Oil refineries in Linden are some of the largest installations of their kind. Other important manufactures are apparel, instruments, and electrical goods.

Because most of this industry is located on the interstate highways, many people assume that the entire state is the same way. Most residents will tell you this simply is not true. The statistics will also tell you this is not true.

"A recent Eagleton poll shows that two-thirds of the New Jerseyans polled said New Jersey is a 'good' or 'excellent' place to live."

"Of the total land area, 43% is forested and about 24% is devoted to agriculture," said the Information Please Almanac. New Jersey tomatoes are famous for their quality. If you travel in the western part of the state, you can see the fields where crops grow and animals graze. There is more to New Jersey than factories and pollution.

The resort areas of New Jersey are visited by travelers from many states. With the recent addition of gambling to Atlantic City, it is getting much of the notoriety. There are, however, many other areas of the state which provide for quality recreation. There are many quality beaches up and down the New Jersey coast. The state has 40 state parks. Lakes in northern New Jersey attract many tourists each year.

Finally, New Jersey can boast about some of the most famous people in the country. In addition to such politicians as Woodrow Wilson, there are (of course) Bruce Springsteen, Frank Sinatra, Alan Alda, etc. In fact, Alda returns to New Jersey each weekend from Hollywood. Apparently, there must be something about New Jersey which constantly brings him back to the state.

With all these facts, it is quite difficult to understand why New Jersey is always insulted. While the state may not be perfect, it offers its residents a wide range of activities and life styles. Maybe the people who constantly insult New Jersey feel that there is no comparison between New Jersey and other states. But we now live in Pennsylvania — heaven forbid.

Spring Concert Brings Joy

KATHI IANNACONE

Kennedy Mall marked the spot for the first outdoor concert held this year. Sponsored by the Villanova Union's Social Functions Committee, it was part of the Underclassman Weekend. Amid the sundrenched Saturday afternoon, student came together to lie in the sun, listen to music and generally, take a break from the long work week.

Full Moon was the afternoon entertainment as they began their rock concert at 1:00 and they continued until 5:00. Between sets, various Springsteen and other popular musicians were played on tape to keep the momentum going. Frisbees, softballs, and footballs flew through the air, as others just sat, watched, relaxed, and listened.

Meeting people proved to be another positive asepct of the day. Sophomore Susan Kellner stated, "it was just the most prefect atmosphere for getting outside and seeing fellow students; good weather, good friends and a definite good time." Although the good weather may have prompted such activities, "it was one of the most successful events in which the campus has ever taken part," Kellner continued.

The bottles of baby oil were flowing and the sight of shorts and summer t-stirts was common. And just shortly after the concert ended, a few burnt noses and pink shoulders were seen. "Sun, fun, and laughter was what the day was all about," Jane McEntee reported, "it got everyone so psyched for the warm weather and the good times which we'll always remember."

Although many may have attempted to study while under the sun, it was a virtual impossibility. This thought was reflected in the comments of Connie Conins, "I thought it would be something different to study Anatomy outside while listening to music but the excitement and happiness was so overpowering that I had to enjoy it all while I could."

It seems as though the entire campus was out in full force to participate in the day's happenings. Yet when it was all over, no one would have realized that anything took place. Everyone pitched in to clean up and make the campus look new. DKN pledges lent a helping hand on Sunday too, by picking up what others had slightly skipped over. Karen Ira may have said it best when she commented, "the weekend was a total school effort. We all acted like students who were really interested in being together and having fun together. I can honestly say it was what I always knew college was all about."

"Full Moon" performed last weekend on the steps of Kennedy Hall. Jeff Page Photo

Center For Concern

El Salvador

"Iran points the moral: Human rights is not just a matter of morality; it is a practical concern. Regimes pass, but people remain. And there is a subtle linkage between the American position on human rights and the whole web of relationships abroad . . . Morality apart, the logic that governs human rights policy is national interest."

New York Times editorial November 17, 1980

Over 10,000 people died in El Salvador this past year. This figure is provided by Amnesty International and is further supported by information from the respected legal aid office of the Archdiocese of San Salvador. The role of El Salvador's military is indicated in an overwhelming number of these deaths. In spite of these open violations of human rights, the United States' Government continues to send military aid to the ruling junta.

A growing number of people are condemning the increased U.S. military presence in El Salvador. Within Congress, Representative Gerry Studds of Massachusetts is sponsoring a bill (H.R. 1509) which would terminate all military sales and training assistance to the junta.

At this point over 50 Congressional representatives support the bill. Letters from concerned students, staff and faculty can make a difference. Write your representative and urge him/her to contact Congressman Studds and co-sponsor H.R. 1509. The address is U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Easter Retreat
"FOR STRUGGLE TO REST"
APRIL 15 - 17
AT "KRIKRIDGE"
IN THE POCONO MOUNTAINS
Sign up in the Campus Ministry Center.

Campus Clip

Jeff Page Photo

The bridge on Ithan Avenue, normally painted by fraternities and sororities, was used to express the feelings of some Good Counsel residents. Obviously many are upset by the firing of R.A. Marietta Hanigan. For more opinions on this issue, see this week's "Letters to the Editor."

It's A Doo-Zee

A local inventor Don Ross of Devon has recently received a patent on just such an item and has started a new business called the Doo-Zee Products Company, Incorporated.

They are producing a new type of disc toy called "The Doo-Zee Duo."

Doo-Zee Duos are two plastic discs about 9-1/2 inches in diameter and 1-1/4 inches in height especially designed for high utility.

Unlike other discs on the market the Doo-Zee Duos have a horizontal rim wing flight stabilizer that extends outwards at right angles from the base of the disc hull.

This horizontal rim wing permits an easier alternate grasp for throwing and catching the disc.

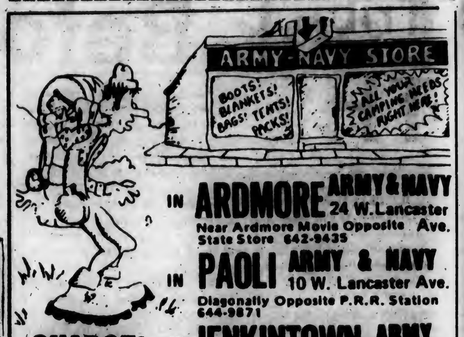
Unlike the other discs with Doo-Zee Duos, you can have fun in all seasons, indoor and outdoor and you don't need a partner to practice. In fact you can practice finger spins and finger exchanges in as little room as the back seat of a car.

The Doo-Zee Duo discs are molded locally in the Delaware Valley and delivered at Devereux Industries, a vocational rehabilitation center, where the young folks package the parts for mail order shipments.

BILLY NOVA

Books for Lasting Pleasure . . . . . Quality Paperbacks
ARDMORE
Paperback Book Shop
14 W. LANCASTER AVE., ARDMORE, PA. 19003
MIDWAY 9-4888
. . . good reading at low prices
BRING THIS COUPON FOR 15% OFF
OFFER GOOD UNTIL APRIL 15th

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080
773 E. Lancaster, Villanova



CHARGE!
Most Major Credit Cards Honored
IN ARDMORE ARMY & NAVY 24 W. Lancaster Ave.
Near Ardmore Movie Store Opposite State Store 642-9435
IN PAOLI ARMY & NAVY 10 W. Lancaster Ave.
Diagonally Opposite P.R.R. Station 644-9871
IN JENKINTOWN ARMY & NAVY 705 Greenwood Ave.
On Bogo Parking Lot 884-9441
IN WAYNE ARMY & NAVY 156 E. LANCASTER 293-9832

Keep The Beat
BETA GAMMA TAU
in cooperation with Bryn Mawr Hospital is sponsoring
2 FREE CPR CLASSES
Sat. April 4 1-4
Thurs. April 9 6-9
North Lounge Dougherty
Certificates Received
Limit 50 per class
Learn CPR

30 YEARS AGO, WE PIONEERED LOW FARES TO EUROPE. TODAY WE'RE STILL AT IT.
$189
ONEWAY, STANDBY NY TO LUXEMBOURG
Luxembourg to New York return ticket, with confirmed reservation: $249.50 (½ normal round trip fare) when purchased with standby fare. Free wine with dinner, cognac after. Prices effective through May 14, 1981, subject to change and government approval. Purchase tickets in the U.S.A.
See your travel agent or call Icelandair. In New York City 757-8585; elsewhere call 800-555-1212 for the toll free number in your area.
ICELANDAIR
NOW MORE THAN EVER YOUR BEST VALUE TO EUROPE

ATTENTION: GRADUATE NURSES
A Very Important Message That Concerns Your Career Development

Shadyside Hospital is a 454 bed acute care teaching hospital with an established reputation in providing excellence in patient care. To continue our pursuit of excellence, we are offering a highly comprehensive and personalized MODULAR ORIENTATION PROGRAM to new graduate nurses. The program is designed to give the new graduate the time, personal support, and structured environment conducive to learning and growth during the transition from student to staff nurse.

For further information and to learn about our excellent salary and fringe benefits package, please call Nancy Yandora, RN at (412) 622-2233 or return coupon below.

SHADYSIDE HOSPITAL
5230 Centre Avenue □ Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania □ 15232

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Telephone _____
Date of Graduation _____

the Villanovan

A Tribute to James Francis Elliott:
THE MAN AND HIS ERA

By TED WOLFF,
SPORTS INFORMATION DIRECTOR

This will not be a maudlin piece. Jumbo wouldn't have wanted it that way. In many ways, Jumbo was a man of simple means. I'm sure, he was well off. But it was his means as a track coach which always inspired his runners and thoroughly baffled everyone else.

His pet sayings: "Live like a clock," "Stop and smell the roses" and "Make one move," were so simple that adversaries refused to believe them. There was something hidden and complex about Villanova's track success, they all would believe, as if Jumbo stirred up a magic elixir and fed it to his runners before a Penn Relays or an IC4As.

No, no, no. It was true, however. Jumbo was much more than a track coach, much more than the successful businessman he was. His student-athletes could feel it. I could feel it. You got the feeling that as you spoke to him, he exuded a presence that stayed with you even as you left the room.

To me, Jumbo was a little bit like your conscience. He instilled his thoughts into you even as you fought his teachings. I could tell as I saw his runners perform. He was the Master Teacher, and you never realized his teachings until after you had earned your degree.

There were disagreements. Boy, were there disagreements. I can even remember when he backed me against a wall once, and I thought to myself, "Gee, I might have to defend myself." Yet, even as his runners misunderstood him, they carried Jumbo with them as they ran.

I can only laugh at all the memories. The first time I met Jumbo I needed information for a press release. As was his way, he would walk around the old, cinder oval around Villanova Stadium. I began to ask questions about the upcoming meet, and he could care less. Once in a while, he'd give me half an answer while continuing to bicker with his assistant Jack Pyrah. We were all walking laps. He'd do it to keep in shape, but I didn't know.

It took me three laps to realize what was going on. I pardoned myself at the mile mark. See, even a sports information officer had to work out Jumbo's way.

I can still see Jumbo putting on another show in his office or on the track. The office fluttered with trophies, plaques and awards was still big enough to allow for Jumbo's skip-turn as he swung his imaginary golf club for the thousandth time. Or his clamorous gestures at good-natured Jack, maybe a poke in the ribs or a swift kick to the shins, just to keep him on his guard. How many times did I want to take his picture at his desk? Legs crossed on the tabletop, fists screwed into his face as if keeping his head in place. Many a conversation took place, not often a track and not often in textbook language, but it was special. And, just as suddenly as if he waved a magic wand, Jumbo had had enough. He was leaving for home, and we would pick up where we left off tomorrow.

It is common knowledge among the elite group of runners what Jumbo could impart to a training session with a few scattered words. "Cu- cu- c'mon, ch-ch-champ, you-- you c-c-can do it. Ju-ju-just one-one more lap."

Sometimes, he giggled, telling me beforehand the look this runner would give him when he told him to do one more 600. At the time, I thought this man was a sadist. His wisdom was in meaning, not in words spoken.

After the funeral, I took Dick Buerkle to the train station and he told me about his first outdoor meet for Villanova. Here he was, a scared freshmen and a 4:30 miler running for Jumbo Elliott. He didn't know his shorts from his shoes. So Jumbo Elliott told the kid to just relax, and to emphasize the point, he walked 90 yards away and hit wedge shots at Dick. Dick didn't know it at the time, but that was Jumbo's way of saying, "Don't worry about this meet, kid, the big ones come around soon enough."

Jumbo had some steadfast rules. He was always one to paint a picture black and white. He preferred that to colors. "Broads and track don't mix," he would say, using the example of a promising pole vaulter who used to work out with his girl friend. He'd jump and the girl friend picked up the pole. Pretty soon, the vaulter got more involved with his girl than with his pole and they were married. Jumbo never forgot that.

Some rules were changed. After 20 years of coaching, he still learned a lesson about eating habits when Ron Delany downed several hot dogs 20 minutes before setting a record at the Millrose Games.

Others were not. No facial hair and no sweatsuits, sweattops or uniforms with any color but blue and white and the letters V-I-L-L-A-N-O-V-A. I can still chuckle to see Jumbo chase down Jack Pyrah after catching a glimpse of one of his runners wearing chartreuse.

Jumbo avoided publicity. But, deep down inside, he was a ham. As a novice, I would be delighted to run down to his office and say that such-and-such from the Los Angeles Times called, and would he return his call. The L.A. Times call for Villanova! Are you kidding!

Jumbo would glance up to me, see if there were any other nuisances around, and then have Jack see what the guy wanted. So what, another reporter. I was deflated.

There were Penn Relays or IC4As where I never even congratulated the coach. He had disappeared before the swarm of well-wishers could get to him. Mind you, he had time for reporters, just as he had time for his athletes. But not a whole lot of it.

Two stories gave me, perhaps the most exhilaration of any two stories ever written about Villanova. The New York Times SportsMonday article two years ago, and the Sports Illustrated inside look at Jumbo last year. In fact, they almost ran the same week, and I prayed they wouldn't. Sports Illustrated decided to can the idea when the New York Times story ran the week before the Penn Relays. But they came back with it the next year, and it was a beautiful piece. Jumbo was as proud as a peacock, and all he asked of me that week was how he could get more copies.

I couldn't conclude any tribute of a living legend without some reflections on past performances. I always thought Jumbo felt like a father looking over his sons in the early indoor meets, the Philadelphia Track Classic and the Millrose Games, when middle distance runners like Dick Buerkle and Eamonn Coghlan and Mark Belger and Don Paige would gather and dominate races. There was always one indoor meet where Jumbo would prep his young men for a world record. This year, the two-mile relay record fell and the distance medley relay was three-tenths off.

I'll never forget the 1979 NCAA Indoor Championships, the last national title Villanova has won. It was a classic comeback. Texas-at-El Paso had its usual huge lead after the first day. By midday Saturday, the margin had grown to 39 points and Jumbo's only comment was: "Look, we're getting bombed!"

Anthony Tufariello, fighting a headcold, won the 600. The distance medley won. Paige broke Belger's meet record in the 1,000, and the avalanche was on. UTEP fought back. Nyambui outdistanced Amos Korir and Sydney Maree in the mile. Villanova needed a miracle . . . and got one.

UTEP's two-mile relay had been disqualified for a foul and the Wildcats needed a mile relay victory to win the meet by one point. The relay huddled, then defeated Kansas by half a second. Jumbo canceled his fast getaway to accept the golden team trophy.

They were all so eventful. But I don't think Jumbo ever got a bigger thrill in the five years I've been here, than he got when Villanova defeated Maryland with Renaldo

(Continued on page 7)

Jumbo poses after victory in the Knights of Columbus meet as a Villanova College Junior in 1934.

Father Driscoll Remembers Jumbo

We will remember Jumbo Elliott as a highly professional man who made an unrivaled contribution to the glorious history of the most ancient of sports. His recognition was worldwide. Proclaimed at every level.

Villanova will be forever in Jumbo's debt for allowing us to share in that recognition. From Dublin, Ireland, to Durban, South Africa, they speak of Villanova with the respect and admiration reserved for champions.

As a result of his total dedication to the Villanova ideal — the development of the whole person — Jumbo Elliott's enormous contributions to the shaping of the university's image at home and abroad are incalculable.

Finally, in recent days, some have called his passing "the end of an era." Let us remind ourselves that we speak only of the Jumbo Elliott era, not the great tradition that he so laboriously created over nearly a half century. He would never forgive us if we let this precious legacy slip from us.

So, to use one of Jumbo's favorite expressions, we will "stop and smell the roses" while we ponder his departure from our midst and then get about the business of seeing to it that the sport of track and field at Villanova University continues to be the producer of world-class champions on and off the field.

We owe him that.

Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A.
President

'Boys' Bid Farewell To Jumbo Jim Elliott

Villanova, Villanova When we leave your shelt'ring walls, We shall leave an echo ringing Through your treasured halls We will leave an echo ringing In the silent night While our memories are singing Of the Blue and White.

By JOE CLARK
Phila. Daily News
Reprinted with Permission from The Philadelphia Daily News

Just about every university has a school song. The above is the middle of Villanova's. Actually, it's the Villanova Alma Mater Anthem. What you call it doesn't matter. The words do.

The Augustinian Seminary Choir sent the words bouncing off the fading oaken pews of the 98-year-old campus chapel shortly before noon yesterday following a Mass of Christian Burial for a man named Jumbo.

After 50 years, James Francis Elliott left the "sheltering walls" of Villanova University. And the legend — track record would be more appropriate — he left behind will surely leave an echo ringing through the school's treasured halls for decades to come.

Jumbo, a name his friends gave him while a kid growing up in West Philadelphia, died suddenly last Sunday of a heart attack in Juno Beach, Fla. His death was heard around the world: From Ireland to Canada, from Scotland to South Africa; from Puerto Rico to . . . to Villanova.

It was from these countries, and America, he brought to Villanova, during his almost 47 years as track coach, 28 track Olympians, 5 of whom won the gold medal. They also helped win 82 NCAA championships, 51 team championships . . .

But like the Rev. John M. Driscoll, Villanova's president, said in his eulogy: "His reward was not so much in championships, gold medals and shattered records as it was in devotion, admiration and gratitude."

That devotion, admiration and gratitude was returned beneath a sunny, cloudless sky yesterday outside St. Thomas of Villanova Chapel. It was returned by Jumbo's "boys" — both past and present.

The "past" was represented by names like Ron Delany, Don Bragg, Frank Budd, Eamonn Coghlan, Don Paige. The present was represented by 27 young current track members. It didn't matter that some knew Jumbo for almost half their lives, and others for only a short time, all in their own way expressed their admiration, their devotion, for Jumbo Elliott.

Ron Delany lost more than a friend when Elliott died. He lost a school, a country. "Jumbo was Villanova to me," said the 1956 gold-medal miler from Ireland. "You could say he was America to me."

"This sort of breaks my tie with America," the silver-haired Olympian said softly. "It's the end of a very close and special association with Villanova."

On the little finger of his left hand Delany wore a lasting memory of both Jumbo and Villanova: his 1958 class ring.

Frank Budd, once dubbed "The World's Fastest Human," walked up to Delany and shook hands. Budd's eyes were slightly watered. He, like many of the "old timers," returned to Villanova last September for the dedication of the Jumbo Elliott Track at Villanova Stadium. He also came back last year to speak to Jumbo's track team.

"All the other times were happy times," said Budd. "This is very sad." He looked around at the growing crowd. "This is a tribute to Jumbo," said Budd. "Some people are very busy. They had to change their work schedule, but there are people here from all over the world."

Budd excused himself to join his former teammates inside the chapel. In a few minutes a four-man Navy color guard walked slowly up the aisle, followed by 35 priests. Ten other priests were on the altar. Most of them were from the Villanova faculty.

More than 700 people jammed the chapel. Some of the crowd, including students loaded down with books, overflowed into the vestibule.

In his eulogy, Father Driscoll likened Elliott to St. Paul, excerpting one of the Biblical figure's message from Corinthians:

"Do you now know that in a race all the runners compete, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it. Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we are imperishable."

"It would appear that Jim Elliott and St. Paul have bequeathed us much the same thing in the example of their incessant striving for the right things for the right reasons," said Driscoll. "St. Paul's athlete-imagery might well have been used by Jumbo — 'So run that you may obtain the prize.' " The priest said many will remember "Jim Elliott as a highly professional man who made an unrivaled contribution to the glorious history of the most ancient of sports."

But, he added, glancing at Elliott's survivors — sons James, Thomas and Jeffrey and daughter Joy — Jumbo's professional achievements "were overshadowed by (his) worth as a man . . . a loving husband, a devoted father, a loyal friend."

Following the Mass, the bronze casket passed between a cordon made up of the 27 members of the current track team. Many of the young men bit their lower lip. A few wiped tears from their eyes.

The funeral procession of "well over 100 cars" proceeded to Calvary Cemetery in West Conshohocken where Jumbo Elliott was laid to rest at the top of a small hill.

His wife Catherine (Kay) Elliott was buried in the same grave Feb. 23.

When the last big game is over And the last roll call is heard When the oldest pedagogue Has had his final word We shall come to Alma Mater in our dreams again With a pray'r for Villanova And a sweet amen.

BY BROWNING ROSS
MEMBER, 1948-52 OLYMPIC TEAMS

Every college that's lucky like Villanova has a James F. (Jumbo) Elliott.

He's the dedicated kind who moulds character of one sort or another in the kids at his command. When it's over, for him, he has been "only" a college coach in the eyes of many highly paid professional coaches and athletes.

But the headlines are written on the hearts of those he has helped become men.

They went forth, his "boys," into all corners of the world. Yet they never forgot Jumbo and his teachings, his wisdom and his kindness.

I was lucky enough to be one of Jumbo's boys. One of his post WWII babies.

Jumbo and I were in the Navy in North Africa during the same period of time. Though we never met then, we did later when I came back to the States and went down to Little Creek, Virginia. While I was stationed there, I journeyed up to Madison Square Garden with the Navy team to run in the K. of C. (Knights of Columbus) Two Mile Run. I met Jumbo there and he offered me a scholarship to Villanova.

In that long ago time, "Jumbo" turned out more than his share of good collegiate athletes — Dixie Dunbar, John Di Carlo, Bill Hooper, Johnny Maher, Bob O'Sullivan, "Dutch" McCarthy, "Bucky" Colman, George Thompson, to name just a few.

This stalwart from Philadelphia's "shantytown" always seemed to be more interested in what we were going to do after we got out of school. He always talked grades, success and failure and he always liked his kids to be campus leaders, to get in this organization and that.

But this laughing, sometimes a bit temperamental, man's heart never left Villanova, for he stayed always with the kids who were coming along.

As I said, I was one of his beneficiaries. We weren't given shoes in those days and my prized second hand track shoes were stolen at a meet in New York. Those second hand shoes had been one whole size too large. But they represented a hope and an ambition.

It was a weekend of rain, although the sun was shining. But a few days later "Jumbo" called me into his office and gruffly handed me a box.

In it was a new pair of shiny black kangaroo leather spiked Spaulding track shoes. I felt ready to take on the world.

Long, long years ago.
But the memory lingers on. . .

I've seen the best . . . Dean Cromwell (1948 Olympic Coach (later head coach at USC); Emil Von Elling (former N.Y.U. track coach); Lawson Robertson (of Penn).

But the top banana for my money was Jumbo Elliott, and I, and mine, owe him a bunch.

Reprinted with Permission from The Philadelphia Daily News

Editor's Note

Serving the Villanova community for almost 50 years, Jumbo Elliott established himself as a legend while making the name Villanova synonomous with excellence.

Jumbo's passing made it quite evident that a tribute of great magnitude was in order. This special supplement to the Villanovan is intended not only to spotlight the tremendous accomplishments of this man, but also to make the Villanova community aware of just how special Jumbo really was.

No one could tell this story better than those who knew him best, his friends and associates. Therefore, we have used both personal accounts and previously published newspaper articles by leading sportswriters to tell the Jumbo Elliott story.

Our goal is not to salute the end of an era, but rather to celebrate the continuation of one. For the legend of Jumbo could never die. It will live as long as Villanova itself.

Finally, we would like to express our sincere appreciation to all those who took the time during such a hectic period to put together this tribute. We would also like to especially thank those whose financial and technical support made this all possible: the Villanova General Alumni Association, the Varsity Club, the Wildcat Club, Rev. Robert Martin, O.S.A., June Lytel, Rich Coleman, Dave Coskey, Vicky Parente, Beth White, Bill Clark, and Bob Courey.

The Villanovan

For Jumbo, the Ultimate Eulogy

Of the people I've come to know in more than 20 years of writing about sports and it's heroes, perhaps a dozen deserve to be described as great. Jumbo was one of them.

Beyond that, his testimonial is the men he taught. Perhaps no team in America has been so consistently populated by quality individuals, quality when they arrived at Villanova, better when they left. His loss is staggering to all of us who admired him, more so to those young people who might have had an opportunity to learn from him in the future. He is irreplaceable.

Tom Cushman
March 28, 1961

By TOM CUSHMAN
Phila. Daily News
Reprinted with Permission from The Philadelphia Daily News

By 7:30 last evening the line outside the funeral home in Upper Darby had taken on serpentine characteristics, winding from the doorway out across the lawn, then angling along the sidewalk that parallels West Chester Pike. It would remain that way well into the night, a display of regard for one whose life had seemed a marvelous definition of the word, "American." That fraternity, you realize, is no longer overpopulated.

It was the second such public outpouring for a local hero within the week. The funeral of mob leader Philip Testa, who had been blown apart by a bomb, was the front-page headline last Friday.

These words and any others written about the last rites for Jumbo Elliott will find a more secluded corner in this newspaper. We are not given to celebrating the worth of a man, only his news value. And, of course, the Phillies made a trade.

The story of Jumbo Elliott really needs no embellishment beyond what was available last night in Upper Darby. Joining the line, the first two faces I recognized were those of Mark Belger and Ken Schappert. Eammon Coghlan, who had returned to Ireland only last Friday but made a U-turn when the news of Jumbo's death crossed the Atlantic, was behind us, waiting in the chilled March air.

The nucleus of an Olympic team was inside. Marty Liquori, Don Paige, Tim Dale, Tiny Kane, Ron Delany, Dick Buerkle . . .

"The first time I met Jumbo," Buerkle recalled, "I was a 17-year-old kid from Rochester, N.Y., who phoned and asked to see him, not really knowing who he was or that he had tons of guys who could run 4:30."

There were a half-dozen four-minute milers inside the funeral home at the same hour last night, Dick Buerkle being one of them. His 3:54.9 was once the world indoor record.

Dave Coskey Photo

Elliott at NCAA Indoor Championships in Detroit last year.

"But the thing I remember most about Jumbo was that first meeting," Buerkle said. "It was the most important interchange we ever had, because there was something about him that drew me to Villanova. I think it was his warmth. . ."

The news reached Bloomington, Ind., last Sunday afternoon. I had just watched St. Joe's lose the good battle in the finals of the Mideast Regional, and was preparing to put together a column about the impish Isiah Thomas, the Magic Johnson of 1981. Nothing seemed very important after I learned that Jumbo had died somewhere in Florida.

The reasons are too complex to be documented in a single column. There were days, early in our relationship, when I was uneasy about him. We screamed at each other more than once. We had civil discussions over beers at an hour when the coach should have been in bed, even though some of his athletes probably weren't.

Jumbo always said he didn't worry about what the kids did after they left him. He would find out all he needed to know the next day when he read his stopwatch.

I sat next to him on a flight to Washington the day after Martin Luther King was assassinated. Not a word passed between us as the plane slipped along a glide-path that carried us directly over the area of the city that was being charcoaled. But we talked about it later and I began to understand the depth of his feeling for his black athletes.

I sat across from him at a lounge in Eugene, Ore., the day he fell in the McKenzie River. Overlooking the fact that he had nearly drowned several hours before, Jumbo demanded that I relay a physical challenge to Jim Tuppeny, the Penn coach, who had just signed a distance runner Jumbo had assumed was already in his stable.

"How can he live with himself after doing this to me?" asked Jumbo, who had managed to survive following an elaborate attempt to pirate the same youngster from Tuppeny several weeks earlier.

I left my coat in a Detroit restaurant one night years ago, an oversight that was not noticed until the next day. "Take mine," Jumbo kept saying. "I have another one just like it at home."

Only those close to him have any idea of the agony endured by Jumbo Elliott during the lengthy illness of his wife, Kay, who died less than a month before he did. "I can't remember the last time I've slept soundly," he told me last fall.

His problem was caring. For Kay, for his children, for his athletes, for everything he did. He made a fortune in the heavy equipment industry, but that was business and he talked about it only when prodded. His pleasure was his track team.

I doubt that there has been another group as consistently outstanding as Villanova's runners have been over the last 25 years. I base this opinion not on athletic performance, although that has been spectacular, but on the quality of the individuals who have passed through the program and into society. If Jumbo had had more scholarships, both the U.S. and Ireland would be in better shape.

Thus, the inevitable question of what happens now hung uneasily in the air at the viewing last night. Villanova, considered a lightweight in football, a light-heavyweight in basketball, is one of the nation's most admired athletic institutions overseas. In lands where they think soccer is football and basketball is nonsense, Villanova and track are synonomous.

The Elliott family seems anxious that the tradition perpetuate. Jim Elliott Jr. said last night that he plans to establish a fund in his father's name that will help Villanova maintain the sport at the level to which it is accustomed.

Jack Pyrah, Jumbo's assistant for 15 years, accompanied the current squad members through a private viewing. "Mainly, what I hear from the kids is their concern not to let things slip," Pyrah said. "They really want to do well at the Penn Relays. They know how much that meet meant to him."

Since the call came Sunday, it has been a week when even words have tasted like sawdust. But to visit again last night with the men coached by Jumbo Elliott was to experience the ultimate eulogy.

The shame of it is that he will leave us with less fanfare than did Philip Testa, a phenomenon caused by the fact that people and the media either have not learned that there is a difference between big men and great men, or don't care.

Jumbo Elliott, the Athlete

By REV. WILLIAM CARNEY O.S.A.

Jim Elliott's death sent me sorrowfully back in memory and memory led me to year books. I started with the 1932 Belle Aire where I found the picture of the freshman track team and in it the skinny, shy-looking "Jumbo."

Jumbo in his 1936 college graduation photograph.

That trip into history reminded me of two things: the freshman relay team of that year inaugurated Villanova team success at the relays by winning the freshman title, a tradition begun by Jumbo and carried on so notably by his pupils ever since; and the few external signs he showed of the great he was to become.

He was match-stick thin; his talent, obvious but undeveloped; a late-bloomer in high school, he ran everything from the hundred through the two-twenty to the quarter-mile whenever he was needed. But he ran everything with fierce enthusiasm, and the clear indication of the beautiful glide that was to become his trade-mark as a premier collegiate half-miler.

I think that development resulting from talent and dedication was the key to Jim as a runner and a coach. It stemmed from his unwillingness to settle for mediocrity, and his personal knowledge of what it took to be a winner and a member of a team.

On his freshman team, he was at best second or third. One of his classmates on sheer talent was on the verge of being world class. However, the classmate faded, seemingly unwilling to pay the price. Jim went on to stun the track world, when as a senior, he won the prestigious Princeton Invitational half-mile, beating Charlie Hornsbostel of Indiana, considered the class of college half-milers. To read pre-race stories one would think Jim's invitation was an afterthought. Post-race, the track buffs knew Jim was for real. Only physical ailments kept him from further glory in the 1936 Olympics.

Others no doubt will remember other things about Jim; to me he epitomized the drive for excellence and the unselfishness he asked of others. At least part of his success as a coach came from the fact that no one runner could present him with a problem that he himself had not already faced and solved; a rare gift in a rare man.

Jules Schick Studio

Outstanding miler and Olympic champion Ron Delany accepts IC4A championship cup with Jumbo in May 1958.

Jumbo Was A "Coach for Life"

By THEODORE J. BERRY M.D.

At 9:30 a.m. Sunday, March 22, my oldest and dearest friend Jumbo, the most successful track coach of all time, died quietly in bed.

His arms were folded over the sports pages spread across his chest, as if he planned to come back to it later — after a short nap. Instead, he joined his wife, Kay, who had given up a long battle with cancer four weeks before.

The news of his passing was shocking. Not surprising, but a shock. As his personal physician, I knew how such a thing could happen to Jumbo — but the knowledge did nothing to soften the blow.

He was much more than a track coach. He was a pied piper, a living legend who touched the lives of young men around the world. He was a "coach for life" — taught them something they could use long after their athletic skills had passed with time. He showed them by his example, the long-range value of quality performance in the bigger life after games.

He was a beloved teacher who stressed the more important objectives — running was always secondary to the education that would serve them through life. His athletes discovered his subtle wisdom after a time — and that is how they remember him.

Without knowing how his coaching "method" actually worked, his boys emulated their teacher's rise from "rags to riches" and followed the role model he set for them. As they matured, only then did Elliott's subtle lessons gel — and their admiration grew.

When he slept away in his Florida apartment the world asked the same question that so many outsiders had raised over the years: what was so great about this man? Why did more than three thousand mourners file past his almost frail 67 year-old body, to say goodbye to the giant who had changed the lives of so many men . . . and made them better. Why so many?

Why should any man merit such acclaim and how did he work his special magic and exert such influence on so many people in sports and business? Staff writers from out-of-town newspapers asked those questions. They knew of his election to the Track Hall of Fame, and his hundreds of honors and awards and track championships and that he was named "The Coach of the Century."

But Jumbo's greatest achievements don't show in the record books. How could Jumbo demand so much from his athletes and earn their respect and convince them to place scholastics and gentlemanly behavior above supremacy in athletics — and achieve both?

Right through the 1950's and 1960's, when colleges felt the growing pains of social consciousness, Jumbo's boys followed his rule: "Don't forget the coat and tie, Champ. Remember, people are looking at you, and you want to look your best. You are the best, you're Villanova men and don't forget it."

And his "method" works. Look at all the successes of his former athletes. They followed his own Horatio Alger scenario and in the process, learned the difference between class and classy.

Jumbo Elliott was class. And we'll miss him.

He was a "coach for life" — taught them something they could use long after their athletic skills had passed with time. He showed them by his example, the long - range value of quality performance in the bigger life after games.

Dr. Ted Berry and his close friend Jumbo Elliott vacationing in Florida just days before Elliott's death.
courtesy of T. Berry

An Open Letter to Jumbo's Daughter

Dear Joy,

Please excuse my presumption in writing to you in this fashion, but a personal letter may help me to avoid using too many true but trite phrases in writing about your father. "Jumbo" was all of those things that everyone said he was. It is also true that his death hurt you, your family and the entire Villanova Community. You and I are not close friends, Joy, I know your husband, Gary, somewhat better, although you were both students of mine. Yet, I would like to add some personal thoughts about your father.

Your Dad and I had known each other for a dozen years. We have laughed and cried together, we have bitched and bulled our way over a few brews at Jerky's and elsewhere. Yet, I'm not sure he ever remembered my name. In person, it was always "Prof." It was a term that meant something to Jumbo. It was a term of respect. He had great respect for the faculty at Villanova whether we deserved it or not. He made sure that his men shared that respect for their school and for their "Profs."

Some of us in academia are slow learners, Joy. We don't always see the obvious. In trying to write about your dad, I suddenly realized that if every there was an example of what a university professor is or ought to be, it was your dad.

The purpose of education is not in the final analysis to fill one's mind with data, but to achieve wisdom. The only knowledge worth professing is the knowledge of how to be a good person (the rest is frosting on the cake.) The man who did that better than anyone else was your dad. He could do it, of course, because he was able to love. He loved his family, Villanova, and his students. He gave unreservedly to all of us and in our own ways we, his students, returned that love to him.

Professors are often pleased when students do well in their class; but, when alumni tell us that we have had meaningful impact on their lives that is when we take an honest pride in our profession.

Joy, I am a damn good professor but I can't hold a candle to your dad. To those who doubt the validity of athletics as an integral part of higher education, to those who think coaches are not professors, I recommend reflecting on your dad's life.

Your dad personified the very best qualities of higher education. I think he exemplified the very things that make Villanova University the finest in the land. I know that he will be missed by all of us. He was the finest professor on the faculty.

Therefore, Joy, with your indulgence and that of your family, I wish to thank your dad for all that he taught us. Good bye, Prof, and God bless.

Restfully,
Dan Regan

It won't be the same

By FRANK DOLSON
Reprinted with Permission from The Philadelphia Inquirer

There'll be another Penn Relay Carnival next month.

But it won't be the same.

There'll be another outdoor IC4A track and field championship, another National Collegiate championship.

They won't be the same, either.

Jumbo Elliott won't be there.

It's hard to imagine a Penn Relay Carnival without him. Half a century ago he anchored Villanova's freshman mile relay team to victory at Franklin Field. A quarter of a century ago he coached the university to its first "Relay Championship of America." Last year he coached Villanova to its 72d major Penn Relays' title . . . and its 73d . . . and its 74th . . . and its 75th.

In a very real sense, Jumbo Elliott was the Penn Relays. In every sense, he was Villanova track.

The numbers tell only part of the story — an impressive part, to be sure, but only a part.

They tell us that he coached 13 Villanova teams to outdoor IC4A championships, 17 to indoor IC4A championships, nine to IC4A cross-country championships.

They tell us that he coached eight Villanova teams to NCAA championships.

They tell us that he coached 21 Olympic athletes, five of whom — Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins, Don Bragg, Paul Drayton and Larry James — won gold medals.

But you can't capture Jumbo Elliott with numbers. He was a unique person, an original and, yes, a character. Jim Tuppeny, the director of the Penn Relays and a longtime Elliott assistant at Villanova, used that word yesterday in talking about his old friend. He used it lovingly.

When Tuppeny was a candidate for the head coaching job at Penn, Elliott was ready to do anything to help. When Tuppeny got the job, Jumbo was there to offer advice. "He told me, 'never be a phony'," Tuppeny recalled. "He said, 'Always be yourself so people know who you are'."

Jumbo Elliott practiced what he preached.

He had a rough, tough exterior, at times he could play the part of a bully — ask the meet directors or the officials who incurred his wrath in days gone by — but he cared about the kids who competed for him as too few coaches care . . . and he kept caring long after they quit competing. If this Villanova legend was a wildcat on the outside, he was a pussycat on the inside.

Of all the great things that happened to Jumbo in his coaching career, surely the greatest occurred last fall when the men who had run for him and jumped for him and won all those championships for him returned to Villanova to honor him.

What a tragedy it would have been if they had decided to wait another year.

But they didn't wait. They came by the dozens — from New York and Boston and Cleveland and Chicago and Dublin and San Juan. Ron Delany, his first Olympic champion, the brightest of all Jumbo's stars, was there. So were Frank Budd, Paul Drayton, Don Bragg, Noel Carroll, Tom Sullivan, Rolando Cruz, Eamonn Coghlan, and a many more.

It was a who's who of track, all there to honor the rough, tough guy with the heart of gold. Surely, it was Jumbo's proudest moment.

"He was really concerned about the kids after they left Villanova," Tuppeny was saying yesterday.

The kids knew it, and on that unforgettable weekend last fall they showed Jumbo how much they cared about him.

I've seen Jumbo on many memorable occasions. I've seen him on days when Villanova ran wild at the Penn Relays, when his teams pulled out close IC4A battles, when his kids made Olympic teams. He had looked happy then, but never, never happy as he looked at that reunion.

I doubt if any college coach, in any sport, ever had a greater Last Hurrah than Jumbo Elliott.

"Remember John Buckley?" Drayton said yesterday, referring to a former Villanova long jumper who had returned to participate in Jumbo's big day. "I remember him saying, 'Isn't this great for Jumbo. All his boys right here. If he dies now, he can go straight to heaven."

None of Elliott's former stars had been more touched by that get-together than Drayton. But then, he always had a very special place in his heart for Jumbo.

"I'm from a broken home," he said, "and I guess most kids from broken homes have father images. . ."

Jumbo Elliott, a white man from the Main Line, became that father image for Drayton, a black kid from a broken home in Cleveland.

"He was a very dear person," Drayton said. "He knew his men. He knew how to treat Frank (Budd). He knew how to treat me. He knew how to treat each one of us. I think some other coaches may have been better equipped technically, but they couldn't get down in your soul like Jumbo.

On of Drayton's most vivid memories involves a day he ran poorly in the Queens Iona Relays, just one week before the Penn Relays.

"I had been overtrained," the sprinter said. "I had worked too hard, and I ran a horrible race. Some coaches would have

(Continued on page 5

Paige Recalls "Mr. Elliott"

By DON PAIGE '80

I didn't call him coach. I didn't call him Jumbo. I called him Mr. Elliott. I called him that because that's the way it was and that was the only way I could show my respect for him. He was always more than a coach to me, he was my advisor. He never really told me what to do but always asked, "What should we do today champ?"

He was like a second father to me. He was concerned about the total person; it was Don Paige the individual that he worried about. Sure he wanted me to come to Villanova and run but it was a few years after you were there and you really got to know Mr. Elliott that you truly found out what he was all about.

Every time I saw him he would ask me, "How's your weight doing and how is school going?" Very rarely did he ask me about my running because he knew that was my job and that I would take care of that. It was the academic and social aspects of my life, along with athletics, that he wanted to develop.

What follows is a typical example that shows what I mean. All the guys on the team were told to meet in the Track Office at 3 p.m. Mr. Elliott was sitting behind his desk as usual and said hello to everyone as they came in. The runners kept on talking as Mr. Elliott sat there content to listen to us ramble on. After about ten minutes we began to realize that he was waiting for us to shut-up. It became so quiet in his office that you could hear the coaches talking in the surrounding offices. Now it was his turn, I guess, and he made us wait for about ten minutes.

At that point he had us all wondering what was going on. Most of us figured he was going to talk about the coming season and our first meet that weekend. All of a sudden he said, "The next time someone asks you a question, don't say yeah; say yes or yes sir. And also, people will think a lot more of you if you have a smile on your face, so when you are out there in the real world, smile, just smile. That's all, get out." That was my first so-called track meeting with Mr. Elliott. Five years later, I finally realized what he meant with all those talks he gave us. Boy, am I going to miss him. I loved that great man.

Jumbo accepts award from Philadelphia sports writers for outstanding achievement this January.
Dave Coskey Photo

Elliott Made Imprint On James

By DAVE BONTEMPO
Press Sports Writer

Reprinted from The Atlantic City Press, March 24, 1981

When legends are discussed, words fall short. Such people instill deep feelings among their admirers — feelings that linger when superlatives dissolve.

Larry James twists somewhere between admiration and shock today. The Stockton State College Athletic Director just had a piece of his present switched to the past. Jumbo Elliott, the father-figure Villanova University track coach for 46 years, died Sunday of a heart attack. He was James' coach from 1966-'70, one foundation to James' 440-yard silver medal in the 1968 Olympics.

James had company. Elliott coached 20 other Olympic performers. Former Stockton Athletic Director Don Bragg, Eamonn Coghlan, Marty Liquori, Frank Budd, Ron Delaney and Don Page set world outdoor marks. Forty-four others set indoor records.

Many Villanova athletes took a piece of Elliott's wisdom with them. Time never caught up on him. Elliott was 67 going on even know it. You had to be regimented. Live like a clock. He had a way about him where it looked like you were doing something on your own, but all the time he was doing it."

That thought crystallized for the Olympians last year. They returned to Villanova for a reunion with Elliott. On that occasion, insiders contend, Elliott had never been so happy.

"It was a beautiful thing," James said, "something that should have been done years ago. He WAS Villanova. It meant a lot there to put on the shirt. He instilled a lot of pride and you ran much harder. Had it not been for Jumbo Elliott, I never would have been connected with Villanova."

Elliott lured James from White Plains High School, considered him prize property and there the fanfare ended. By his sophomore year, James was in a leadership position with the sprinters.

Elliott put him in 600-yard races and other situations James didn't prefer. Yet to excel at Villanova, one became an Elliott disciple.

"He was strictly business," James said, "it seems like he would kiss 'em and kick 'em. It always kept the guys off guard. He comes up and congratulates you today, but you know he might be back tomorrow yelling at you.

"At the time, he meant everything to me. Over the years, he meant a lot more. A lot of the things he taught, I didn't understand fully at the time. Once I got out of Villanova, I saw that what he was saying was true."

Back then, theories weren't as simple to accept. They combated peer pressure and the thoughts one has at age 19 of conquering the world. Elliott did not distribute ego trips.

"It was very difficult to communicate with him sometimes," James said. "Jumbo knows all, Jumbo is king. But eventually, he was like the master, the guru. You listen. By talking, you rob yourself of a teaching experience. Listen, and you can absorb the teachings and utilize them later."

Because of Elliott, James kept contact with the university. As Stockton track coach, he crossed Elliott's path five or six times a year. Whenever Elliott wanted an athlete James could not possibly lure, James spoke on Villanova's behalf.,

"Once you get out," said James, "you realize that you don't accept the defeats. You work harder, even though you have your ups and downs. He stressed discipline. regulating your life, making things so routine they become a part of you. It helps you to be able to anticipate, to keep up, and to keep on."

Verbally, speaking, on and on. Words aren't enough.

Elliott's death leaves giant void

(Continued from page 4)

made me work even harder the next week with the Penn Relays coming up. Jumbo put an arm around my shoulder. 'How do you feel?' he said. 'Tired,' I told him. 'OK,' he said, 'rest'."

Drayton rested, then helped Elliott boost his total of Penn Relays' victories.

"I never would have forgiven myself if I hadn't come back (for the reunion last fall)," Drayton was saying yesterday. "That was so beautiful. What a feeling for a guy to have. Here, he's turned out some of the greatest athletes in the world, and they all come back to pay their respects. He had to feel like a king.

"I remember, I said, 'How're you doing, Jumbo?' and he said, 'You're the only black guy I know who runs the quarter mile like an Irishman'."

Ah, the Irishmen. Jumbo Elliott did so much for them. And they did so much for him. They would argue at times. They would upset him occasionally, the way sons upset fathers; but always there was an underlying warmth and affection.

Two weeks ago Noel Carroll, one of Ireland's — and Villanova's — great halfmilers, wrote a long letter to Elliott expressing some of his feelings for him. Elliott must have been especially touched to read that letter because he and Carroll had had their share of disagreements.

Carroll was among those who returned to Villanova for last fall's reunion. "I found the trip a tremendous emotional occasion," he said last night from his home in Ireland. "And that, for me, is something because I'm not the sentimental type.

"I know this much, there are a lot of sad people in Ireland because of this. It's the end of an era. To the Irish, Jumbo epitomized opportunity . . . I think there are a lot of guys around Dublin who are better off for Jumbo."

For Carroll, for many of Elliott's former runners and longtime friends, it was difficult yesterday to accept the fact that he was gone.

"People like Jumbo," Carroll said, "you think of them as an institution. You think of Villanova and the track team and Jumbo being all one.

"He and I had a sort of love-hate relationship. We had a begrudging admiration for one another."

And that begrudging admiration turned into genuine affection.

"I was always amused more than anything at the way he always claimed the Irish broke his heart (when the lads did something to upset him)," Carroll said.

"He had this fatherly feeling for us. Every one of us caused him more headaches, I think, than the one before. Jumbo had this capacity to complain about us, and at the same time he had more feeling for us, I think, than for any other athletes. He moaned about us, but in the way a father would moan about his wayward sons."

Elliott loved them. All of them. And especially he loved Ron Delany. It's unlikely that anyone took yesterday's news harder than Delany did.

"I said to Joan (his wife), 'I owe Jumbo so much'," Delany said from his Dublin home. "By having gone to Villanova, by having been coached by Jumbo, by winning the Olympics (the 1,500 meters in Melbourne in 1956), my life was completely changed. When I think of the man I think of so many things. Practically the first time he ever saw me run — I came to Villanova as a halfmiler — he said, 'You'll make a great miler.' He immediately put his finger on what my talent way.

"Jumbo was always so extraordinarily kind to me, so personal. He'd bring me to his home. A gang of us would to go his house for dinner. . ."

Elliott was a father figure to all of them — the Draytons and the Delanys, the sprinters and the milers, the blacks and the whites.

"Every time I went to the States, first thing I did was get on the phone and call Jumbo," Delany said.

Their friendship endured to the very end. Immediately after last fall's reunion at Villanova, Elliott gave Delany the keys to his condominium in Florida so Delany and his wife could have a vacation there. It was the rule, not the exception. "He did that sort of thing very quietly," Delany said. "Any time I was in Florida Jumbo would say, 'Stay in my house, use my car. . .'"

That was Elliott. For all the bluster, for all the times he'd holler and yell and get upset, he remained warm and generous to his "kids," even after hi "kids" became men. He never forgot them, and so it was only fitting that they never forgot him.

"Eamonn (Coghlan) was absolutely dumbstruck by it (Elliott's death)," Carroll said. "He was completely shattered by it."

They all were, really. "You never think in terms of a fellow like Jumbo passing on," Carroll said. "It takes quite a while to sink in."

Jumbo Elliott was, after all, an important part of their lives.

Ron Delany could only wonder last night how he would feel on his next trip to the States when he instinctively reached for the telephone to call Elliott and suddenly realized that it wouldn't be the same, that corner up there. . .

It will seem strange not to see him flitting in and out of the old locker room in the northwest corner of Franklin Field, where the Delanys, the Draytons, the Budds dressed in years past, and where Villanova's Penn Relay Carnival athletes of the present continue to dress.

That will always be Jumbo's corner of Franklin Field. Jumbo's locker room, Jumbo's Carnival.

(Continued on page 6)

"I'm kind of stunned, really," James said last night. "I thought he would live forever. Coaches always wondered when he was going to retire. I thought he would never retire, that he would die first. He didn't retire."

Funeral services are today for Elliott, who coached 21 Olympic medalists. Thousands are expected to pay final homage to the brainchild of Villanova's national success stories. He either cajoled or browbeat athletes into fine condition. Otherwise, his philosophies dug beneath the asphalt.

"He took track and raised it to the real world," James said. "He was interested in everyone more than an athlete, as a person. If you weren't doing good in academics, he would have tutors on your back.

"He had a hand in everything, you didn't

Thoughts on Jumbo

James Francis "Jumbo" Elliott was track coach at Villanova University for 46 years. That in itself is a remarkable feat these days. But he was also a superb track coach who brought dozens of athletes to greatness, 28 of them to Olympic competition. He was much more than that too.

In the words of Marty Liquori, the fine middle-distance runner Jumbo Elliott coached, he was something greater: "In this age of spurious copies, he is an original, guaranteed authentic. His method is a mixed bag, an eclectic blend of showmanship, salesmanship, Irish wit, Irish blarney, parental care, parental discipline, instinct and knowledge. His singular ability is, in contrast, quite simple; he inspires confidence . . . he sells his system. He knows how to handle people . . . you never doubt Jumbo."

He inspired generations of athletes and gave this entire city a look at excellence. There aren't very many great men. Jumbo Elliott was one.

John Deegan, O.S.A.

I have known "Jumbo" Elliott for some ten (10) years, as Coach and as a loyal son of Villanova. During the past few years, I have been privileged to share with him concerns and dreams about Villanova and our students. Mr. Elliott was always a kind and sensitive person. I was always impressed by the depth of his dedication to Villanova and to the Augustinians. He reminded me time and again of the great thing we had going here at Villanova. He never counted the time nor the cost in his service to Villanova. Jumbo was a family man. He loved his wife and family very much. I know that his wife's illness pained him very much. Their love for one another was very deep. Jumbo's family was also his athletes. He taught them the lessons a father would teach. He loved them with a love only a father knows. The sense of St. Paul's words are indeed true for Jim Elliott: He has run the race, finished the course — the crown is rightfully his.

Ron Delany, Olympic Gold Medalist

All his great acheivements aside, I wish to recognize several faces of Jumbo that many people may not know. Many do not realize the impact Jumbo had on Irish sports. His contributions to athletics in Ireland stretches back over thirty years starting with John Joe Baroy, Cummin Clancy, and Jimmy Reardon. More recently the Coghlans, and Hartnetts. His impact was so great that his death was the major stories in Irish newspapers. Last evening Ireland (March 26) held a mass for him in Dublin attended by Jim Tunney, minister of sports. He kept Ireland at the forefront of middle distance running. I'm most indebted to him for the qualities he instilled upon me outside of sport. Especially that of friendship. Over the years differences in age decrease. Since I left Villanova in 1959 I have had Jumbo as my friend. A trip back to the states always included a visit with Jumbo. More than friendship he demanded immense honesty. He also stressed modesty and the ability to keep everything you do in perspective. I have nothing except fond memories of Jumbo. Perhaps the best include our Penn Relays victory over Oxford. He wanted it so badly. We often trained only for the Penn Relays for weeks at a time, they meant very much to him. I will miss him a great deal.

Frank Sevigne, Track Coach Univ. of Nebraska

I've known Jumbo Elliott for 33 years very closely. He was my closest friend! He was tops — "a maker of champions" but a true champion himself in every sense of the word. The good Lord put many great men on this earth but none finer than James F. Elliott. He had all the wonderful qualities that touched people that knew him and made them a better person. Knowing him and being his friend, I'll cherish every moment, the rest of my life. A great man.

Jake Nevin, Villanova trainer of 51 yrs.

I remember back to his freshman year here, how he helped both his teammates and himself. He was a champion in every sense of the word. Up at The Garden he used to ask me how I liked the meet, this was while I was in the lockeroom taping all night, I told him how the hell can I see it in here. Then he said, Well Jake, I'll just get a camera and take some pictures for you. He was always joking too, On the trip to Russia he had me signing autographs because he told them that I was Mickey Rooney. I especially remember the time Charlie Jenkins was late for a race coming from class. He didn't have time to use the lockeroom so we all gathered around him while he got changed in the circle. Jumbo walked up to me and said, "Jake, what the hell good are you doing, they can see right over you." Ah, I have many memories and I'll always miss him.

Frank Finisdore, Villanova maintenance dept.

I used to work with Jumbo all the time. We would always work on the track together. The day before a big meet he'd come from where ever he was and we'd work maybe 10, 12 hours lining the track. He'd always say "If we get this done, it'll be a miracle." but we always did. During the winter when it snowed he'd always holler "Frank, get that damn snow off my wooden track so my boys can work out." He helped with that too. He was tough, but had a heart of gold.

Howard Schmertz, Meet Director The Millrose Games

Jumbo Elliott was the finest coach in the history of track and field. He was also a great person. To paraphrase Will Rogers, I never met a man who didn't like Jumbo Elliott.

The popularity of track and field in the East, especially the indoor version of the sport, is due in good measure to the achievements of Villanova undergraduates and alumni coached and motivated by Jumbo Elliott. On a personal note, in modern times the success of the Wanamaker Millrose Games has been intertwined with the success of Villanova Track.

From 1935, when as a Villanova undergraduate he pushed Chuck Hornbostel to a world indoor record in the Millrose 600, to the 1981 Games when his athletes won four events, Jumbo Elliott was a potent force in the Millrose Games. Starting in 1943 when Villanova won the fastest mile relay and in 1948 when George Guida won the Millrose "600," Villanova undergraduates and alumni won 56 major Millrose events — 39 individual and 17 relay titles — in world-class competition. An even more astounding statistic — Elliott-coached athletes have won the prestigious Wanamaker Mile 14 times since Fred Dwyer's first victory in 1953.

The track world has been blessed by the presence of James Francis Elliott for almost a half-century. Jumbo will be sorely missed.

Ed Geisz, Villanova swimming coach

I attribute any success my swim teams have had over the years to what Jumbo taught me. He taught me that competition should be a privilege but most important education comes first and athletics second. I'll miss him and this place will never be the same without him.

Marty Liquori, outstanding middle distance ace

Jumbo's genius was the way he handled situations quickly, authoritatively — and usually right. Because of his action everyone had faith in his leadership.

Elliott — Final Tributes

(Continued from page 5)

It no longer really matters that this most successful of Eastern track coaches never got to coach a U.S. Olympic team; if anything it's to his credit that he refused to play the political games necessary to get the job.

As so many of his former athletes put it, an era has passed. Jumbo Elliott was more than a college track coach, more than a substitute father for a remarkable group of blacks and whites, Americans and Irish and even an Englishman or two. He was a personality, a character, a warm, generous, bigger-than-life figure who, by the very strength of his personality, made track and field a major sport at the school he loved and made a lot of very talented young men better off for having gone there.

Only two weeks ago Elliott learned that he had been elected to the National Track and Field Hall of Fame in Charleston, W. Va. Rather than keep it a secret, Jim Tuppeny spilled the beans to his old friend. Today, Tuppeny is thankful that he did.

Jumbo Elliott belongs in a hall of fame. His sport won't be the same without him.

A Poetic Tribute

JUMBO'S TRIBUTE
By DON BRAGG
Olympic Gold Medalist

Like Socrates and Sophist with philosophic difference
Students like Plato declared him their preference.

His Pegasus ride with steads of speed
Could sail by Mercury and into the lead.

Spartan warriors trained by him
Denied defeat for were taught to win.

Chariots pulled by horses four
Won their race, but were asked for more.

Their Ulysses trek of distant run
Had value not, unless they won.

Herculean feats performed by his men
Provided the challenge to do them again.

He taught them well to fight alone
And at battles end, he'd take them hom

But suddenly our legion general pass away.

Sound the trumpets throughout the sk
From plains of Marathon to Olympus Hi

And leap aside you Grecian Gods of ma
Á Zeus does come to compete with a

On the walls of history where mart statues stand
Should be chiseled the face this stoic men.

March, 19

—Jumbo at the Penn Relays—

By HERB HARTNETT '64
Penn Sports Information Director

Jumbo Elliott grew up blocks away from the biggest track meet in the world, the Penn Relays. Like the Army-Navy game, it remains a Philadelphia event which is also a national sports tradition. The Penn Relays was in its third decade when Elliott sold programs there, and in its fourth decade when he ran for West Catholic and Villanova. Beyond his reach, and that of his Villanova teammates, was the coveted Championship of America relay victory. There are only eight men's races important enough to earn that title at Penn, and Villanova track took a back seat on the last weekend of April every year in the pursuit of the Penn Relay watch awarded to the championship victors.

Like the overnight success who has in fact labored long and hard to be "discovered," Elliott came to coach Olympians and still couldn't win a championship race; he had individual winners in distance races and the freshman relays, but the big win alluded him. Villanova was an odd choice to rule the oldest relays in the world to begin the decade of the 1950's: Big 10 schools and traditional Eastern powers like Seton Hall, Fordham, and Manhattan, yes; Villanova, no.

It must have frustrated Elliott, the supreme competitor and Philadelphia native, to encounter shutouts at Penn. The big winner in business excellance, super salesman, and superior coach. The frustration probably made him even more determined.

There is no copy in the Penn Relays files of a picture of Villanova's initial win in 1955. James Moran, Warner Heitmann, Gene Maliff, and Charles Jenkins turned a 3:26.3 sprint medley time into the first Championship of America victory. Later that day, Villanova won the first of eleven 4 x 400 championships. Jenkins anchored and the track world did not shake in fear because of the performance; after all, Manhattan won three times that year.

Those two wins ushered in the most important era in Villanova track history. The following year, Villanova won three championship relays and unleashed the freshman wonder Ron Delansey. At Melbourne in the Olympics that summer, Jenkins won the 400 meter gold, Delaney the 1500 meter race. Delaney became a celebrity of the first order New York indoor track and field success in the mile made national sports stars in those days.

Villanova won three Penn Relays for the second year in 1957, and the team won the NCAA title. Villanova won three Championship of America races in 1958, and now Olympians like Philip Reavis and Don Bragg had entered the Elliott camp.

There was now a winning rhythmn to Villanova's track season, a rhythmn that many years later would include other Wildcat sports; but when Elliott drove his forces into the big time, he was alone. The indoor season; a lot of track now extinct along the East Coast; he finished the year by winning the IC A's and challenging at the NCAA's team championship and individual glory at the NCAAs.

The dark blue trunks appeared everywhere, but especially at the Penn Relays. It must be understood that no one — not even the host school with its Olympic tradition (Penn is the only school to have an athlete at every Olympiad save Moscow since 1900) — managed to dominate this meet. The Carnival is not only the biggest meet in the world, but among the most important. Multiple winners are rare. Only two times in the first 68 years could any team win as many as four championships — Pitt in 1939 and Michigan in 1945.

Villanova joined that elite 1st in 1965. In 1968, it became the first school to win five titles. Five were won in 1969, 1970, and 1978, marks which may never be equalled. And always there was the Penn Relay director importing foreign power; be it Abilene Christian, Rice, Texas-El Paso, or Arizono — to challenge Villanova. One year Elliott would grouse about the lack of competition and a possible move to another meet because talent wasn't imported; the next year he was complaining that the competition was too tough, that relay director Jim Tuppeny, his former assistant, had done him in.

This is how completely he dominated the Penn Relays: Penn, with its 54 wins in championship races, led its own carnival through six decades. Since Elliott's hordes hit Franklin Field, Villanova has accumulated 75 titles. Villanova has won the distance medley relay at Penn every year since 1966. To say that this is unusual is an understatement.

Awards? One of the proudest awards any athletic director can boast is the Penn relay plaque. Three feet acres, with an R. Kait McKenzie rendering of school founder Benjamin Franklin congratulating the victor is a featured fixture around U.S. trophy rooms. At Villanova, there is not enough room to display all the hardware unless a wing of the Connelly Center was devoted to it. In fact, gathering the 75 plaques could be a problem involving massive air express fees from Ireland, where more than one resides.

Watches? Only three athletics have won 10 Championship of America watches. They are all Villanovans. Seven different Villanova runners have won six, two have won seven, and four have won eight watches. Eammon Coughlin is one of the two athletes in the history of the Carnival to win nine.

Elliott indeed took Villanova out of the Penn Relays back seat.

Perched in "His Section" AA, Jumbo watches the Wildcats dominate the Penn relays.

Elliott's Record

It might be impossible to catalogue all of the achievements of Jumbo Elliott's 46 years as track coach at Villanova. These are some of the major ones:

- Twenty-one of Elliott's athletes have competed in the Olympic Games. They are sprinters George Guida, Charlie Jenkins, Frank Budd, Paul Drayton, Larry James and Glenn Bogue; middle-distance runners Ron Delany, Noel Carroll, Marty Liquori, Frank Murphy, and Eamonn Coghlan; distance runners Browning Ross, Alex Breckenridge, Vic Zwolak, John Hartnett, Donal Walsh and Dick Buerkle; hurdler Erv Hall; high jumper Phil Reavis, and pole vaulters Don Bragg and Rolando Cruz.
- Five of Elliott's athletes won Olympic gold medals: Ron Delany in the 1,500 meters in 1956; Charlie Jenkins in the 400 meters and 1,600-meter relay in 1956; Don Bragg in the pole vault in 1960; Paul Drayton in the 400-meter relay in 1964, and Larry James in the 1,600-meter relay in 1968. Drayton won a silver medal in the 200 meters in 1964, James won a silver in the 400 meters in 1968 and Erv Hall won a silver in the 110-meter hurdles in 1968.
- Elliott's Villanova teams won the NCAA outdoor track title in 1957; the NCAA indoor track title in 1968, 1971 and 1979, and the NCAA cross-country title in 1966, 1967, 1968 and 1970. In addition, they won 39 IC4A titles, 13 outdoors, 17 indoors and nine in cross-country.
- Under Elliott, Villanova has won 75 college championship relays at the Penn Relays, more than any other school.
- In 1968, Villanova became the first school ever to win five of the eight college championship relays at the Penn Relays in a single year.
- Villanova has won the college championship distance medley relay at the Penn Relays every year since 1966.
- Villanova currently holds world indoor records in the two-mile relay, four-mile relay and distance medley relay and a world outdoor record in the distance medley relay.
- Elliott's Villanova teams have been most noted for their great milers, but three Villanova sprinters have held world records, Frank Budd in the 100 yards, Paul Drayton in the 220 yards and Larry James in the 400 meters.
- Ten of Elliott's milers broke 4 minutes while at Villanova, and five others have done so since graduating. Those who broke 4 minutes at Villanova are Eamonn Coghlan, Marty Liquori, Sydney Maree, Don Paige, John Hartnett, Dave Patrick, Ron Delany, Frank Murphy, Amos Korir and Chris Mason.

Jumbo Elliott (c) with Don Paige (l) and Eamonn Coghlan (r).

By BOB KENNY
Sports Editor, Camden Courier-Post

He was something special.

The man's numbers proved that. No coach even came close to watching his track team win as many medals.

James Francis Elliott was more than a winning coach. He was a builder of men in an era when it wasn't always fashionable to demand excellence.

Jumbo Elliott gave everything of himself from the first day in '35 that he coached his beloved Wildcats. He demanded the same from his athletes.

"You can't believe his dedication the week of the Penn Relays or the IC's," said Andy O'Reilly, one of Jumbo's great half-milers as he prepared to help Villanova try to win five sets of watches.

"Everything we do is geared to being ready for Friday and Saturday," explained O'Reilly, a 4.0 honor student, so typical of the student athletes Jumbo recruited and developed. "We have to be ready."

They nearly always were.

Jumbo instilled fear, possessing a sharp tongue and an icy stare that melted nonformists. Yet he was almost in a twilight zone at the big meets, depending upon assistant coaches and other athletes to deliver eleventh hour messages.

Elliott would appear almost majestically from the Franklin Field stands to offer a pat on the rump after another Penn Relay victory. His countless stars from other years would provide the setting.

"You were afraid to fail," said O'Reilly.

Examples abound. One hot April afternoon, Chris Mason was trying to recover from a grueling race in time to run a leg on another Wildcat relay team. His feet were red and swollen. He looked like a man ready for a doctor, until Elliott strolled in. "You've got thirty minutes," said Jumbo. "You've got plenty of time."

Mason forced a grin, wiped off his sore feet and ran out to help Villanova win another set of watches.

Then there was one cold day in Detroit when Marty Liquori tried to rest his aching muscles in his hotel room. He was trying to put it all together for a possible mile, two mile double, in the NCAA Indoor Championship.

Elliott dropped by and chatted about the year before, when the great Jim Ryan had dropped out because of blisters in an aborted attempt to win the two long races.

"You can always drop," said Elliott. "You can always quit."

Marty, of course, didn't quit. He ignored the pain in his legs to avoid the pain of Jumbo considering him a quitter. He ran and won both races, helping the Cats win the NCAA crown.

It was that way with Jumbo. He brought out the very best on the track.

He was more proud though of the men he sent into life — Frank Budd, a successful businessman; Fred Dwyer, a successful coach at Manhattan; and of Liquori, owners of a national chain of sports shoes.

Even Jim Tuppeny, his one-time assistant who became an Elliott arch-rival as the head coach at Penn, earned praise, from Jumbo. "He has developed a helluva program," said Jumbo one day. "Don't tell him I sent you, but why don't you do a feature on him for the IC4A program?"

It was Jumbo's way.

He preferred to do his coaching on the sidelines away from the spotlight. He wanted more than anything in the world to coach an Olympic team, but he wasn't asked.

It was America's loss.

Jumbo's Era

(Continued from page 1)

Nehemiah in the 1978 IC4As, again by one point.

It was a superhuman effort by Glenn Bogue, a runner who was most counted on for his consistency. This time, he was the anchor of the 1600-meter relay. He had no choice. Timmy Dale had scored points for his team in the 200, 400 and 400 relay and was exhausted.

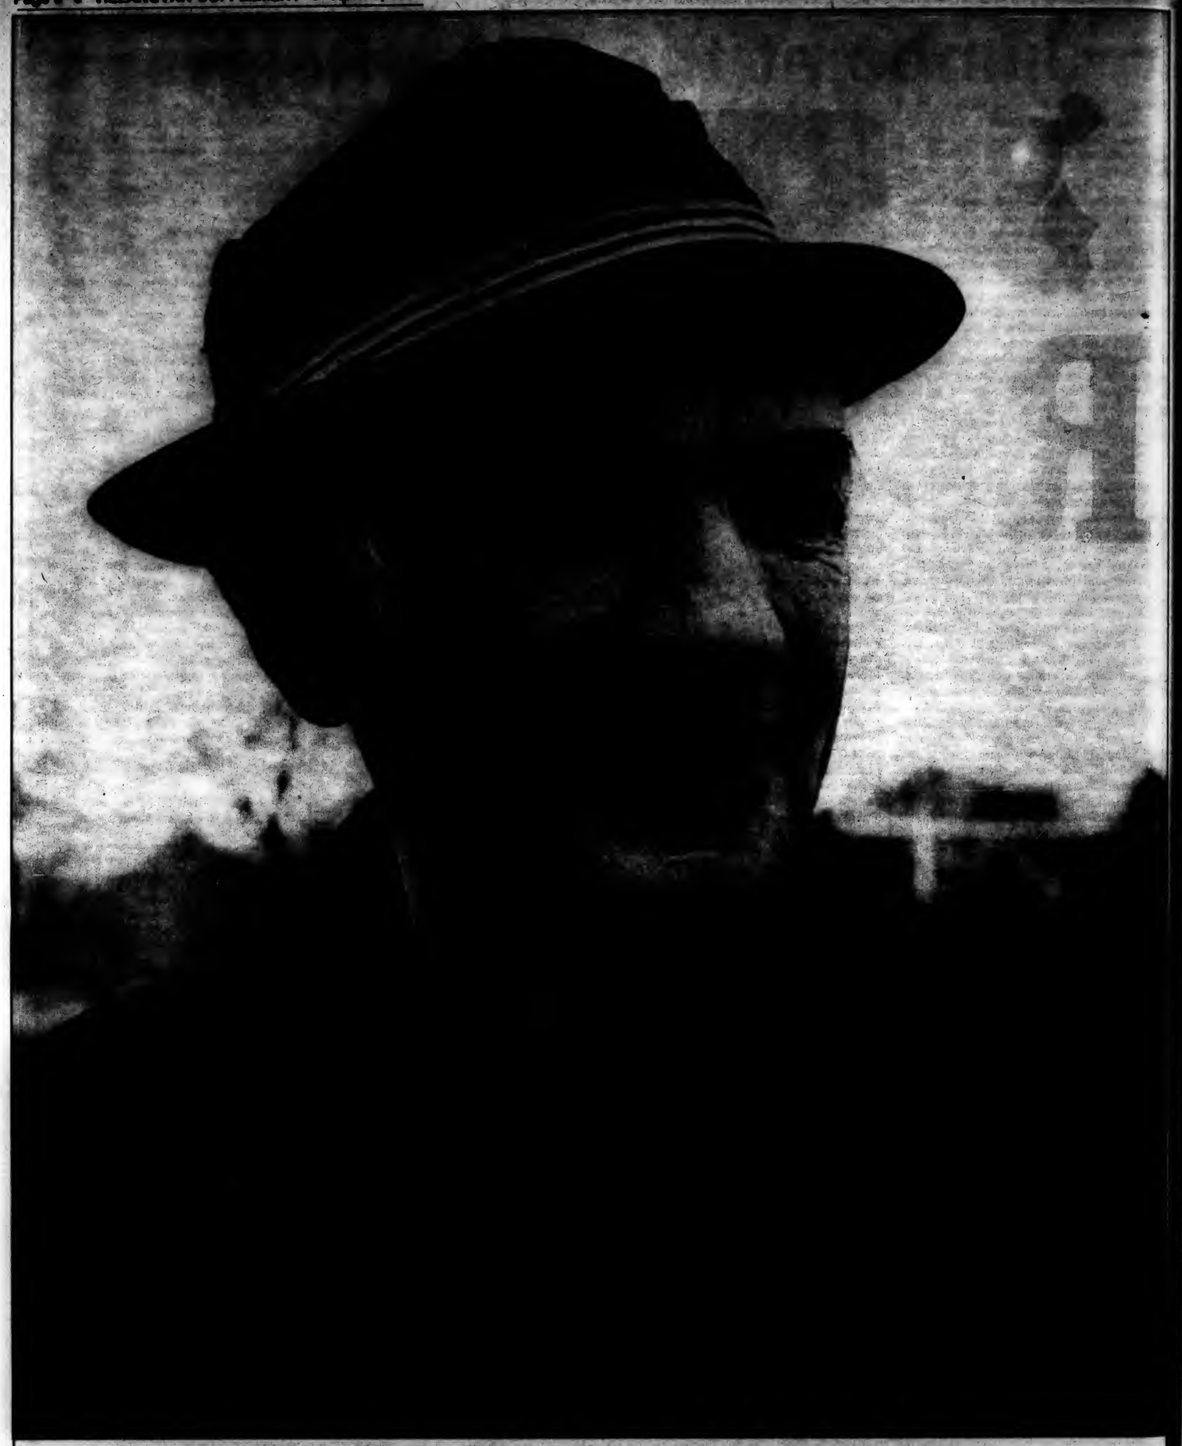
Because of the schedule of the heats, Villanova was forced to run a tired Tufariello for qualifiying the day before and the slow time had put Villanova in the slower heat for the final.

The cards were against them. They needed to win. They were running in the slow heat. Maryland was in the fast heat. And they were tired, very tired.

I can still see the expression on Glenn Bogue's face when he crossed the finish line in 45.1. He had never run 45 in his life. There was no one pushing him, no one within 150 meters.

I asked him how he did it. He replied he didn't know. He felt looser than he ever did before, and just kept running faster and faster.

It didn't hit me quite then, but it sure does now. He had Jumbo inside.



THE JUMBO ELLIOTT TRACK

DEDICATED TO JAMES F. ELLIOTT, WHO THROUGH LONG AND FAITHFUL SERVICE TO VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY HAS CREATED A TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE IN THE SPORT OF TRACK AND FIELD, BRINGING INTERNATIONAL RECOGNITION AND HONOR; SUCH A TRADITION BEING IMBUED WITH QUALITIES OF COACHING THAT REFLECT HIS DEEP COMMITMENT TO THE IDEALS OF A VILLANOVA EDUCATION.

VILLANOVA
RINGS UNIVERSITY
SHOP

COMING SOON
NEW RING STYLES

SAMPLES IN THE — UNIVERSITY SHOP
APRIL 6th

CLASS OF '83
ORDERS
4/28,29,30

[illegible] cares

Well, the parody issue or the Vanillanovan came out of the closet this week . . . it's most unfortunate that many people found it to be just like the real Villanovan . . . though seriously . . . we just have no idea why the male faculty in the English department would want fifty copies of June Litella's picture . . . and why the Bleu Key Society called to thank us for the accuracy of our article . . . or why Bill Clark mysteriously told his secretary Mary Anne Granger to "hold all calls" . . . and then made plane reservations for Brazil . . . right before the Executive Board of the Union appeared at the door waving their bananas . . . or why the VFL said that we should have been terminated by our mothers . . . or why people complained that we didn't savage the biggest joke on campus . . . the Student Government . . . or even why our budget for next year is now mysteriously "under review" . . . Why are people acting like this? . . . we don't know, and we certainly don't care. . .

Mrs. McKenna's
SWEATERS
IRISH • ICELANDIC • SCOTTISH
PERUVIAN • HAND KNITS • TWEEDS
206 E. LANCASTER AVE.
ARDMORE, PA. 19003
PHONE:
642-8110

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES

BAUSCH & LOMB
SOFT
CONTACT LENSES
$59.00

• CONTACT LENSES $25.00
Fitting, Orientation, and Follow-Up.
• CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00
• THERMAL UNIT $35.00
• ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00

One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.
30 Day Money Back Guarantee on Cost of Lenses.

CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520

ARDMORE WEST
SHOPPING CENTER
ARDMORE, PA.

20/20 OPTICAL CENTER

UNION PAGE

COFFEEHOUSE

April 3 in the Belle Air Terrace at 8:00 P.M.

FEATURING:

MARY PAT HENRY

and

MARY ALICE RICE

FREE

Refreshments Will Be Served.

CORSAGES

for all at the Senior Dinner Dance.

Order corsages on campus - in the lobby of the Connelly Center on April 8, 9 and 10th from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Available in all price ranges courtesy of Cowan's Flowers.

Skate for Special Olympics

Monday, April 6 - 6:00-8:00

at

Radnor Rolls

Tickets $2.00 - available at C.C. Ticket Office

$1.00 Skate Rentals.

*All proceeds to benefit Special Olympics day and sponsored by the Social Functions Committee.

SPRING FEVER WEEK BRINGS TO YOU...

SIMON SEZ

by

Bob Schaffer

There will be a series of teasers in front of the Connelly Center followed by an hour show.

Wednesday, April 29 12:00-1:30

"SIMON SEZ . . . BE THERE!!!"

CAMEL & ELEPHANT RIDES

APRIL 30

10 - 4

IN THE QUAD

50¢

DATING GAME

Tuesday night April 7 at 8:30 P.M. in the Day Hop.

2 games and winners receive $40.00 gift certificates to area restaurants.

Admission 50¢

SOUTH STREET DANCE COMPANY

explores modern dance on:

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 2:00 p.m.

Admission: $2.00

CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA

Come Celebrate National Dance Week

Enjoyable for young and old alike

REMEMBER . . .

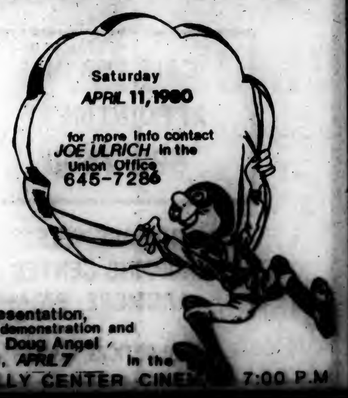
Did you know that every package of cigarettes is worth free time for a patient in need of a dialysis machine?

The Union is getting involved to help those in need. We encourage you to save all of your empty cigarette packets and then bring them to the Union Office.

It's worth saving a life...

The Outdoor Recreation Committee of the Villanova Union presents

SKYDIVING



movie presentation, Equipment demonstration and lecture by Doug Angel

TUESDAY, APRIL 7 in the CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA 7:00 P.M.

DON'T MISS IT !!!!!!!!!!

21

BYOB

UNION PAGE

SENIOR WEEKEND

David Bromberg Concert

Connelly Center 8:00 p.m.
Special Bonus to Seniors
$1.00 off ticket price
For complete information inquire at Connelly Center ticket office

Friday, April 10, 1981

Dinner Dance (semi-formal)
Franklin Plaza Hotel
17th and Vine Streets, Philadelphia (Center City)
7:00 p.m. - 1:30 a.m.
Dinner served at 8:00 p.m. sharp
Band: Livewire
Price: $42.00
Tickets on sale at Connelly Center ticket office

Saturday, April 11, 1981

Free Outdoor Concert
in Kennedy Mall
Band: Trix
Time: 1:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Sunday, April 12, 1981

raindate Monday, April 13
7:30 - 10:30 Kennedy Mall

BIG EVENT APPLICATIONS

NOW in the Union Office

1st Prize	$100
2nd Prize	$75
3rd Prize	$50

Stay tuned for Video Day April 22, 1981

In the Connelly Center Commons Lounge.

FORMER IRANIAN HOSTAGE WILLIAM BELK TALKS ABOUT LIFE AS A HOSTAGE

April 8, 1981

8:00 P.M.

VILLANOVA CENTER
OF THE CONNELLY CENTER

TICKET PRICES: $2.00 WITH V.U. I.D.
$4.00 GENERAL PUBLIC

AVAILABLE AT C.C. TICKET OFFICE.

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES:

Saturday, April 4
Sunday, April 5
Monday, April 6
at 7:30 in the Cinema.

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY -

directed by Stanley Kubrick

A science fictions film which sets the pace for sci-fi's of the present and future.

NOW SHOWING:

CADDYSHACK

7:00 and 9:30

in

Cinema.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

XANADU
Thursday, April 9
Friday, April 10
7:00 and 9:30 in Cinema.

The Who Fails at Face Dancing

The new Who: Daltrey, Jones, Townsend and Entwistle.

By JERRY ARTH
AND STEVE HELMETAG

Face Dances, The Who's 14th album in 16 years, is the first album from the band since the fantastic Who Are You of two years ago. The band has changed labels and producers, picked up Kenney Jones to replace the late, great Keith Moon, and clothed its new release in one of the year's most artistic album covers. Only one question remains to be answered: why is Face Dances so unappealing?

The Who has made its reputation on hard-driving, uncompromising music, filled with the sardonic, rapier wit of Peter Townshend. The classic Who songs — My Generation, Magic Bus, I Can't Explain, Baba O'Reily — were filled with raw beauty and incision. On Face Dances, however, one must assume that Townshend has carried over the pop success he gained with his solo effort of 1980, Empty Glass. Certainly his writing for Face Dances is pure pop.

A sticky, Top-40 quality oozes from the album's pre-released single, You Better You Bet. The Who sings "When I say I love you you say you better/You better you better you bet." Later in the song is this gem, "You welcome me with open arms and open legs/I know only fools have needs but this one never begs." What's with the cutesy alliteration and cheap rhymes?

What has happened to "Why don't you all just f-f-f-fade away?"

What has happend to "Why don't you all just f-f-f-fade away?" Townshend, it would appear, is trying to pander to the tastes of that "teen-age wasteland" which lapped up his Empty Glass drivel. The seven songs on Face Dances penned by Townshend are not worth the effort it takes to listen to them.

The only musically-redeeming qualities of this record are the two compositions by the Who's least recognized member, bassist John Entwistle. His contributions to Face Dances, The Quiet One and You, alone make this album worth its promotional hype. While both tunes are obviously [illegible] biographical, they are blunt, honest, and lyrical. Musically these are much better suited to The Who than any of Townshend's. When Entwistle writes "Still waters run deep so be careful I don't drown you/ You've got nothing to hear I've got nothing to say," he is much more effective than Townshend and his trite songs of lust.

Generally, Face Dances is a major disappointment from a band of the Who's caliber. It would seem that Townshend merely threw in songs that didn't make it on Empty Glass, rather than write the type of tunes that exemplify The Who. And although they sing "We're making music we're doing fine," judging by this release, it does not seem likely that one of the premier bands of the 60's and 70's will be able to limp its way through the 80's.

Fuller Traces the 'Critical Path'

By STEVEN COMBS

The governments of men have brought planet Earth to the very edge of self-annihilation. Only recently has mankind held the power to destroy his life sustaining environment and, with it, all life that we know of. One example is the use of water as a coolant for nuclear reactors and waterways receptacles for industrial waste. All biological life is 50% water, humans — 60%. Yet we continue to contaminate the world ocean oblivious to the fact that we have no other water supply in the Universe. And even if H20 exists elsewhere it would probably be frozen, boiling, evaporated or incandescant. Clearly our world water source should be a prime concern in the coming years. But this is assuming that nuclear war, starvation, and disease don't wipe us out first.

The only hope for mankind, according to Buckminister Fuller, lies with the individual. Governments, organizations, and societies are far too concerned with their own survival as systems to adequately manage Earth's biosphere. Individual people must take it upon themselves to acknowledge the oneness of all live and the desperate need for man to come to terms with his environment.

In Critical Path, Fuller explores where we have been and where we are going with unfettered genius. His idea of "reverse Darwinism" shows the revolutionary nature of open-mindedness. Fuller postulates a single life source that through in-breeding, isolation, and adaption, has evolved into countless forms. He sees porpoises and whales as nearer relations to man than apes. (Curiously only man, porpoises and whales shed salt water tears. Apes do not.) This view is directly at odds with the prevalent scientific belief that man is some sort of final product destined to rule as he sees fit.

Contrary to the "us or them" type of thinking that presupposes scarcity and conflict, Fuller believes that more can be had for all through peaceful cooperation. Critical Path is a guidebook for this cooperation.

Buckminster Fuller suggests in Critical Path that all creatures are geniuses. It is only our conditioning by society that blinds us to the spontaneous adaptive ability within that is the basis of all creative invention. Critical Path is a much needed signpost at a junction in time/space where our actions will determine the fate of life itself.

There are so many brilliant insights into the diverse fields of anthropology, energy, economics, and politics in this book that I can only urge people to discover for themselves. This book is unlike anything I have read in the scope of truly free thinking that it applies to man's problems. Only Frank Herbert's Dune comes close and I can't help but feel that much of that was inspired by Fuller.

Critical Path could be used as text for almost any college course. Unlike the close-minded, ignorant, self-ingratiating theories, Fuller's work is an invitation to think and a rational basis to believe in the infinite possibilities available to man and all creatures aboard Spaceship Earth.

R. Buckminster Fuller

AT THE MOVIES:

The 'Omen' Saga Ends

By ECHELMEIER YOUNGER

Anguish, hatred, sin and eternal damnation are the components that bond together Satan's Unholy Trinity. Man's only escape from his evil grip is to seek refuge through eternal salvation from God, his Son, and the Holy Ghost.

In The Final Conflict, Damien Thorton, played by Sam Neill, uses his evil powers to obtain the position as the official international mediary, the United States ambassador. By using his political authority, Damien sets forth to corrupt and conquer the souls of Jesus' disciples. If he succeeds, God's only begotten Son will fail to save mankind from obtaining eternal rest and peace. But, as believed, the good surpasses the whims of evil and as a result, mankind is saved from the pitfalls of Hell.

In endless situations, Damien has proven his determination to avenge his downcast from Heaven into everlasting Hell. Stabbings, wolf attacks, strangulations, poisonings and many other intended mutilations are accountable measures taken by Damien to ensure his position as the eminent ruler of darkness. The end result: the death of thousands of people born on the day of Christ's second coming.

As certification of Damien's allegience to evil, a seal is stamped upon his head giving him sole acclaim to the powers of darkness. As quoted from the Scriptures: "Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred threescore and six," (Revelations XIII:18).

Director Graham Baker and producer Harvey Bernhard usher the last chapter of the Omen trilogy in The Final Conflict. Rossano Brazzi, Don Gordon, Liza Harrow and Barnaby Holm accompany Sam Neill in an excellent presentation of the long awaited encounter between Christ and the anti-Christ.

The Final Conflict is the result of a battle between good and evil, love and hate, war and peace, eternal salvation and eternal damnation and the Ruler of Darkness and the Holy Ghost.

The movie ended with a final note: "For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty," (Revelations XVI:14)

Fools Get Into 'Heavy Mental'

By ROBERT M. McGOVERN

Boston, land of beans, clams and Red Sox also happens to be the home of The Fools, and they're not just any fools, mind you. The effects of the first album still haven't worn off yet. In fact, just when I thought it was safe to turn on the radio again, they came to take control of my mind — again!! Night Out and Beautiful Girls are still floating around my skull and now they've given me more tunes to deal with.

On this latest effort, The Fools are back with a harder driving sound than they presented on the first album, but it's not heavy metal. No, The Fools have not sold out (they did that on the first album), but they could have called the album Head Games, only if it hadn't been used previously, of course.

Mind Control starts the album and takes us all the way to the brink of one bonafide nervous breakdown. Maybe this is why they decided to call the album Heavy Mental. Of course there's Dressed In White, the song that follows, with its discordant harmonies, if that's possible. It's totally hypnotic. Like most of the first album, these songs are just too damned hard to get out of my mind.

Side Two also contains some very interesting compositions. What I Tell Myself is a compelling, frantic attempt on the part of the main character to downplay the importance of things once precious to him in order that he may preserve his sanity. From what we can hear though, it seems like he's about to lose. On Last Cadillac On Earth, bassist Doug Forman takes over the vocals in almost Brand New Cadillac fashion, but actually one step beyond.

What could be said to be the only weak spot (or at the least a musical nonsequiter) on this album is The Fool's reworking of the Roy Orbison song, Running Scared. Despite the fact that it currently is doing well as a single and that it is executed well, it just doesn't fit. They should have left it off the album and released separately as a single. But who am I to argue with the success?

Tell Me You Love Me ("you left my pants on fire/but that's not all I need") and Alibi (about a man and a woman and about what he obviously has to come up with) are a good one-two punch to end the album with. They both wind up (down?) the album very well and in classic Fools fashion.

It's been two years now since The Fools first sent the basement tape of Psycho Chicken to WBCN in Boston (a song that went on to become the most requested in the station's history) and a year since Sold Out. And with this new album and last fall's radio station release, First Annual Official Unofficial April Fools Day Live Bootleg (which contains yet to be released Spent The Rent), The Fools have lived up to if not far surpassed what had come to be expected of them. In spite of all the notoriety, The Fools still defy catagorization. What do you call them? New Wave? Rock? Heavy Metal? I think they say it all for themselves — Heavy Mental!!

There will be a special showing of Ulysses, the film version of the great novel by James Joyce, in the West Lounge, Monday evening, April 13 at 8:00 p.m. The public is invited to attend. A donation of $1.00 will be collected at the door.

Again . . .

By AN ANONYMOUS STUDENT

A man loads a gun bullet after bullet.
Purposefully.
Planning to kill.Intent
on plunging steel into tissue.
Cold sanity
focused on that which is most insane.

Attention Villanovans
CENTRAL PARK
SHOTGUN
Mondays
DRINKS ARE HALF PRICE.
Monday THRUST

IT PAYS TO BE A STUDENT
It finally pays to be a student... because now Winston's will let you take 10% off your bill when you clip & present this coupon.
10% OFF
OFFER IS NOT VALID WITH ANY OTHER SPECIALS
BY LAW IN PA, VALID ON FOOD AND SOFT BEVERAGES ONLY.
Offer Good from April 1 to April 30.
VIL
HA WINSTON & CO.
Offer Valid in Paoli, Springhouse & Norristown Locations Only.

The Black MBA Association
Invites you to attend
the Seventh Annual
WHITNEY M. YOUNG, JR.
MEMORIAL CONFERENCE
Theme: "Redevelopment of the Cities: Strengthening a Black Political-Economic Base"
DATE: April 3 and 4, 1981
LOCATION: The Wharton School
Vance Hall
University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, PA
KEYNOTE SPEAKER: Jesse Hill
President and CEO
Atlanta Life Insurance Co.
STUDENT REGISTRATION: $7.50
INFORMATION: (215) 243-3463

VILLANOVA THEATRE
VILLANOVA THEATRE
— presents —
JOSEPHINE:
THE MOUSE SINGER
April 8-11
April 22-25
STUDENT RUSH
TWO BUCKS
VASEY, 7:50 P.M.
VALID STUDENT I.D. NECESSARY

THE GALAXY
In Somerdale Park
Somerdale, N.J.
609-435-1888
SALUTES
VILLANOVA
UNIVERSITY
STUDENTS!
No admission charge
with this ad and college ID.
SPECIAL PRICES
Tuesday-Saturday
TUESDAYS
"PREACHER"
FRI. & SAT. - "FRENZY"
AND
"CREATURE"
Sundays
Columbia Recording Artists
"QUINCY"

Byrne and Eno Skirt the Edge

By MICHAEL JONES

My Life in the Bush of Ghosts represents the musical experimentalism of Brian Eno and David Byrne, drawing heavily from African and avant-garde musical forms. These forms serve only as the point of departure, for the area explored is truly a musical terra incognita.

For those who need introductions, Brian Eno is an eclectical musical innovator, ex-member of Roxy Music, and producer for David Bowie and Talking Heads. David Byrne, of course, is the singer-guitarist of the Heads. Eno has also worked extensively with Robert Fripp since their first collaboration. No Pussyfooting, in 1972-3. His most recent projects include his Ambient series (environmental music intended to enhance atmospheric idiosyncracies while providing a space to think), which have already been used experimentally in several major airports. He has also started a Future World series with a collaboration with Jon Hassel entitled Possible Musics. This album can be seen as a precursor to My Life in the Bush of Ghosts due to its strong African and pan-cultural tendencies. It has been termed music for our future society.

My Life had a strong influence on the recording sessions for the latest Talking Heads release, Remain in Light, which, though it preceded My Life in the marketplace was actually recorded later. The release of the present collaboration was delayed by a lawsuit from the estate of the famed evangelist Kathryn Kuhlman. It seems that they were not thrilled with the idea of her voice appearing on such an album. In any case, the two artists were forced to settle for a Lebanese mountain singer, several radio evangelists, an unidentified exorcist and a group of Algerian Muslims chanting the Qu'ran, to mention a few. David Byrne has become disenchanted with writing song lyrics and both he and Eno are convinced that the sound of a voice, the phrasing or plastic structures, affect the listener at least as much as the meaning of the words.

The title for this work is taken from a book by Nigerian novelist Amos Tutuolo. The novel is the story of a young man who leaves his native village and travels to other alien villages where he meets different ghosts. The pre-recorded voices which dwell on this album were the ghosts that Byrne and Eno encountered while surfing in unknown musical waters. Most of the songs begin with four or five instruments as a basis upon which ladders and layers of improvisation were added.

Byrne and Eno also equate their interest in African music with a curiosity for other moral philosophies. The 60's gave rise to a strong interest in Eastern philosophies and people were impressed with this alternative.

CONESTOGA CLEANERS

907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010

LA 5-3431

PLANT-ON PREMISES

SAME DAY CLEANING

WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS

WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS

ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

BE A CAMP COUNSELOR

A fun experience

CAMP SWAGO - CAMP SWATONAH

1410 EAST 24th STREET
BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11210
WRITE FOR APPLICATION

All college students eligible.

A Brother-Sister Camp

Prime location on beautiful lake in the Pocono Mts. of Penna.

All water, land, cultural and social activities

Eight week season. Room & board plus salary related to skills & experience.

COMING HOME TO NEW JERSEY

FOR THE SUMMER

TRENTON STATE COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL

We offer:

— Wide variety of courses
— Flexible schedule
— Guaranteed course offerings

For Information Write to:

Trenton State College
Summer Session Office
Hillwood Lakes, CN 550
Trenton, NJ

or call: 609-771-3128

the Villanovan

Personals

Dear CMG
Happy 21st BIRTHDAY! Now will you go to Kelly's with me?
Love, C.F.

Dear Belvedear —
Thanks for a fantastic evening and if you ever need any tips on how to gamble — just ask.
Love, Squeakie
P.S. I hear that secondary education is marvelous these days.

K.M.,
Get a shave! Hugs & Slugs, Your Pals

To all members of the Class of '81:
Announcing the launching of a campaign to revive the alma mater. Learn it, sing it, engrave it in your heart to prove that we are the class with class.
Sincerely,
Alma Maters Anonymous

Mikeman,
Happy 20th. Now that you're older, Maria wants to know if she can have a peek? I want to know if she will get one? I told her it was worth the wait.
Speaking of big events, are you going to celebrate all weekend? You might as well for this could be your big chance to do something better than me. If you don't, that's ok and you know why?
Enough of this. I really want to wish you a happy B-day and I will try to make yours as nice as you made mine.
Love, Fat's Girl
P.S. Is it true greyhound is always late?

Classifieds

HOSTESS — Part-time, evenings and weekends. Apply in person, Proud Filly Restaurant, 339 E. Lancaster Ave.

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 765-5999.

1 Bedroom (sleeps 2) available for either 2 responsible guys/gals located in a three bedroom beautifully furnished and situated house in Avalon. If interested please contact Matt Durst, 449-8697 or Bill Conners, Room No. 18, Austin.

SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE

Applicants are now being considered for the 1981 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts, Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Theater Director, Piano Accompanist and Singing, Archery, Tennis, Trampoline, Gymnastics, Photography, Cheerleading, Jazzercize, Scouting and Nature Study, A.R.C. Swimming Instructor, Boating, Canoeing and Water Skiing Instructor or General Athletics. COUNSELOR UNIT LEADERS must be college graduate experienced in camping. Able to plan schedule for activities, evening programs, etc. Supervise large staff. Write Camp Office, 700 Ardmore Ave., No. 102, Haverford Village, Ardmore, Pa. 19003 or phone Miss Sherman, 215-649-9622 or 215-687-7801.

Girls looking to sublease an apartment for the summer months, in the Main Line area. Please call 527-4091.

For Sale
1975 Opel, silver, good condition, good mileage, standard. $1800. Call 296-0139 (after 7 p.m.)

Wanted: Female roommates to share large apartment in Bryn Mawr Courts for the months of May, June, July and August. Call Jacqui or Shirley, 527-3146.

Rosemont College Food Service needs part-time help. Hours are from 4:30-7:30. Various positions available. Apply in person. 527-3627.

DISCOUNT TYPING
Quality typing at discount prices. Reports, manuscripts, editing. Mail us your work — and save $.
Quick and Dependable (Mon.-Sat.)
7126 Germantown Ave. Phila., PA 19119
Phone, 247-2267

TENNIS INSTRUCTORS for city youth program, July-August. Car and experience necessary, excellent salary and gas allowance. Call Program Director for application. 545-7288.

Women Take Second in Meet Held on Jumbo Elliott Track

By KERRY LYNCH

Last Sunday marked the first meet to be held on the Jumbo Elliott Track. The Villanova women's track team hosted the Big 5 outdoor championships in which they took second place.

Cathy Heinbach breaks the tape as she wins her heat of the 100 meter hurdles.

Charlie Guida Photo

Taking place just one week after his death, the meet opened with a minute of silence in the memory of Jumbo, world renowned track coach. The women's track team wore black armbands throughout the meet.

This was also the first track meet ever hosted by the Villanova women and their second place finish indicates how strong they have become in track and field over the short years as a team.

The women had taken the indoor title earlier this year on the strength of their distance runners and strong relays. However, Temple held the advantage on Sunday with their throwers who captured first in all three throwing events. Temple amassed 163-1/2 points to Villanova's 131.

Freshman speedster Patty Bradley came on with strong performances and a surprise victory in the long jump. In her only jump of the day in which her steps didn't even come out right, Bradley cruised 18 feet and 5 inches over the sand pit, capturing first place and the Villanova record. And she'd only just begun. In her sprinting effort she advanced the 400-meter relay team from fifth to second place around a corner. In the 800 meters she was edged out of first by Penn's Rudelle Sargent but took second place in an incredible 2:14.9. In the mile relay Bradley came back one more time to lead off, established her team in second place and ran the fastest split.

Freshman sprinter Valerie Allen comes out of the block in a quick start in the 100 meter dash.

Charlie Guida Photo

Other highlights came, as usual, in the distance events. Sue Shea won the first race ever on the track. She took command of the 5,000 meters, never looked back and crossed the finish line in 17:33.77, 220 yards in front of the second place finisher.

Lisa Maree won the 1500 in 4:39.2 with Shea closing in at the end to finish third. Maree and Shea along with Amelia Cain and Daria Varaitis contributed the Wildcats only relay victory in the two-mile relay.

Sophomore Peggy Stewart did it again. Stewart had double victories as she took first in the high jump and the 100 meter hurdles. She also ran on the two second place relay events; the 400 meter and the mile relay.

Wildcats Win Two Over Weekend

Loscalzo's Red Hot Bat Leads the Way

By STEPHEN FALLON

When the rains came last Monday and washed out the Villanova Wildcats baseball game against Glassboro, Coach Larry Shane could only hope the rain wouldn't cool off the red hot Cats. Coming off a pair of weekend wins which moved their record to 5-2 the Wildcats appear to be preparing for a return visit to the NCAA playoffs.

Last Saturday against Towson State, Randy Robinson pitched 7-1/3 innings of solid baseball but was replaced with the score deadlocked at 3-3. Towson State scored a run and went into the ninth holding a 4-3 advantage. The Wildcats rallied, however, with Bob Loscalzo doubling in Jim White to tie the score. The double capped a 5 for 5 day for Loscalzo including his fourth home run of the year. Bob Sullivan then picked up the game winning RBI with a single to plate Steve Cordner. The Cats continued on to score four more runs for the final margin of 9-4. Phil Sartori picked up the win in relief.

Bob Loscalzo

Saturday's win was followed by an equally impressive, come from behind 5-3 victory at Delaware. The Cats trailed 3-2 in the ninth when Jim White doubled in Mike Craig to tie the score. White, only a freshman, continued to swing a torrid bat which has seen him collect 10 hits in 17 at bat. Outfielder Steve Cordner, who homered earlier in the game, doubled to put the Wildcats ahead to stay. Dante Santoni closed out the scoring with a sacrifice fly and Phil Sartori pitched a complete game for his second win in as many days.

* * *

One major reason for Villanova's fine start this baseball season (5-2), and superlative season last year (21-7) is the presence of junior Bob Loscalzo. To repeat the year Loscalzo had in 1980 would be asking a great deal, but Loscalzo is off to a great start. Already this season Loscalzo has hit four home runs.

Last year Loscalzo had a slugging percentage of .838 and a batting average of .479, which easily made him the best hitting underclassman in Villanova history. The .479 average also enabled Loscalzo to have the honor of being the top sophomore hitter in the country. One more prestigious record that Loscalzo now owns, because of last year's unbelievable season, is a 19-game hitting streak, which is a school record. Loscalzo's accomplishments and awards were many.

Through it all, Loscalzo, who doubles as a back-up quarterback in the fall, has kept a low profile. The hard hitting center-fielder/firstbaseman said, "Last year and so far this year I have been getting good pitches to hit." And hit he does. In a game against Towson State last Sunday he posted a perfect day by batting five-for-five. One of those hits was a double which drove in the tying run forcing extra-innings. A game the Cats eventually won.

Loscalzo, who is powerful looking at the plate, swings from the left side. His short compact strike allows him to make consistent contact. He is the ideal number three hitter. Loscalzo makes contact and yet has power to drive the ball. Villanova Baseball Manager Larry Shane has been batting Loscalzo third. Not making contact with the ball has not been one of Loscalzo's difficulties. Last year he struck out only six times in 117 plate appearances.

Ruggers Romp

By DAVE LAVEREY

The Villanova Rugby Football Club traveled up to Easton to play Lafayette College last Saturday. The Ruggers were hoping to avenge a loss last fall at the hands of this very team. Even though Captain Paul Hartwyk and starters All Corless, Chuck Kohler, and Al Donatio were injured, the Nova A-side was hoping for a victory. The game that ensued was a fiercely pitched battle that ended with Villanova on top 9-4.

After a slow start, the Nova Ruggers took the game to the Lafayette team. Bruising tackles by Joe White and Mike Terlizi pinned the opposition deep in their own territory. A break by Terry Boyle set up a brilliant run by Tim McCarthy for the first Nova score. The kick after goal was made by Mark Civil, whose great kicks throughout the game were the difference in the outcome.

At the half, the score was still 6-0. Lafayette was determined to come back and only solid defensive play by Joe White, Joe McCreavy, and Kevin Brown prevented them from scoring. Unfortunately, a penalty deep in the Nova end resulted in a Lafayette try. Luckily for the Ruggers the kick after failed and with three minutes to go they held a 6-4 lead. Showing a last burst of offense, Villanova drove down to the Lafayette 5 yard line where a penalty enabled Mark Civil to add 3 more points on a penalty kick. That turned out to be the final play as time ran out and the Ruggers upped their record to 2-0-1. Forwards Jake Cheli, Steve Todaro and Pat Gallagher also played well for the undefeated A-side.

The B-side was not as fortunate and lost 4-0 on a fluke play early in the game. A kick from a Lafayette back took a lucky bounce into the arms of another Lafayette player who went in for the try. Beside that play, the B match was as fiercely contested as the A match. Pat Lyons, Tom Murphy, and Paul Maloney had good games for the "Killer B's."

In the previous week's action, the Ruggers had defeated a stubborn Media Club 8-0. Scoring in that contest was Jim (Tooth) LaVine and speedster Frank Sergiovani. LaVine hustled into the end zone and jumped on a loose ball to break a scoreless tie with less than 10 minutes left in the game. With about 2 minutes left Serge scooped up a Tim McCarthy kick and bolted down the sidelines untouched for the insurance score.

Defense was also the story of this game as the Nova Ruggers notched another shutout. Mark Civil kept the Media team in their own end with long kicks including a 75 yard boot from deep in his end. Other outstanding players were Tim Guinese, Paul Hartwyk, and Joe Napoletano.

The B-side was also victorious over Media as Paul Maloney ran in from about the 40 with only one minute to go giving the B's a 12-11 win. Scoring for the B-side was Joe Gatagon and Gary Lameo, which gave the B-side a 8-0 advantage at the half. Many players performed well particularly Kevin Miller, Mike Scalzo, Ed Scottie and Paul Holbert.

Tomorrow the Ruggers will host Princeton University at the Rugby Field across from the Stadium. The Princeton squad, last years E.P.R.U. Champions, will bring three sides and attempt to continue their winning ways.

Tennis Takes Two

The Wildcat netters posted an extremely proud 7-2 trouncing of Franklin and Marshall over the weekend to boost their early season record to 5-1. Villanova has only beaten the traditional Marshall rivals once before.

This win, as well as the others is reflective of the successful fall tournament season and last year's impressive 16-5 record.

Robert Langran, enjoying a 20 year tenure as tennis coach, is one of the winningest coaches at Villanova. The diversified playing styles are a mark of the 1981 team which lists two members from each class.

Eight players face a 27 match schedule with six singles and three doubles matches played each outing. Tom Fieger, captain, returns in the number one singles spot which he has held for 3 years, compiling a 16-6 record last spring. He is a hard court player known for his serve and volley.

A welcome addition is Bill Harahan, taking over the number two position in his rookie season. His strengths lie in his aggressive play and two handed back hand. Opponents beware of his hard winners!

The junior Captain Sean Friel is also a hard court player in the third position who played to a 14-5 singles record last spring.

Playing in the fourth singles spot but better known for his doubles play is sophomore Paul Fitzsimmons. Fitzsimmons teams up with Harahan to pose a considerable threat as the 2nd doubles team.

In the fifth singles spot is senior Bill Sullivan. Known for his bold expressions on the court, Sullivan is also a strong doubles player and, as all teammates did, posted a winning singles season in 1980.

The sixth singles game is usually played by junior Bill Monde whose spin serve combined with his slash and forehand makes him hard to beat.

The two top alternates, Jon Lee and Dave Splaine add depth to the team and both have proven themselves in competition in the early season.

Tom Fieger, Captain, wins another match as the Cats down Kutztown 9-0. Charlie Guida Photo

C.W. Post Edges Laxmen

By TOM PRIOR

Dropping an 8-6 decision to C.W. Post puts the Wildcat Lacrosse team's record at 1-3. There were, however, some optimistic moments as the Wildcat offense took better control of their game. The loss places the laxmen in sole possession of last place in the mideast conference.

Thanks to strong performances by seniors Chris Clarke and Paul Grady with two goals apiece, the Wildcats only trailed 6-5 in the fourth quarter. However, C.W. Post answered with two goals in the final minutes to shut the door on the disappointed laxmen.

Grady, who leads the scoring offense, has eleven goals on the four game season. The offense showed improvement in controlling the ball and setting up plays when in the scoring position. However, their inability to capitalize on the one-up kept them from outscoring Post. The Wildcats were only 2 for 15 during Post's 23 penalty minutes.

The defensive stalwart Jim Coakley performed well against Post and led the intimidating defense that shut down Swarthmore in an earlier game which the Wildcats won 11-4.

After a strong pre-season, the Lacrosse team's sluggish start has been a surprise to many people including Coach Lee Stevens. Stevens offered this explanation for his team's performance: "I felt that we reached our peak during the month of February during the pre-season, and then when the season began we lost our concentration and togetherness. Our stickwork has been sloppy and inexperience has been costly."

The fourth year coach also attributed the disheartening start to a tough schedule which becomes more difficult as the season progresses.

Sailors

In the first regatta of the spring season last weekend at Penn's Landing, the Villanova sailing team placed second in close 420 action. Edged out by the University of Pennsylvania in the final two races, Villanova finished with 50 points. Competing in the Penn Minor were eight area colleges. The competition was close, with Villanova rallying throughout with Penn, until the end when Penn pulled ahead by 6 points. Sailing for Villanova were A team skipper Henry Rohrer and crew Mary Frances Schubert, and B team skipper Yvette Doan and Fred Closuit, crew. This weekend Villanova will compete as defending champions in the Delaware River Lazer Invite.

The Recruits Are Coming

Believe it or not it is football season. After a long winter of weight training and other off-season preparation, the squad is now holding practice on the astro-turf.

Spring ball readies the athletes for the fall schedule and the Blue and White game. The inter-squad match-up will be held late in April in the stadium.

It is also football season behind the scenes and the coaches are working to sign athletes for the coming season. Close to 20 recruits have already signed letters of intent.

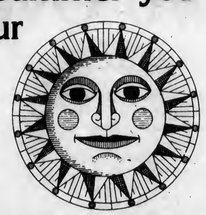
Kevin Chapman and Dwayne Hooper are running backs from Baltimore whose speed and strength will lend power to the Cat's wishbone offense.

Hooper runs a 4.6 40, rushed for 990 yards this past season and led his team receiving.—Villanova Coach Dick Bedesem says "Dwayne is the type of runnin back we have to have, he's a thre to break one at anytime at an part of a game."

Chapman is an All-Metro line backer named to All-State honors by the Baltimore Sun. Villanova plans to use Chapman in the running back position.

In six games Chapman gained over 800 yards to lead the squad in rushing although he was injured and unable to play in five games.

This could be the summer you save money on your college education



With money so tight these days, you want to make sure you can squeeze the most out of every dollar. Atlantic Community College is just the place to save money on your college education.

ACC, located 15 miles west of Atlantic City in Mays Landing, New Jersey, offers five summer sessions with starting dates in May, June and July. Three sessions are offered during the day and two at night. Classes meet in Mays Landing, Atlantic City and for the first time in Cape May County. Tuition and fees are only $24 per credit.

We offer an assortment of courses ranging from accounting to speech, from scuba diving to religion. A summer course or two with us could help you get a jump on graduation or ease next fall's course load. Be daring. Take a course in a subject you can't seem to fit into your regular schedule. Or pick up some skills for a job.

You'll be stimulated and challenged by our faculty who is dedicated to teaching. Classes are small and our facilities rival many of those at larger universities. ACC is accredited and all credits earned are completely transferable. All this at a fraction of the cost of your education.

Atlantic Community College

Mays Landing, N.J. 08330
(609) 625-1111 or 646-4950

Use this summer to save money on your education. Whatever your reasons, you'll find Atlantic Community College's summer sessions offer educational opportunities to help you achieve your goals. It's all described in our free bulletin. For a copy, call (609) 625-1111 or 646-4950 or return the coupon below.

Please send me your summer schedule.

1981 Summer Sessions
Atlantic Community College
Mays Landing, NJ 08330

Name _____
Address _____
City/State/Zip _____
College _____

an equal opportunity/ affirmative action institution

Budweiser.
KING OF BEERS.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

This week's Budweiser Athlete of The Week is synchronized swimmer Sue Giordano. She finished ninth in the duet competition. The previous week Giordano finished second in the senior figures and second in the open solo at the regionals. In the same meet Wagner and Giordano took second in the duet. Giordano was nominated by her coach Laura Proske.

the Villanovan

Vol. 56, No. 24 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | April 10, 1981

Rosengarth Elected President

By LEONARD J. LaBARTH

Amidst allegations of campaign ractions and rules violations, Rosengarth was elected Student Body President for 1981-82, Thursday, April 2.

Also elected for positions ing the 2000 ballots cast were: mmerce and Finance, Paul ano and Victor Falvo; Science, y Malanga; Engineering, w Sansone, and for Arts and Sciences, Bill Monaco, Tee Hoyne and Terry Mogavero. Monaco received the most votes for A&S.

Elected for Law School Senator was Kevin Gleason and Connie Comins for Nursing senator.

The results were returned twenty minutes before midnight by present Student Body President Henry Amoroso to a crowd of approximately 150 people who had waited close to two hours for the final tabulations.

Amoroso mounted the podium and spoke briefly about the election process. He praised the campaigners and the election commission, pointing out that it was a very difficult election. "There were a great deal of decisions to make," explained Amoroso. "The committee did so and did it with style." One of the decisions Amoroso was referring to concerned the campaign of Pete Cieszko. Sometime before election day, signs promoting the candidate had been mounted over numerous windows in Bartley Hall. A grievance had been filed and after examination by the election commission, it was decided the infraction was not enough to warrant the exclusion of the candidate from the race.

Another problem with the campaign concerned the campaigning of presidential-hopeful John Pisano (the Villanovan, April 3).

"Any election, there's going to be a lot of complaints and concerns," Amoroso admitted. "I was pleased with the turnout of voters." Rosengarth captured 46% of the 1,964 votes cast for president. "It was a big success switching the voting location," Amoroso continued. "Excluding the 280 votes for Law School and University College, 1720 of the 6000 undergraduates voted, which can be considered good. All the races were close."

One candidate who was not pleased with the voting procedures was presidential candidate Wayne Remai. Before the results were announced, Remai voiced his displeasure.

"As far as I'm concerned, the whole process was a farce," Remai said. "Those who voted had to be intimidated with everyone walking up to them and telling them who to vote for. It was a good turnout but I saw a lot of disgusted voters."

Remai offered an alternative voting system." Campaigns should run for two weeks with no campaigning on election day. There shouldn't be any campaigning in or near the polls."

"I'm not taking anything away from my opponents but I disagree with a lot of their techniques," said Remai. "I'm not sure about the others but I didn't go over my budget. I probably had $1.50 left."

New Student Body President Bob Rosengarth (sitting in center) seconds after his victory was announced late last Thursday. Jeff Page Photo

ew Role Viewed

By BILL CLARK

Next year's Student Body Presint feels that he has to "prove he the right person for the sition."

"I only won with 46% of the ote," said Bob Rosengarth. Even though there were three candidates running, I think it shows that I have a lot of proving to do."

Rosengarth has already formulated his objectives for next year. He envisions a student bill of rights coming before the Senate next year. "I think there'll be a lengthy discussion and argument about the Bill of Rights," said Rosengarth.

Rosengarth has also pledged to upgrade communications with the Board of Trustees. "Father McCarthy (chairman of the Board of Trustees) has said that the standing committees of the Board must hold more meetings, and students must be notified of these meetings," said Rosengarth. "I also think it is important that the Student Body President be permitted to address the Board of Trustees at its spring meeting."

"I also think that we have to strive for responsible drinking at Villanova, but not alcohol abuse. It is time that students be treated as responsible adults, and the abusers be counseled rather than punished," added Rosengarth.

Rosengarth was pleased with the election turnout, claiming that it was the highest in six years.

Prof Violates Contract; Resigns

By JERRY ARTH

An assistant professor of business administration, holding full-time teaching positions at both Villanova University and the University of Baltimore — in direct violation of contract regulations at both schools — has resigned his positions.

In an article published in the Ubique, the newspaper of the University of Baltimore, it was reported that Dr. J. Charles Atkins has been teaching as a full-time faculty member at Baltimore and at Villanova.

The contract signed by Atkins at Villanova specifically prohibits a faculty member from teaching at another school: "The faculty member further agrees not to teach at any other institution, in either a full- or part-time capacity, any courses involving academic credit." Presently, Atkins is teaching four courses at Villanova and three at Baltimore.

Atkins was notified March 25 that his contract there would not be re-newed by Frederick Kelly, dean of the business school at Baltimore. Kelly then contacted Alvin Clay, dean of the Villanova College of Commerce and Finance. In the Ubique, Clay is quoted as saying, "I expect that Villanova University will take steps to terminate the employment of Atkins for cause."

When contacted by the Villanovan, Clay said, "We are aware of this activity of his, and we are taking appropriate action." And according to Dr. James J. Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs, "Though I have not talked to Atkins personally, in a letter he indicates he will resign."

Atkins is expected to complete his teaching duties for this semester at both universities. Clay said Atkins "will continue in a professional manner until the end of the semester," while Kelly of Baltimore is quoted in the Ubique as saying "failure to complete the terms of his employment would compound the severity of the situation." Atkins will also forfeit the research grant recently awarded to him by Villanova.

According to the Ubique article, the University of Baltimore currently is in contact with the Maryland State Attorney General's office, but the pursuit of legal action against Atkins has not yet been decided upon. According to both Clay and Cleary, Villanova University is not contemplating any legal action against Atkins.

Commerce and Finance professors are prohibited by the college's accrediting body, the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, from teaching classes for credit at any other school. If a situation like this were discovered and allowed to continue, said Clay, "We could jeopardize our accreditation."

A search is currently underway to find someone to replace Dr. Atkins for the fall 1981 semester. According to Clay, "It will be difficult to replace Atkins, for a Ph.D. in finance is rare," though he added, "We're going to expend every effort to get someone with his background."

When contacted by the Villanovan and asked to comment on the situation, Atkins said, "For personal reasons, I prefer not to make a comment at this time."

Former Hostage Speaks of Captivity in Iran

By MARY ANNE GRANGER and ANNE SUYDAM

Former hostage William Belk, held captive in Iran for 444 days, discussed his feelings and experiences involving Iran April 8 in the Connelly Center.

Belk emphasized that he does not consider himself a hero, saying, "The only heroes are the eight men who died. I don't think any of us feel we are heroes. I certainly do not."

"Probably the hardest thing I ever had to endure," said Belk, "was going 61 weeks without seeing a flag or hearing a patriotic song. The only flag I saw was in my own imagination."

Discussing relations between Iran and the United States, Belk said, "They did slap us in the face by denying us diplomatic immunity, but we are a big nation and can turn the other cheek."

Belk feels the United States may have made some mistakes in dealing with Iran. "Could we not have sold them more medical supplies instead of war materials?" asked Belk.

"Iran is a place that is in turmoil now and that will be for many years to come. I think they must learn to take responsibility for their own problems. And that is what the militants said they want," noted Belk.

After saying that he feels he and other hostages are symbols of a united nation, Belk opened the floor for questions.

Asked why the American embassy in Iran was vulnerable to terrorist take-over, Belk explained, "Without diplomatic im-

Former hostage William Belk at the Connelly Center. Jeff Page Photo

(Continued on page 6.)

Senate to Meet

By MARY ANNE GRANGER

The Villanova University Senate will meet Friday, April 10 in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The Agenda for the meeting includes the setting of a date for the organizational meeting of the 1981-82 University Senate for election of officers, and the scheduling of meeting dates.

Also on the agenda is the distribution of the rank and Tenure Committee Evaluation from the Rules and Review Committee.

The Senate will also hear a report on "Athletic Advisement for Scholarship Athletes" from the Athletic Advisory Committee, explained Amoroso, "This is a report that the athletic advisor worked very hard on. In essence, it recommends that a person be employed for advising scholarship athletes, so as to alleviate any problems coaches have in contacting teachers. Right now, there is a faculty member who does this who is not even compensated for helping all the athletes."

Another report to be presented at the meeting concerns a new parking policy from the University Planning and Priorities Committee. The report deals with a proposal designating on-campus parking areas. "The only way to park on campus would be if you pay a premium price and have a specific place to park," said Amoroso.

FYI

Pom-Pon Squad

Clinic and Tryouts will be conducted for the 1981-82 Pom Squad. All those interested, please attend the Clinic on Sunday, April 12, from 6-8 p.m. in Alumni Gym. Tryouts will be held on Monday, April 13, from 6-8 p.m., Alumni Gym. Please wear shorts and sneakers for practice, and be ready to work! See you there!

Dance Photos

Underclassman Dinner Dance photos will be available to be picked up beginning Monday in the Union office. Photos not picked up will be mailed in May.

French Club

There will be a French Club meeting on Tuesday, April 14 at 12:45 in Tolentine 207. All members are urged to attend.

Poetry Reading

You are cordially invited to a Poetry Reading, "Themes of Spring & Easter," on April 14, from 4-5 p.m., in the Bryn Mawr Room of the Connelly Center. Readers include Dr. Joseph Dacrema, Dr. James Murphy, Dr. John Schwarz, and Dr. Vincent Sherry. Everyone is welcome.

Lecture

David DeLaura of the University of Pennsylvania will lecture on "Religion, Poetry, and the Rise of Literary Humanism: the Nineteenth-Century Matrix" in the Cinema on Tuesday, April 14, at 8 p.m. Professor DeLaura's books include Hebrew and Hellene in Nineteenth-Century England, a study of [illegible] which established his reputation as a leading Victorian scholar. He is also the general editor of Victorian Prose: A Guide to Research, published by the Modern Language Association. His lecture is sponsored by the English Department.

Consultants

All senior consultants: Please stop by the SBDC office, Rm. A, Sheehan Hall, or Dr. Avila's office to pick up your certificates for consulting.

Volleyball Marathon

The brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon proudly present the fourth annual marathon for charity. This year's event, as last year's, will be volleyball. The charity is to benefit the Montgomery County Association for Retarded Citizens (M.A.R.C.) The marathon will take place in the Butler Annex starting at 3 p.m. Saturday, April 4, and will end at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 5. Teams are encouraged to sign up at Dougherty Hall during lunch and play. Donations are also appreciated. So, come out and have a great time, and support a good cause while you're at it.

Mentzer Award

Students, faculty, and administrators are encouraged to submit the names of nominees for this year's Thomas Mentzer Award. The award is given each year to an undergraduate who has devoted time and service in volunteer work with those less fortunate. For information or to submit a nomination, contact Dr. Patrick Nolan or Dr. James Murphy in the English Department (201 Vasey) or call 645-4647.

Need a Friend?

Is school getting you down? Are you having problems with your roommate? Do you just need someone to talk to? If so, you've got a friend in Help On Tap. H.O.T. is students helping other students. We really care. So, give us a call at 645-7232. Hours: Sunday-Friday, 6 p.m.-12 a.m., Saturday, 3 p.m.-12 a.m.

Track Meet

Tomorrow, the Wildcat Running Club is sponsoring an all-comers track meet on the Jumbo Elliott Memorial Track. This meet is open to anyone who wants to participate. The proceeds of this meet benefit the American Cancer Society. So, everyone is encouraged to enter. The events range from the 100-meter to 3000-meters and long jump. Applications can be picked up in the Connelly Center or from:

Steve Skrobala, 525-9433, Rm. 16, Sullivan.

Late registration begins at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow at the track.

Summer School

Rev. Kail Ellis, O.S.A., director of Summer Sessions, has announced the revised summer school registration procedure.

In order to be completely registered, the student must secure a registration form and have it signed by his or her academic dean. The Student must then take the form and payment, along with registration fee, to the Business Office.

As an incentive to complete the registration process early, the $15 registration fee will be waived if completed two weeks before the session.

Deadline for the first and evening sessions is May 2. Deadline for the second session is June 10.

Registration must be COMPLETED by these dates. No exceptions after these dates.

Any futher questions should be directed to the Summer Sessions Office, 2nd floor of Tolentine.

Easter Library Hours

Wednesday, April 15 — 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Thursday, April 16 — 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Friday, April 17-Monday, April 20 — CLOSED
Tuesday, April 21 — Resume Regular Schedule

Spring Concert

Who: Villanova Singers
What: Spring Concert
When: Saturday night — April 11, 1981, 8 p.m.
Where: St. Mary's Chapel
FREE ADMISSION!!
PUBLIC IS INVITED

Volunteer Expo

The Sun Company and Allstate Insurance are sponsoring a Volunteer Panorama at the King of Prussia Mall on April 23. Over 22 booths from volunteer organizations will be located near Gimbels from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. in order to acquaint people with their programs. Groups included will be the Red Cross, Special Olympics, Big Brother/Sisters,

New Course

The History Department will be offering a new course in the history of Ireland this fall. The course is entitled "The History of Ireland to 1800" and is scheduled for Monday and Wednesday from 6:00 to 7:15 p.m.

Hermeneutics

Dr. John Caputo will discuss "Hermeneutics" on Thursday, April 23, at 3:30 p.m. in the Haverford Room of the Connelly Center. Sponsored by the Philosophy Club. All are welcome.

Graduation Info

Announcements for Commencement Exercises will be distributed starting Monday, April 13 through May 15. The Office for Student Life is open for distribution Monday through Friday 9:30 a.m. until noon, and 2:00 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. The office is located on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Five Commencement announcements will be given to each graduate, with extra announcements costing $.20.

Passes are not required for Baccalaureate Mass or Commencement Exercises. In the College of Liberal Arts and College of Commerce and Finance please encourage your friends to wait until parents and relatives are seated until they take a seat.

Caps, Gowns, and Hoods will be distributed at the Following Times:

Wednesday, May 13-9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Thursday, May 14-9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

Friday, May 15-9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon.

The gowns will be distributed in Room 117 of Bartley Hall for the Colleges of Liberal Arts, Commerce and Finance, and Nursing. Gowns will be distributed in room 188 of Bartley Hall for the College of Engineering, University College, and the Graduate school.

Thank You

The sisters of DKN would like to thank those who supported their Swimathon and who contributed $120 to the Leukemia Society.

The Villanovan prints FYI as a public service to the Villanova community. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee that every announcement will appear.

Professor Meets Waldheim

By MARGE BATTISTELLI

Associate professor of political science John J. Logue, of the Common Heritage Institute, has recently edited a new book called United Nations Reform and Restructure. The main focus of the book is the 1978 "Report on the Reform and Restructuring the U.N. System" issued by former President Carter, which was the subject of the three-day Middle Atlantic Conference that took place at Villanova in 1978. The book is a consolidation by major speakers who attended and contributed to the Conference.

The text of Carter's report is contained within the book, as is the secretary of state's elaboration on that report. The report itself was in response to a provision of the State Department's Appropriations Act that required the president to outline a reform report with respect to the United Nations. The report deals with the strengthening of international law, decision-making processes in the U.N., human rights, achieving greater efficiency in the U.N., is one of major concern to Logue. Besides editing the book, he wrote an introduction to it and also a paper on funding. One of Logue's specialties is the ocean, and he proposes that the U.N. use funds from the immense mineral wealth of the ocean.

Recently, Logue met with Secretary-General of the U.N., Kurt Waldheim, who received an honorary degree from Villanova a few years ago. His meeting with Waldheim went on for half an hour, which surprised Logue greatly. Logue sensed that Waldheim was interested in the book and its proposals, but was rather skeptical as to whether this was the time to propose changes in the U.N., because of budgetary problems it has been having recently.

Professor Logue with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Logue feels that the U.N. is a strong vehicle for international peace but needs the support of people from all over the world if it is to continue being strong. He suggests that it is not realistic to offer an end without offering, along with that end, the means to accomplish it. "It is easy to criticize the U.N. and to complain about the problems of the world like Poland and Afghanistan, but if you aren't willing to support the U.N., what are you going to do? You can either do nothing about it or you can do some economic things. If not, American young men and women are going to be forced into being the 'world policemen' as has happened in the past."

Former Israeli Leader Speaks

By BOB HERMAN

Former Governor General of the West Bank, Dr. Aharon Davidi, spoke on Thursday night, April 2 at Villanova.

Davidi began by introducing an outlook on the peace process between Israel, Egypt and the Arab world.

Davidi said that his main purpose for speaking in the United States is to regain the favor of the people in this country and relieve some of the political pressure which has been put on Israel.

Viewing the peace treaty between Israel, Egypt and the Arab countries Davidi said, "We gave material assets, we got a piece of paper. We hope the paper will be followed with a cultural change at least among the Egyptian people. The Arabs must go through a cultural change which will take at least two decades to accept the paper."

Davidi felt fairly certain that there would be a socio-economic change in the Arab way of life because in 20 years the world will be less dependent on Arab oil, which will make them want peace more.

Giving credit for the agreement between the countries Davidi said, "The peace treaty with Egypt is the result of a courageous man — Sadat. It could have been done years before; he took the responsibility."

Asked what role he sees the United States playing in the next 20 years in the problems in the Middle East he said, "As long as the United States is dependent on Arab oil they must have some hold in the Arab world. We hope that the American democratic system will do as they've done before to help Israel."

To My Princess Of

Valley Green;

No doubt, you think I've forgotten;
that day that we both shared.
Chances are, you think I'm rotten,
and question if I cared.

Well, let me tell you something, princess,
that may take you by surprise.
I think of you much more, not less since that day I looked into your eyes.

There I found a certain innocence which rates beyond compare.
. . . A certain attempt at benevolence,
in the words we chose to share.

Our dreams they took command.
We set a secret date.
We walked the water hand in hand.
The hour soon grew late.

Yes, its true that I court many,
but let it be known, too that I would give up all and Plenty for one more rendezvous with you.

Let me close by simply saying
I cannot promise you twins,
though after 5 or 6 and much praying
I'm sure the Lord would fit a set in.

Signed,
The only one
for you —.

Hostage

(Continued from page 1)

munity, we cannot rely on another country's protection. It was impossible for our minor security force to protect us."

While a hostage in Iran, Belk attempted to escape, but was recaptured by the Iranians. "I was tired of being a hostage," said Belk. "It was near Christmas, December 23. I said to myself, 'It's now or never.' I was in a very small room with another man, and the Iranian guard went to sleep. I went out the front door, cut through a window with a razor, and went out on the roof." Belk was then able to get to an outside wall, but once he climbed it, he was taken back.

Asked about reports of mistreatment by the Iranians, Belk responded that he was never physically abused. "If you knew the people in Iran, you would appreciate them and their humanitarian outlook on life."

Saying he and the other hostages had no idea about the rescue attempt which resulted in the deaths of eight men, until last October, Belk commented, "It was absolutely futile. We were in a big stone building with steel doo.s. To wait until they were so well-developed, a take-over force was really futile. Some of us would have been shot."

Belk feels the media coverage of the take-over "hurt more than helped. If you give a person an opportunity to speak, they really will, and the media gave the terrorists an opportunity. It would have been best to leave it alone for awhile."

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES

BAUSCH & LOMB SOFT CONTACT LENSES $59.00

• CONTACT LENSES Fitting, Orientation, and Follow-Up. $25.00

• CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00

• THERMAL UNIT $35.00

• ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00

One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.

30 Day Money Back Guarantee on Cost of Lenses.

CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520

ARDMORE WEST SHOPPING CENTER
ARDMORE, PA.

20/20 OPTICAL CENTER

Various Academic Courses Available That're Interesting Or Needed

Take a course during one of our three SUMMER SESSIONS

Call us at 968-8100 to find out how you can register

Bucks County Community College
Swamp Road, Newtown, Pa. 18940

Hofstra Law School
SUMMER SESSION 1981

	Courses	Credits
Summer Session 1 May 26 to July 6	Conflict of Laws	3
	Criminal Procedure	4
	Debtor-Creditor	3
	Evidence	4
	Family Law	3
	Individual Income Tax	4
	Law and Medicine	3
	Real Estate Transactions	4
	Secured Transactions	3
	Unfair Trade Practices	3
Summer Session 2 July 7 to Aug. 17	Business Organizations	4
	Commercial Paper	3
	Commercial Transactions Survey	4
	Federal Courts	3
	International Law	2
	Legal Issues in Public Education	3
	Products Liability	3
	Remedies	3

For Further Information Write or Call (516) 560-3636

Hofstra School of Law

HOFSTRA UNIVERSITY, Hempstead, N.Y. 11550

Hofstra University is an equal educational opportunity employer

Gun Control Long Overdue

With the recent shooting of President Reagan, cries for gun control legislation have again emerged. Opponents of this legislation are accusing its advocates of taking advantage of the situation to promote their own interests. There are some Americans, however, who have been pushing for gun control legislation for some time. In fact, the most recent poll taken shows that over 60% of the American people favor gun control.

Opponents of gun control (the National Rifle Association in particular), use as their main argument that Americans have the right to own a handgun for legitimate reasons. The United States Constitution states, "A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed." Accordingly, opponents of gun control state that legislation will infringe on this constitutionally guaranteed right.

This argument, however, is very misleading. In fact, it is incorrect. The present gun control law before the United States Senate would still permit citizens to purchase weapons for self-defense. The law would merely require that anyone interested in purchasing a handgun be subject to a routine investigation. The intent of the law is to prohibit previous convicted felons from purchasing weapons. It is very difficult to compre hend how anyone could argue that this law is too restrictive.

This proposed law would not deprive Americans of a constitution right. In fact, it is rumored around Washington that the proposed law ha the support of Sen. Strom Thurmond, a fundamental conservative. Wit such bipartisan support, the only obstacle for such legislation is th powerful lobby groups in Washington. It is hoped that the voice of th majority of Americans will finally be heard.

Gun control legislation is only the first step in countering the eve growing violence in our society. No one claims that this legislation w guarantee that violent acts, such as the Reagan shooting, will not occur the future. On the other hand, John Hinkley (the man who attempted kill President Reagan) had a history of mental disorders and was caug with three guns at a rally for President Carter. Indeed, maybe such a la could have prevented the shooting.

letters

Jumbo Elliott

Dear Editor:

Congratulations to you and to all who joined in producing the special tribute to "Jumbo" Elliott. His memory and legacy will not be lost on the current student body; they know the man now, if only after his

It was not always so — even recently.

The day after the funeral a student athlete in one of my classes remarked, sadly, about the funeral: "The kids didn't know it was going on; they were just walking by, not realizing." A student nearby, overhearing, chimed in: "It wouldn't be that way at Delaware County Community College. They have a bulletin every day about what's going on. There's a box in every hall."

His enthusiasm challenged me, so I followed up on the daily bulletin and its production. The operator at DCCC quickly identified the office where it originated and connected me with an Assistant Dean of Students. Again, enthusiasm; yes, he put out the bulletin — something was needed and he had just started it. No, it wasn't much trouble; it took three hours of a secretary's time and they printed it right there. He was eager to share.

He gave credit to the secretary's initiatives; she keeps a box of little sketches and used them to liven up the pages. It had really caught on; groups fight to get their announcements in it. They have to limit them in different ways. And you have to group things — sports, social events, cultural events; he clearly knows his clientele. Distribution? The night school secretary put them around before she left. But he was understanding of a larger campus's size; their 15 distribution points are only in two buildings.

I was more than impressed, but there was more to come. The next morning, less than 20 hours after our conversation, I received a letter from his secretary with further details, and sample bulletins, guidelines, and other materials.

And the next day, the DCCC student was at my door with his own packet of information. He had made the trip back to his old college, picked up materials for me, eager to reinforce my interest in an area where he finds Villanova sadly lacking. The desire to communicate had clearly rubbed off on him.

I chose this major event in Villanova's history to highlight what I have long known is a grave deficiency in Villanova's internal operation. Speakers go unnoticed, flyers abound, teachers are endlessly exhorted to announce events in their classes.

Is anybody listening? Student life? Communication arts? Public relations? Or will it be once more, with feeling: "Who knows, who cares?"

Sincerely,
Barbara Agnew
Dept. of Religious Studies

R.A. Concern

Dear Editor,

I am quite disturbed about the unsigned letter that appeared in the Villanovan last week from a Resident Assistant concerning Marietta Hanigan's dismissal. I too am a Resident Assistant and I feel it was irresponsible for the letter writer to identify himself or herself as an R.A. but not as an individual. I ask of you, the anonymous R.A., if you were so vehement about the issue, why didn't you take full responsibility for your comments? Also, the slanderous remarks aimed at the Dean of Women, Rebecca Drury, were not only unprofessional but of a fallacious and highly speculative line of reasoning. I am embarrassed for you.

On the other hand, I would like to commend Marietta Hanigan, Jeanne Cribben and Carol Achtmeyer for their mature approach in bringing this issue to the attention of the Villanovan readers.

Sincerely,
Karen A. Byrne
Resident Assistant

To the Editor,

Since I found the time to publicly criticize, I would now like to take the time to publicly thank the Villanova community and Fr. President Driscoll for their supp

Initially, I would like to thank Fr. D coll for taking the time to review rediscuss my case. Prior to my mee with the President, he was described to as a fair and compassionate man. I fo this description to be most accurate. A reviewing the facts pertaining to dismissal, he assured me the incident w not scar my record.

Secondly, I would like to thank Cam Ministry. They reached out to me as a son by offering me advice and offering place to stay. Campus Ministry also beyond this and spoke to Rev. Driscol my behalf; the importance of this can n overemphasized.

Finally, I want to thank all those made a special difference. I would lik proudly top the list with my parents family, they are always there when I them. Thanks to John and Carol friendships can never by oversta Thanks to Renie, Connie, Mary, Ellen, Chris for inviting me into their apart community. Thanks to all the letter ters: Jeanne, LuAnn, 'Name on File', and Lisa for taking the time to suppor correction of a wrong doing. To the m party, Mark, Mary, Ann, Randy, Renie, Karl — thanks. Katharine and Fr thanks for starting me off on the right Sue, Diane, Denise, Re, thanks for there. A most special thanks to the b painters. And thank you Bill Clark an Villanovan staff for the fairness in you presented my story. Support like illustrates that Villanova is indeed a munity of Christians.

Thank yo
Marietta Ha

the Villanovan

BOARD OF EDITORS
Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey
Sharon Winters
News, Mary Anne Granger
Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone
Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki
Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia
Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida
Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese
Advertising, Dawn Miller
Assistant News Editor, Sara Kelly
Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

News: Carol Alkons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Lavelle, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli, Bob Herman.

Features: Mary Anne Bilz, Re Crossan, Deidre Flanagan, Susan French, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Edward Lis, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, Catherine Murphy, John Pace, Betty Rutkowski, Cathy Shiels, Kate McDonald.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Radan, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Brehm, Fred Pescatore, Mark Kelly, Echelmeier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPasca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmetag.

Sports: William Beck, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Jerry Ventresca, Larry Goanos, Michael Healy, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Coskey

Prayer Vigil

To the Editor:

I was very sorry to see no Villanovan reporters or photographers at the Black Cultural Society sponsored prayer vigal (sic.) for the Atlanta situation on Monday, April 6. Because of the people affiliated with the University that would like to know how the service went, I give this account.

Father Cedric Wilson opened the outdoor service with a prayer. Student Kevin Murray gave a brief introduction followed by the "History of the Crisis" by student Lisa Hunt. Henry Amoroso then offered his reaction to the Atlanta situation with Carlton Young following with various Bible readings. Father Cedric ended the service with a moving speech pertaining to the "Power of Prayer" in situations like this. Kevin Murray then dismissed the crowd.

The prayer vigal demonstrated another positive aspect of our university. It proved that both Black and White Villanovans will pray together for a cause that could change the course of the United States of America. By their attendance, the crowd shows everyone that they believe that "A country that prays together, stays together."

Remember that point Villanova, and say a prayer that the murders will end today. Below is a poem by a Villanova Student who is also concerned.

Stefan Roots

"Our Little Black Children"
By VETA WAN CALEB

1, 2, 3, 4
These little black children will be seen no more.
5, 6, 7, 8
A murderer is trying to annihilate,
our little black children.
9, 10, 11, 12
The murders still continue and heighten terror prevails.
13, 14, 15, 16
None has ever tasted love or been given a chance to fulfill a dream;
Just precious lives taken by something who has deemed —
Death upon our little black children.
17, 18, 19, 20*
Claimed missing or dead, these killings have been plenty.
Just remember it can happen in any vicinity;
So let's help our little black children.
As simple as this may sound,
The situation is quite profound.
So we all must gather round,
To protect our little black children.
NEED I COUNT ON?

*During the time this poem was written the death toll was "only" twenty. I'm sad to say that since then the death toll has increased by two more and three more are missing.

Candidates Respond

Dear Editor,

It has become more than obvious that the facts regarding last weeks S.G.A. presidential elections must be objectively placed in perspective. I am proud to say that the campaign proved to be a highly constructive forum on the problems facing students at Villanova. While one must accept not being the victor it is disheartening to be labeled a cheater when all you did was stand up and articulate what others were thinking.

With all due respect to a very highly qualified and well intentioned election commission there appeared to be a lack of communication between it's very members. While every attempt was made to abide by the commissions rules the problems arose through contradiction. Yes, in the final tabulation I did exceed the expenditure limitation by less than a dollar. This occurred when I assessed for materials that I was told I would not be assessed for earlier in the campaign. While my campaign workers were resourceful enough to obtain sheets from the maids to make signs, on the day before the campaign began I informed the commission of the signs and offered not to use them if they would cause any problems. Permission was granted stipulating that the other candidates would be allowed the same option to make signs out of non-assessable materials. Five days later I was assessed for these materials as they were labeled a "major tool" in my campaign. Upon this my expenses exceeded one hundred dollars by forty-four cents. This letter is not written out of malice towards an equitable elections commission but in redemption of the prevalent misconception that my campaign blatantly disregarded the rules outlined by the elections commission.

I commend our newly elected student body president, Bob Rosengarth on running one of the most upstanding issue oriented campaigns possible. Finally I am content to say that through the campaign which outlined some of the problems affecting the so-called "Villanova experience" one of the goals of my candidacy has been attained. A new interest has been generated and inroads have been made in killing at least some of the apathy that has been induced by an administration indifferent to our needs.

Sincerely,
John J. Pisano

Dear Editor:

I would like to extend my heart-felt appreciation to the student body, in particular that of the College of Commerce & Finance, for their patience and kindness during the past weeks' campaigns. Not only do I thank those who supported me at the polls, but also the many people who greeted me graciously and gave me a few minutes time when I came by their door. It was an experience I'll always remember, for it gave me a chance to meet many of the great people who make Villanova what it is.

My warmest and most sincere thanks go to the best supporters I could even have hoped to have — the brothers of L.T.D. Never before had I encountered such a group of warm, caring, friendly, and industrious people in my life. Their enthusiasm for my cause was fabulous, and I will be indebted to them always. In their work, they show the great sense of pride they have for this school — I am fortunate to have shared in this with them.

Once again, I thank all those involved in this year's elections — students, friends, the elections commission, and L.T.D. As I stated in the Villanovan two weeks earlier, I promise to do the best job I possibly can.

Sincerely,
Paul Tufano
C & F
Senator-elect

Swimming Complaint

Dear Editor,

I am expressing a discontent shared by many students regarding the reporting of sports by the Villanovan this past semester. The lack of coverage on the recent results and highlight performances of Varsity teams other than Basketball and Hockey has hurt the athletes, our fans, and Villanova as a whole. I refer specifically to the minute area devoted to the reporting of the Varsity swimming team's performance at the Big East meet in Storres, Connecticut. Quite a drama developed that weekend and it was practically ignored.

The Villanova Swimming team ralleyed from 21 points behind Syracuse entering the third day of competition; and with a remarkable team effort, defeated Syracuse by 18 points in the final event to capture the only Big East Conference Championship of any team at Villanova. This spectacular accomplishment was highlighted in 16 lines of "The Week in Sports" section of your March 13 issue, while the basketball team's second place finish at the Big East Tournament was covered with two lenghty articles. I respect the importance of the basketball team to Villanova, but this lack of interest in our accomplishment by the paper has repressed the image of swimming at Villanova. Our image is as important to us as it is to the basketball team because it is a powerful force that motivates us to acheive for ourselves and the glory of Villanova in the face of opponents.

How many teams have had every member score points in championship competition? On the final day at the Big East Meet, EVERY TEAM MEMBER SCORED POINTS. Outstanding performances by everybody clinched the team championship. We exhibited great courage, pride, and determination in representing Villanova, and we believe it was fitting and exciting news to report to our fellow students. Not reporting it deprived the University of the knowledge that Villanova's honor is covered in our respected area as it is by so many other teams and organizations.

If not for the student body, may I suggest you improve your coverage of these events for your own benefit. A blatent untruth was told in last weeks article reporting the Hockey results when it was said that other Villanova teams can boast of making the finals of their respective championships, but never winning the "big one." The mens swimming was deeply injured by that remark. The lack of reporting made your own office unable to assimilate facts, and that article magnified the hockey team's win at the expense of our Victory at the Big East. You might ask the women's track team their feelings about that remark in light of their capturing the EAIAW Division II Title. I also suspect it is purely coincidental that a member of the Villanovan staff is a member of the hockey team. (Oh look, he wrote the article too.)

I conclude by saying The Villanova Swimming Team is the 1981 Big East Champion, set 6 Big East records, have been considered the greatest team in Villanova history by 27 year veteran head coach Ed Geizz, and none of this was adequately reported to the student body by the Villanovan. I write this letter in the interest of the swim team and the student body so they might take more pride in Villanova owing the sport of swimming is in the hands of determined atheletes maintaining Villanova's reputation.

I congratulate the [illegible] victory of the Hannigan cup, and the fine performance of the basketball team in the NCAA tournament. I believe it is only fair to cover sports equally when such fine performances are put forth; therefore, we still request coverage of this important sporting event and believe it is fair to publish our accomplishment with more than a paragraph.

Sincerly yours,
Darell Linder
Co-Captain
1981-82 Swim Team

Editor's Note:

I understand your concern and I would like to explain myself and the situation the Sports editors encountered.

The Villanovan, dating March 13, was our first issue after our Spring Break. At our weekly lay-out meeting we were told that Budweiser had bought the entire back page of the sports section to do a full spread on the NCAA tournament. Consequently, the stories we had for our back page, men's swimming, women's track and ice hockey had no place to go. Not necessarily that these three stories would all be on the back page but we just had no space for them. We concluded that the only thing to do was condense all three stories into "The Week in Sports." We then considered doing an article the following week. But who wants to read month old news?

You write:

"A blatent untruth was told in last weeks article (March 27) reporting the Hockey results when it was said that other Villanova teams can boast of making the finals of their respective championships, but never seem to win the "big one."

But if you go back and look at the article on March 27, it reads:

"They did have the leagues leading scorer . . . top goaltender . . . dominate the All Star team and beat Delaware, 13-1. So it seemed fit that this team should win the championship round of the playoffs. But past Villanova teams could also boast of all these fine accomplishments but could never seem to win the "big one."

I am sure if you look at it again you will see your mistake. What does Villanova ice hockeye failure to win the "big one" have to, do with swimming or any other Villanova sport?

I have been writing ice hockey articles for three years now and I enjoy it. Because I became Sports editor I am not going to sacrifice something I enjoy doing. Ice hockey got more press my first two years than it did this year.

Thank you for your opinion but I thought I would just like to take a second to explain the situation my fellow editors and I were in. I hope you understand the predicament we encountered and my desire to continue writing ice hockey articles. I also hope you take the time to look at the March 27 issue and notice "the remark that deeply injured the men's swim team," is not really there.

Sincerely yours,
Jim Femia
Captain
1980-81 ice hockey team
1980-81 Sports editor

Irate Seniors

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter from the "Irate Seniors" which appeared in last week's Villanovan. The "seniors" complained about an error in the March 20th Villanovan which stated the date for the Senior Dinner Dance as Friday, April 11th. True, this is an error since the dance is being held on Saturday, April 11. However, it's difficult to believe that these seniors really became "irate" over this error, and looked upon it as a reflection of poor organization and the lack of their social lives.

Any function or event involves many different stages of preparation by many different people. It's easy for anyone to incorrectly look at a calendar or mistype something. However, it's a shame when the well meaning efforts of one person are criticized and blamed for the so-called "lack of Villanova's social life."

It's unfortunate that these seniors have nothing better to do than look for fault in other's work. The activity and social life of [illegible] Maybe if the "Irate Seniors" spent a little more time in helping plan and run events, they would appreciate the effort that goes into them and might be a little less inclined to go around beating their gums.

Sincerely,
Candace L. Rush
Class of '81

Draft Discussion

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank all those responsible for organizing the panel discussion on the draft and draft registration last March 31st. Dr. Joseph Betz of the philosophy department did most of the organizing in conjunction with the Social Action Committee which sponsored the event and all went very well.

One thing did strike me as odd. Considering the impact and relevance of the issue to almost everyone on this campus, I was amazed at the lack of turnout. How is it that such a golden opportunity to get a more informed insight on a topic so potentially pertinent to one's future could be overlooked by so many?

The entire discussion was very professionally conducted. Kevin O'Leary did a very good job in his role as moderator. The panel itself was well selected in that they represented different aspects and points of view concerning the draft. What I appreciated most was the fact that, whether pro or anti-draft, all agreed on one thing: the important thing in all you do in life is to follow your conscience. If that message were all I carried home with me at the end of the evening, my time was well spent.

Gratefully
Tim Sewsig

Editor's Note: The "Letters to the Editor" section is a public forum. All letters must be typed and should not exceed 300 words.

All letters must be signed, though names will be withheld when an overriding reason is present.

WGC

Awards to be Presented

Six faculty members were nominated, instead of the usual five, for the 1981 Lindback Award, because of a tie vote. The award is given for distinguished teaching at Villanova.

The nominees are: James J. Clark (Eco.), John A. Doody (Phi.), Rita M. Ehrmann (Mat.), Michael C. Kelly (ChE).), Oliver G. Ludwig (Chm.), and Bernard P. Prusak (R.St.). The ballots were cast Monday, March 30, and Tuesday, March 31, by 204 faculty members and 474 day undergraduates. The two winners of the award are selected by Villanova's president and announced at May's commencement exercises. Each award carries a $1000 prize.

Named to the honorable mention category are: Emily M. Binns (R.St.), Charissa J. Chou (Acc.), Mary Margaret Cribben (L.S.), Joseph R. DesJardins (Phi.), John Immerwahr (Phi.), Joseph L. Lucia (Eco.), June W. Lytel (Eng.), Martin J. Manley (Psc.), Richard J. Salvucci (Eco.), James P. Tuck (Psy.), and Barry S. Young (Soc.).

The Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation makes these Lindback awards available to a select number of colleges in the Delaware Valley to encourage effective teaching on the undergraduate level. The awards have been made on an annual basis at Villanova since 1961.

The committee in charge of the voting for nominees is comprised of members of the Blue Key Society and Joseph George, Jr., of the History Department, who serves as chairman.

Seminar Considers Aid

By DELPHINE STILLGER

A meeting to inform students of probable cuts in financial aid for the 1981-82 school year was held by the Student Government, April 7.

Arthur Switzer and Vincent Femia, financial aid officers, mentioned possible cuts in federal and local aid from the government, and discussed the impact these cuts could have on students.

All local and federal aid programs will go through thorough evaluation and probable budget reductions in the coming months. Femia stated that since proposed changes have not been precisely defined, "We won't know where we stand until the government decides how much it will access to federal aid programs."

"We don't know the precise changes," remarked Switzer. "But, we can expect substantial cuts, meaning fewer dollars for our students to meet their cost of attendance. Fewer students will qualify for grants and those who qualify will qualify for less."

Since Villanova University administers federal dollars, students here will suffer from all cuts. Switzer suggests that "We should get busy and rally our friends and family to write letters to our representatives in Harrisburg and our congressmen in Washington."

Polish Crisis Examined

By RICHARD DI STEFANO

Professor Alexandra Orzechowska of the University of Lublin in eastern Poland discussed "The Polish Crisis" with an audience of about 50, on Thursday afternoon, April 2.

At the outset of the hour-long lecture, Professor Orzechowska emphasized the necessity for Poland "to make its ideology clear and consistent." During the past 25 years there have been five major upheavals, culminating in the most recent show of resistance to the government during the past year.

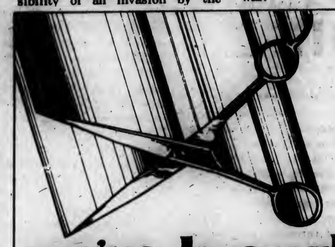
After the fourth uprising in 1976, the independent trade union, Solidarity, ushered in a new pattern of political thinking: "Organizations to represent political and social interests were established . . . The Communist Party did not have control." Thus a new class of political leaders appeared, according to Orzechowska.

Orzechowska asserted that the two dominant social organizations in Poland are now trade unions and student groups. She noted that unionization is now available to certain workers previously denied this privilege, farmers, for example.

"In Poland, the Roman Catholic Church is not a real political force, and it does not try to be," noted Orzechowska.

There must be political and social reform in Poland, not merely economic changes. The Polish government must be able to make fundamental alterations in the political system, not merely in the government itself, continued Orzechowska.

When the talk came to the possibility of an invasion by the U.S.S.R., Orzechowska observed that "the common opinion in Poland is that the army will fight against the Soviet Union if necessary . . . the idea of Soviet intervention is unpopular." She feels that a confrontation is "not likely but possible. Poland is not so important to the U.S.S.R.," to risk war.



we've brought it to VILLANOVA

talent and reputation!

PC & C Haircutters

1040 Lancaster Ave.
Bryn Mawr
527-CUTS

ATTENTION: GRADUATE NURSES

A Very Important Message That Concerns Your Career Development

Shadyside Hospital is a 454 bed acute care teaching hospital with an established reputation in providing excellence in patient care. To continue our pursuit of excellence, we are offering a highly comprehensive and personalized MODULAR ORIENTATION PROGRAM to new graduate nurses. The program is designed to give the new graduate the time, personal support, and structured environment conducive to learning and growth during the transition from student to staff nurse.

For further information and to learn about our excellent salary and fringe benefits package, please call Nancy Yandora, RN at (412) 622-2233 or return coupon below.

SHADYSIDE HOSPITAL
5230 Centre Avenue □ Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania □ 15232

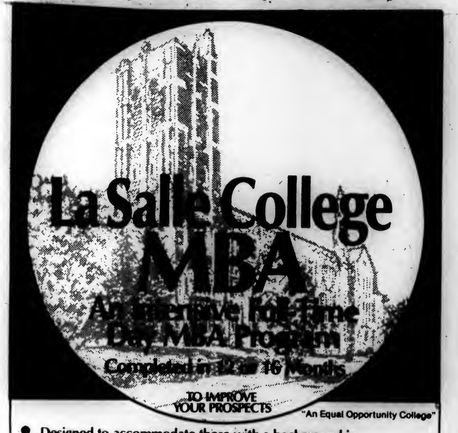
Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Telephone _____

Date of Graduation _____



- Designed to accommodate those with a background in Liberal Arts, Science or Business
- Providing Concentrations in: • Accounting • Management • Finance • Marketing
- For Professional Careers in Industry, Government and Non-Profit Sector
- Financial Aid and Graduate Assistantships Available

For further information call: 215-951-1059

Or, if you prefer, fill in and mail coupon today.

LA SALLE COLLEGE MBA
Olney Avenue at 20th Street Box 888
Philadelphia, PA 19141 8

Please mail me Application and Current MBA Catalog

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____ Phone _____

Undergraduate Institution _____

Memories of Jim Croce

Some Faces Are Not Forgotten

By LAURIE ALMEDA

Sometimes college life seems as if it is a never ending succession of faces. Each new semester is a mixture of new professors, classes, and faces. Semesters pass into summers and into semesters — faces are forgotten.

One face passed through Villanova and graduated in 1965 with a B.S. in Social Studies. There was something special about this face though — it was not forgotten.

Before Jim Croce had made a lasting impression upon America with his music, he had made a special place for himself in the memories of Charles S. Palazzolo of the Sociology department. Palazzolo's memories of Croce are not of a superstar singer living the life of a celebrity; but rather, they are memories of a unique student who offered warmth to the people who were a part of his life.

While Croce was attending Villanova, Palazzolo counseled and advised him as a student. "Jim was the warmest, kindest, nicest person," recalls Palazzolo. "He was a serious student who loved music."

As a student at Villanova, Croce led an active musical life. He played and sang with "The Spires," a part of the Glee Club at the time. Croce also originated the folk group "The Havenets" within the Glee Club in 1962. He worked at the campus radio station (WWVU) as an interviewer and disc jockey on a folk and blues show. Croce often played at frat parties or wherever else he could find an audience.

"I remember that he had an engagement at the Main Point once," stated Palazzolo.

"Jim played at my daughter's seventh birthday party," recalled Palazzolo. "He must have played for an hour and a half to two hours. The girls just loved listening to him play and sing. They seemed to especially love the Australian folk songs that he played," he continued. "Jim also played all the songs that children like. He delighted the girls by singing verses of 'Puff the Magic Dragon' that they had never heard before.

"At the time, Jim told me he had a repertoire of over 1000 songs. My daughter's birthday was a pleasant experience for everyone."

When Croce was a junior at Villanova, he was chosen from hundreds of applicants as one of the four members of "The American Folk Quartet." The government chose these four young musicians and sponsored them on a tour of the Middle East.

Jim Croce with the "American Folk Quartet" which toured the Middle East in 1964.

"Jim received a music grant to go to Iran," stated Palazzolo. "When he returned, Jim gave me an Iranian dagger and Moslem prayer beads as gifts. Jim was always thinking about other people.

"I'd often see Jim walking across campus alone," recalled Palazzolo. "He was an introverted type of person and somewhat of a loner. But he was also warm and friendly with the people he knew."

After Croce graduated from Villanova, he began doing a variety of things. He married a woman he had met while he was in college. Croce completed a stint in the army and took a job as a teacher. All the while, his interest in music continued.

"Jim didn't really talk about having a career in music," added Palazzolo. "He thought about serious things. Jim wanted a college education; but he wanted a musical life too. When Jim and his wife cut their first album he sent me a copy. I don't think it became a big success but I'm proud of it."

Jim Croce died on Sept. 20, 1973, when his chartered plane crashed on take-off after a concert at Northwestern Louisiana University.

"Jim's death seemed untimely to me," stated Palazzolo. "I think he was just about to gain a national reputation when he died. I'll always remember him as a warm, generous, kind, emotional person."

Indian Culture Depicted

By SHARON WINTERS

Art can preserve the essence of a culture better than any history account. Although the facts of a society can be accumulated where the residents lived — the art of that same group of beings brings them to life and makes them human and vital. Through execution and preservation, the art of mankind expresses his inner self, his desires, hopes and dreams. The humanity of a culture is thus revealed.

A portion of one of the older world civilizations is currently being exhibited at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. "Manifestations of Shiva" reveals the character of the Indian people via their representation of this deity.

Shiva is considered to be the all-encompassing, the Creator, the Preserver and the Destroyer of the Universe. The images of the God are as diverse as his titles. He is revealed in art as a man, a lord who is half woman, and a husband. Shiva is also a grotesque destroyer wreathed in human skulls.

His images are carved in stone for posterity with care. Ornate, laboriously carved images of this powerful Indian deity evidence the impact on those who worship him. Shiva is a god who shows the character of his followers. He is both the beginning and the end for them. The cycle of their lives is manifested by his form and the worship of him.

The Indian art is as stylized and elaborate as their conceptions of Shiva. The images are busy and active. The god is portrayed as a mobile force, a continuim. Life for the Indian people continues beyond life, this is reflected in their art. Shiva, the demon, appears to be ready to walk forward, even in stone. He is not a stagnant force in sculpture, but rather, a god momentarily subdued for human observation.

Shiva is a complex figure in the Indian-Hindu culture. His many forms, attributes, and the manners in which he is worshipped by his followers are the subject of a multimedia presentation at the Art Museum until June 7.

A one-hour documentary, "Manifestations of Shiva," dramatically shows the worship of Shiva in India today. The film augments the art exhibit.

The sculptures, water colors and reliefs are available for regularly scheduled daily tours.

Campus Clip

Jeff Page Photo

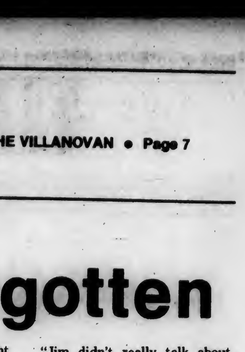
Hundreds of people gathered outside Dougherty Hall on Wednesday to watch a Pie-Eating Contest. The contest is just one of ten events during Greek Week, which will include a chariot race today at 4:00 on the Maintenance Field. LXA won the Pie-Eating Contest, but the first place fraternity will not be known until all the events are over.

Captain "Video" Captures Campus

By KATHI IANNACONE

Two years ago, the Villanova Union purchased extensive video equipment. Not much use was made of this equipment until now. On Wednesday, April 22, the Visual Arts Committee of the Villanova Union, in cooperation with the Audio Visual department of the Library, will sponsor the first Video Day.

Video Day, beginning at 10 a.m. and continuing until six, will consist mostly of Villanova programming. This includes short pretaped flicks of original Villanova talent, live hookups, on campus interviews, and popular national T.V. shows. The Connelly Center Commons Lounge marks the spot in which the big screen will be set.



Mark Cheshul, chairperson of Video.
Jeff Page Photo

"Video Day is a unique type of television because it is home based on the campus," remarked Mark Cheshul, video chairperson of the Union. "It gives insight into facts about Nova that normal T.V. would not."

A tentative schedule has been set. One of the features is called "Live at Noon." In this noontime interview, Fr. John Deegan, vice-president of student life; Bob Rosengarth, 1981-82 student government president; and Mark Tuchman, Connelly Center director will give some opinions about Villanova. At 3 p.m., General Hospital will be shown. Intertwined with all of the day's events will be promotion clips of Villanova's upcoming events for the last week of school.

Cheshul was the originator of the idea. He feels that "the Visual Arts Committee needed something to expose the video possibilities available to the university. The high traffic area of the Connelly Center will attract people and hopefully get more people involved."

Camera work for Video Day is being done by Mark Asteris. Asteris is experienced in handling most of the technical arrangements needed for maximizing production. Cheshul and Asteris planned the cinematic techniques for the filming of Video Day. Cheshul noted that this project has built up a good relationship between the Visual Arts Committee and the Audio Visual department.

Other production staff members include Steve Burroughs, Sandy Marabella, Maureen Humphreys and Kimberly Flynn.

Those performers who were selected to be taped prior to Video Day were sought because of their past experience as entertainers or from Big Event applications. The 15 minute pre-taped talent include spots by Beppy Wallace, Bobbie and Linda McAlister, Mary Pat Henry and Mary Alice Rice, Ben Daniels, Mary Burke, Tom Rue, and Carl Graff. Each of the performers will be interviewed in addition to their display of talent.

Cheshul would like to see the video projects continue. He further commented, "If the whole project dies after I graduate then all of the fun and excitement will have been for nothing. It is my hope that this day will inspire others to do extensive projects for the future."

UNION PAGE

The Grease Band is coming

April 30 in the Field House

REMEMBER . . .

Did you know that every package of cigarettes is worth free time for a patient in need of a dialysis machine?

The Union is getting involved to help those in need. We encourage you to save all of your empty cigarette packets and then bring them to the Union Office.

It's worth saving a life. . .

SOUTH STREET DANCE COMPANY

explores modern dance on:

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 2:00 P.M.

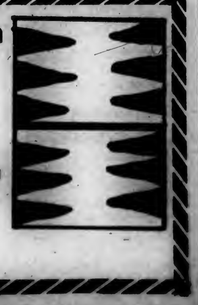
CONNELLY CENTER CINEMA

Admission: $2.00

Come Celebrate National Dance Week
Enjoyable for young and old alike

Backgammon Tournament

$1.00



Sign up in C.C. Game Room

APRIL 10 - 15

SPRING FEVER WEEK BRINGS TO YOU...

SIMON SEZ

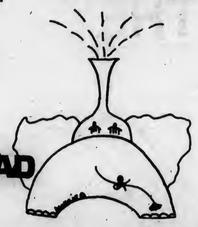
by
Bob Schaffer

There will be a series of teasers in front of the Connelly Center followed by an hour show.

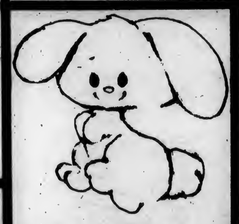
Tuesday, April 28
12:00 - 1:30

"SIMON SEZ. . . BE THERE"

CAMEL & ELEPHANT RIDES



APRIL 30
10 - 4
IN THE QUAD
50¢



The Union extends to you and your family

A Happy Easter

and a Restful Vacation

Farewell — B.Y.O.B. for Seniors

(23 days 'til Graduation)

Featuring:
Music by Stage Crew
and
The Comedy of Grover Silcox
April 23, at 8:30
In Day Hop

Proof of age required.

UNION PAGE

SENIOR WEEKEND

David Bromberg Concert

Connelly Center 8:00 p.m.
Special Bonus to Seniors
$1.00 off ticket price
For complete information inquire at Connelly Center ticket office

Friday, April 10, 1981

Free Outdoor Concert
in Kennedy Mall
Time: 1:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Band: Trix

Sunday, April 12, 1981

raindate Monday, April 13
7:30 - 10:30 Kennedy Mall

THE BIG EVENT

A variety talent show
April 28 - at 8:00 p.m.
on
Kennedy Mall
Applications Due Today!!!
Auditions April 22
in the West Lounge at 7:00 p.m.

VIDEO DAY
APRIL 22 - 1981

An entire day of programming in the Connelly Center Commons Lounge
10 - 6

Highlights include:
- Live On-Campus Interviews
- Pre-taped Entertainment
- General Hospital

All on the Big Screen —
Stay tuned for further info.

CINEMA

CULTURAL FILM SERIES:

Sunday, April 12 at 7:30
in Cinema

CRIA

Childhood can be a most terrifying time, full of fears, loneliness and the unknown. Directed by Carlos Saura, CRIA explores the darker side of childhood, and the pains of growing up. It is about innocence, superstition and knowledge.

Tuesday, April 21 at 3:00
in Cinema.
Wednesday, April 22 at 7:30
in Cinema

FAHRENHEIT 451

Another free event from the Sci-Fi Mini series, this story confronts the situation of a new world in which once diverse people have forsaken their diversities for the dull grinding regimentation of absolute conformity.

NOW SHOWING:

XANADU
Friday, April 10
at 7:00 and 9:30 - Cinema

COMING ATTRACTIONS

R . THE ROSE

Thursday, April 23 at 7:00 and 9:30
and
Friday, April 24 at 7:00 and 9:30
Cinema

Can You Canoe?

Villanova's Student Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers is again participating in the Annual ASCE Student Conference. This conference includes a student paper contest on topics of Civil Engineering and the Concrete Canoe Race. The race will be held Saturday, April 25th from 9:00 to 12:00 on the Schuylkill River in Fairmount Park.

This year's canoe design and construction is being headed by Tony Anania and Bob Kuserk. The only criteria is that the canoe is being constructed entirely of concrete and metal materials.

Villanova's canoe is a 14 foot long chicken wire frame covered with approximately 1/2 inch of concrete. The entire vessel will weigh approximately 250 pounds, and the total weight with 2 paddlers is about 580 pounds. Among the participating schools are Villanova, Drexel, University of Penn, Temple and Widener. The days events will include a men's race, women's race, mixed race, and a faculty race. The race will be followed by a "bar-b-q" for anyone who wishes to stay.

The Student Paper Competition will take place Friday, April 24th at Drexel University from 9:00 to 4:00. The same schools participating in the canoe race will be participating in the conference. Villanova will be represented by John DelFerro and his presentation: The Impact of Transportation on Underdeveloped Nations.

Any Villanova spectators who would like directions can pick up a map in the Civil Engineering Office — 139 Tolentine Hall.

Prof. Writes Text

By LAURIE ALMEDA

For two years, Charles S. Palazzolo, professor of sociology, committed himself to writing "Small Groups An Introduction," a textbook dealing with the sociology of small groups.

Published late last fall, the textbook is now employed in Palazzolo's sociology course "Group Dynamics." Other universities across the country, such as the University of New Mexico, are also using the textbook in sociology courses.

"I could never find a decent book to teach my course," commented Palazzolo. "I would draw from different references; but then I began accumulating material from too many places for my students to handle."

"Small Groups An Introduction" represents a significant body of research to Palazzolo. Friendships, informal work experiences, and family are focused upon in the textbook. Palazzolo examines how the effect of size significantly changes relationships found within these small groups.

"I commit myself to one thing at a time," Palazzolo explained. "When I reached the decision to write the book, I requested a semester sabbatical. For a few days during Christmas vacation I relaxed. Then on Dec. 26, I went to the Library of Congress and began my research."

New areas of sociology, such as the effects of physical environment, distance, and the concept of space upon small groups, are ex-

(Continued on page 11)

Suggestions for next Semester's CULTURAL FILM MINI-SERIES Fall, 1981

Select one choice from each category.*

Actors/Actresses	Directors	Genres
Bogart	Hitchcock	Musical
Garbo	Altman	Comedy
Brando	Ford	Horror
Marx Brothers	Fellini	Western
Monroe	Bunuel	Surrealism
Other	Other	Other

*Drop your ballot in the box located on the information desk of the Connelly Center by Wednesday, April 15.

the Villanovan

Personals

We would like to send our deepest appreciation to Jim "The Flying Mexican?" (snort — snort) and to J.L. the LIVELY sexy stud (do you always sleep in those pajamas?) for cutting the evening short. We really couldn't have taken it much longer.
Love, 2 Blondes and a Brunette

P.S. Hey Steve, when sitting in a chair balance is essential!!

Dear Greg,
Congratulations on Albany Medical. Knew you could do it! Wish you the best of luck.
Signed
Wish You Knew Me!

Mark Ryan,
Thanks for making my 21st birthday a memorable occasion. I'll never forget it! I love you soooo much!
L.A.V.

Classifieds

HOUSE FOR SUBLET
3 females needed to sublet house for summer. 100 yards from Bartley Hall. Washer, dryer, inexpensive, fully furnished. Call Nancy at 527-6670.

1 or 2 rooms for rent for summer months. $100 per month, in Narberth. Contact: Pat, 664-9618.

WANTED: Roommates for the summer. Bryn Mawr Courts, 4 bedrooms, 1 bath. Call 525-9419, Room 215 or Room 220.

WANTED: Female to share apt. with 4 other roommates in Bryn Mawr Courts. Info: Donna Hayes, 219 Sheehan.

WANTED: Two girls to share apartment for the months of May, June, July and August. Located in LaMaison Apts. in Wayne. Close to transportation. Price negotiable. For more information, call 688-7869.

Male student looking to rent room for summer months in Main Line area. Call Bill, 527-6764, Rm. 361, St. Mary's.

Apartment available for subletting in Bryn Mawr Courts. Large enough for 1-6 girls. For May, June, July. Contact Kathy 525-9553.

Looking for subletters for a 2 bedroom apt. in Bryn Mawr during summer months. Call Gail at 525-9419, Room 209.

Wanted: Female roommates to share large apartment in Bryn Mawr Courts for the months of May, June, July, and August. Call Jacqui or Shirley, 527-3146.

1 Bedroom (sleeps 2) available for either 2 responsible guys/gals located in a three bedroom beautifully furnished and situated house in Avalon. If interested please contact Matt Durst, 449-5697 or Bill Connors, Room No. 18, Austin.

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 765-5999.

SUMMER HELP WANTED
Yard Work
Chadds Ford Area
388-1373

FOR SALE
1971 Ford Galaxy. Runs great, $250. Call Jack, 356-2560.

SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE
Applicants are now being considered for the 1981 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts, Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Theater Director, Piano Accompanist and Singing, Archery, Tennis, Trampoline, Gymnastics, Photography, Cheerleading, Jazzercize, Scouting and Nature Study, A.R.C. Swimming Instructor, Boating, Canoeing and Water Skiing Instructor or General Athletics. COUNSELOR UNIT LEADERS must be college graduate experienced in camping. Able to plan schedule for activities, evening programs, etc. Supervise large staff. Write Camp Office, 700 Ardmore Ave., No. 102, Haverford Village, Ardmore, Pa. 19003 or phone Miss Sherman, 215-649-9622 or 215-667-7801.

NURSES

$14,300 to $16,500 IS THE SALARY OF AN AF NURSE

PLUS: CHOICE OF ASSIGNMENT PRIOR TO OBLIGATION
5 MONTH INTERNSHIP
UNLIMITED SICK LEAVE
AUTOMATIC PAY INCREASE
CONTINUED EDUCATION

SPEC: PRACTITIONERS, MIDWIFERY, ANESTHESIA, FLIGHT, CRITICAL CARE, ENV PUB HEALTH RESEARCH, NEONATOLOGY, ONCOLOGY

BASIC TRAINING NOT REQUIRED
NO OBLIGATION WITH APPLICATION

AIR FORCE
A great way of life.

AEROBIC DANCE
"Chorus Line To Better Health"
Increases Cardiovascular Endurance • Trims - Shapes - Firms to Music • Provides More Stamina and Mental Relaxation
8 one-hour sessions $27.00 Twice Weekly
Registration required - Fridays 9 P.M.
Call Mary Ellen McMonigle, M.Ed.
Peter Kadel Dance Studio 964-1610
28 Lehigh Avenue, Devon 19333

LSAT GMAT
GRE/GRE - Psyche
* Experienced Faculty
* Full 36 hour course
* Central Location
* Up-to-date Materials
See our posters or Call or Write for FREE Brochure:
382-3790
DAEDALUS education services
305 Bryan St., Havertown, Pa. 19083

THESIS WRITING?
Tired of paying for entire retype revisions?
Because word processing has memory storage, large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.
For Pricing Info, Call
WORD PROS
674-9800

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY AT THE TOP OF THE MAIN LINE
SUMMER SESSIONS 1981
GRADUATE and UNDERGRADUATE Courses
DAY and EVENING Sessions
Conveniently scheduled DAY and EVENING Sessions BUSINESS ENGINEERING
NATURAL SCIENCES
SOCIAL SCIENCES
COMPUTER SCIENCE MATHEMATICS
LANGUAGES • THE ARTS

SESSION I	SESSION II	EVENING Session
Wednesday May 27 to Wednesday June 24	Thursday June 25 to Thursday July 30	Wednesday May 27 to Thursday July 30

REGISTRATION Begins Thursday March 26
6 Great Reasons to Select Villanova Summer
• GRADUATE in 3 or 3½ years • SAVE on Tuition
• FULFILL Requirements for Graduate or Professional School
• START a New Major or a New Career Path
• TAKE Special Interest Courses • Student Housing Available
For a 1981 Summer Catalog, call: (215) 645-4320
"An Equal Opportunity University"

CENTRAL PARK
THRUST
Monday's DRINKS ARE HALF PRICE.
Monday SYN

RICHARD & COMPANY
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
VILLANOVA STUDENT DISCOUNTS
APPOINTMENTS REQUESTED
527-2080
773 E. Lancaster, Villanova

"ONE OF THE YEAR'S BEST."
Los Angeles Times, Charles Champlin
New York Daily News, Rex Reed
Saturday Review, Judith Crist
National Review, John Simon
New York Post, Archer Winston
Associated Press, Fred Yager
Breaker Morant
PG
A New World Quartet/Films Inc Release
BUDCO BRYN MAWR 1 LANCASTER AVE. BRYN MAWR • LA 5-2447
STARTS TODAY!
ALSO STARTS TODAY AT AREA THEATRES

30 YEARS AGO, WE PIONEERED LOW FARES TO EUROPE. TODAY WE'RE STILL AT IT.
$189
ONEWAY, STANDBY NY TO LUXEMBOURG
Luxembourg to New York return ticket, with confirmed reservation: $249.50 (½ normal round trip fare) when purchased with standby fare. Free wine with dinner, cognac after. Prices effective through May 14, 1981, subject to change and government approval. Purchase tickets in the U.S.A.
See your travel agent or call Icelandair. In New York City 757-8585; elsewhere call 800-555-1212 for the toll free number in your area.
ICELANDAIR
NOW MORE THAN EVER YOUR BEST VALUE TO EUROPE

OBLIQUITIES

(Continued from page 10)

Groups

plored in Palazzolo's textbook.

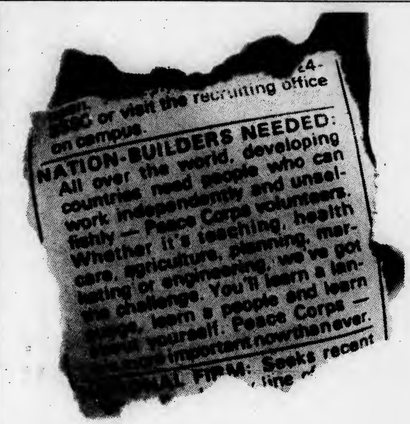
"There was a lot of legwork involved with the writing of the book," stated Palazzolo. "I spent a great deal of time in the library. The textbook is an accumulation of a massive body of research from the 1950's and 60's. In my research, I found four libraries — Villanova, Haverford, the New York Public Library, and the Library of Congress — to be particularly helpful."

In order to get the idea of the textbook off the ground, Palazzolo first had to find a publisher who was interested in a book dealing with the subject matter. Judy Joseph, vice-president of D. Van Nostrand publishing company, was interested by Palazzolo's project.

"I have to attribute part of the success of the text to Judy Joseph and Donna DeBenectis. They did a thorough job of editing; I was thrilled with the results," Palazzolo commented. "They picked up a lot of little things that I would have missed. Because of that, I think the textbook turned out really well."

"Small Groups An Introduction" has been selling well since it was published late last fall. Although the textbook has been doing well from a financial viewpoint, Palazzolo found another aspect of being a first-time published author more important.

"With the publication of my book, I proved to myself that I could do something beneficial for my course. If it makes money for the publisher I'll be happy," explained Palazzolo. "The only reason I'd like to see the book sell well is so I know that other sociologists accept my work. The biggest reward I received from writing the textbook was seeing my work completed. I proved to myself that I could do it."



Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers
For information contact a recruiter, Mon.-Fri., 9-5pm: U.S.Customs House, Rm. 102A, 2nd & Chestnut St., Philadelphia, PA 16109. Toll Free (800) 462-1589 Ext. 66.

PART-TIME EVENINGS
Major investment firm in King of Prussia is hiring individuals who would like to work as investment representatives. You will receive an excellent background in investment and financial planning. If you are a responsible individual and interested in communicating with investors, please call C Kurtas or L. Harker at 964-9340 for further info. or to arrange a personal interview. Begin to plan your career with us.

Are You...
Thinking of a New Career??
Changing Fields??

☆ WE HAVE CONSISTENTLY PLACED OVER 90% OF OUR GRADUATES IN THE ELECTRONICS FIELD
☆ FINANCIAL AID FOR ELIGIBLE STUDENTS
☆ FULL OR PART-TIME
☆ DAY OR EVENING PROGRAMS
☆ HOUSING COUNSELING AVAILABLE
☆ FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES ARRANGED TO FIT YOUR EMPLOYMENT SCHEDULE
RETS Electronic Schools
WEST CHESTER PIKE & MALIN RD., BROOMALL, PA
★ ELECTRONIC ENGINEERING TECHNOLOGY
DIAL
874—RETS

Be Like Quincy, Trapper John and Gonzo — Wear Our Authentic Scrubb Suits
Authentic or surgeon's scrubb suits. More comfortable than jeans. You won't ever want to take them off . . . well, maybe sometimes? 100% cotton, colorful, reversible and roomy. Small, med. and large. Girls get one size smaller. Colors: O.R. green, I.C.U. blue. In med. and small only, we have misty-grey green, and white. $10.95 for V-neck shirts and $10.95 for drawstring pants. Complete set $20. SPRING SPECIAL! PINK SETS (SM. ONLY) AND YELLOW SETS (SM. AND MED. ONLY) ARE $18. Send check or money order to Scrubbs, by Raphael, Dept. V, Box 756, Havertown, Pa. 19083. One week to 10 days delivery. $1.50 handling and postage.

Ant Music for Sex People

By ROBERT BALLARD

"Unplug the jukebox/And do us all a favor/That music's lost its taste/So try another flavor/Ant-music!" England's Adam and the Ants, led by none other than Adam Ant, beckon America to explore the wild frontiers of progressive music on their first American tour coupled with their first domestic album, Kings of the Wild Frontier.

Inspection of the album cover immediately tips one off that ant-music will provide a dramatic listening experience. The five ant warriors pictured on the back cover look hungry and ruthless. The record's 13 songs are equally forceful. To call it dance music would be a gross understatement. The music is raw and physical and triggers an unsettling reaction within the listener that perhaps only the Sex Pistols could induce.

Clad in a bizarre array of Indian and pirate gear, the Ants brashly proclaim themselves "A new royal family/A wild nobility." In the song Magnificent Five they sing of themselves: "We believe in sex and looking good/With our own brand of music." And this brand of music they sing is truly their own. It features lead and bass guitar, a drumming duo, and Adam Ant as lead singer, lead writer and chief ant warrior. Ant's voice is versatile; his cadences are so flexible that his voice serves as the band's most effective musical instrument. The guitar playing, mediocre at best, is overshadowed by the powerful rhythmic drumming of Terry Lee Miall and Merrick. Background vocals constitute a major component of the Ants' sound. Constant tribal squawks (hep-hep-hep) and Indian war whoops add to the physical nature of the music.

Adam Ant, King of the Wild Frontier.

Ant's lyrics are sexual, absurd, and always cocky. The band's favorite lyrical topic is themselves. They sing: "No method in our madness/Just pride about our manner/Antpeople are the warriors/Antmusic is the banner." In Antmusic Adam warns of the dreadful consequences of stepping on an ant: "Don't tread on an ant/You'll end up black and blue/Cut off his head/Legs come looking for you!"

Apparently, Philadelphia radio station programmers find the Ants a little disturbing and unworthy of their mass appeal playlists. Dog Eat Dog responds to the corporate rockers and other non-believers: "You may not like the things we do/But only idiots ignore the truth." Unfortunately the truth is that Adam and the Ants just are not bland enough to qualify for most FM airplay, except occasionally as a curious novelty.

Despite this the Ants performed to a sold-out Irvine Auditorium at U. of Penn Saturday night. Unlike the album, which is more of a group effort, the concert is Adam's show. In full battle dress, Ant leads the attack with dynamic vocals and energetic war dancing. The guitars were adequate but loud. The drummers were particularly imposing as they wailed away, side by side, in perfect synchronization.

The confident boldness of the album was not there, in fact the band appeared a bit nervous at first, but loosened up at the sight and sound of the outrageously dressed and enthusiastic crowd. Twelve of the album's 13 songs were performed, plus numerous cuts from previous Ant's albums released in England.

Dog Eat Dog and Los Rancheros highlighted the early stages of the show. The hour and ten minute long set concluded with Antmusic, which was followed by three encores.

The Ants' first encore was their most thematic number, Kings of the Wild Frontier. "A new royal family/A wild nobility/We are family!" They had a lot of help from the screaming throng of belligerent ant warriors who shouted their ant anthem word for word. The song epitomized the give and take of the Ants' relationship with the audience. Ant seemed taken by the crowd's participation and could not help but smile as 1800 punk patrons pumped it up during the concert's hottest number.

Josephine Sings at Vasey Theatre

By EILEEN A. McCAFFREY

Lon Winston's production of Josephine: The Mouse Singer presents a refreshingly clean yet paradoxically tense picture of the relationship between life and art. Like any good play seriously treating such a question, it can offer no answers. However, its "clarity" comes from the absence of the intellectual red tape that muddles too many academic and artistic treatments or personal discussions of such seemingly abstract topics as art. Unfortunately, such language will probably mar this review. Josephine shows from the bottom up how art springs naturally from life and thought-provokingly explores their relationship.

How do playwright Michael McClure and director Winston accomplish this feat? Firstly they create a world of mice — creatures with whom we can sympathize. They are cute, small, and a safe enough distance from ourselves that we can attribute some of our traits to them. Secondly, the somewhat abstract theme is concretized and personalized by setting the play in a small community of mice and telling the simple story of a tribe, one individual in it, and their relationship.

It is never suggested that Josephine's vocation as an artist is superior or inferior to anyone else's life. Only she herself thinks she is superior to and misunderstood by the other mice. Though the tribe flocks to hear her sing, they know she is not all that good. However, they do not come looking for talent. When she drops the grace notes, no one notices a difference in her songs. When she sings with unusual emotion, that is remarked upon.

The set, designed by Winston, consists of wooden platforms raised at different levels and angles with cubbyholes, pipes and a "roof." It does not resemble a collection of mouse holes.

The acting is excellent on the whole. Though it is not yet as fully fleshed out or as coordinated as it could be, it will surely be superb in a few nights. The mouse-like movements of darting, piping, are convincingly done, and the performer's physical agility in climbing all over the stage is amazing. Although one does quickly forget they are mice, they do not become people. Instead they remain mythical figures. Throughout the play one is conscious of watching a story rather than entering another reality.

Winston attempted to portray life on the edge of chaos and danger and hoped to achieve a balance of Kafka's nightmarish view (the play is based on a Franz Kafka Fable), and McClure's too-rosy view of the world. He seems to have succeeded. The most nightmarish scenes are not nearly as hopeless as Kafka's, and the story is surely not overly optimistic. The end is still inconclusive, but is neither nightmarish nor sickly-sweet. It just gives you something to think about.

As one preface to a written copy of the play said, the medium, in this case words, is only a vehicle to bring you to the point, which is itself inexpressible. The words cannot express the point; they can only take you there. Therefore, it is past time to stop writing. Now go see Josephine.

The show runs at Villanova's Vasey Theater from April 8-11 and 22-25 at 8 p.m. each night. For tickets call 645-7474.

GROUP SPINS INTO 25th YEAR

By ECHELMEIER YOUNGER

The Spinners, a dynamic quintet, have six gold albums, six gold singles and popularity that has grown by leaps and bounds, performed at the Forrest Theater to celebrate their Silver Anniversary.

Henry Fambrough, Billy Henderson, Bobbie Smith, Pervis Jackson and John Edwards.

In 1957, success seemed a long way off for the Detroit Spinners who are now called the Spinners. The Spinners made no musical or monetary waves during their eight years with Motown. In fact, some of the things they were assigned to do might have been a little humiliating to other recording artists who had already been in the business more than a decade: things like chauffeuring the Temptations around or keeping inventory in the Gordy empire shipping department for $125 a week.

The five original Spinners, Henry Fambrough, Billy Henderson, Bobbie Smith, Pervis Jackson and Philippe Wynn described their Motown experience as "going to school." Since being persuaded by the "Queen of Soul," Aretha Franklin, to leave Motown and sign with her record company, Atlantic, the group's popularity has gone up, up, up.

A debut at the famed Appollo Theater, in 1961, was the Spinners first big splash. From there, the Spinners mission to success was launched. In the spring of 1973 the Spinners first Atlantic album rolled out. By mid-summer the Spinners had gone gold, racked up $1 million in sales. Then came million-seller, million-seller, million-seller, bam, bam, bam!

Those "bams" were the albums "Mighty Love," released in February, 1974, and certified gold three months later; "New and Improved," released in November, 1974, and certified gold one month later; "Pick of the Litter," released in July, 1975, certified gold two months later; and their latest album, "Labor of Love" is also a certified gold album. It was during these successful ventures that lead singer, Philippe Wynn, left the group and was later replaced by John Edwards.

Host Gary Shepard presented the Sherjam concerts featuring the Spinners and special guest performances by "The Futures" and "Clarence Carter" from Tuesday, March 31 through Friday, April 3.

The Futures, using flare and tact, engaged in numerous song and dance ensembles to dazzle their Philadelphia audience. They sang their hit singles: "Why Oh Why," "I Got So Much Time," and the revised version of Sammy Davis' song, "Mr. Bojangles."

Strobe lights, a candlelight table and a man dressed in suspendered gray pants, a gray shirt, white shoes and a black top hat was illuminated upon the dark stage. The character Mr. Bojangle, portrayed by a member of the Future's group, strutted across the stage doing the "old soft shoe." A standing ovation was received after that innovative piece of performance.

Clarence Carter, blind and oriented to Rhythm and Blues, was the first act that hit the stage. In one sentence Clarence sang his greatest hits to leave the women "Too Weak to Fight" so that they could not "Slip Away" while he was "Working on Some Good Loving."

During the three performances, the audience swayed to the moves of the performers, they joined the performers in clapping to the beat and hummed while the performers harmonized to the melodies. Everyone expressed his or her delight in different ways. There were people who cried, screamed, hummed and sighed while others were more laid-back and subdued.

"The Spinners, The Futures and Clarence Carter" off-set the atmosphere with thoughts of love and happiness. It wasn't until after the stage was bare, the concert concluded for the night and the audience members exited the theater, that one realized that the Spinners concert will always be remembered by those who experienced it, as a once in a lifetime adventure.

Quincy . . .

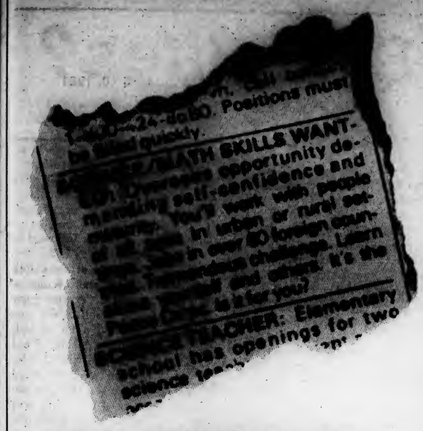
By PAUL DURAND

Every Sunday night since early February, "Quincy" has been rocking the Galaxy in South Jersey to the point where there is no room left on the dance floor. They have recently returned to the Bijou Cafe to let the Philly crowd in on the action.

Quincy is the hottest recording artist working this area regularly at this time. Their album, released last August, is jammed full of great melodies and very catchy lyrics and rightly hints at the energy Quincy transmits on stage. In local shows, "the band," says bassist Gerald Emerick, "has been trying out the new material and experimenting with the show's format." Quincy is at work on a new album but has not gone into the studio yet. When they do, they will drop out of the local circuit for a while. Right now, they're looking for a new producer.

Quincy live is an experience. Brian Butler has a powerful voice with a wide range and claps his wrists to the beat of Bob's snare drum while "Metro Gnome" (Wally Smith) shakes the stage playing intense keyboards, and the room is filled with people in motion. A lot of the audience gets captured in the music much like when Bob Holden often goes into a private world of his own when he's driving home an excellent beat. Brian and Gerry alternate on lead vocals, and Brian even leaves the

(Continued on page 13)



Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers
For information contact a recruiter, Mon.-Fri., 9-5pm: U.S Customs House, Rm. 102A, 2nd & Chestnut St., Philadelphia, PA 19106. Toll Free (800) 462-1589 Est. 66.

. . . Rocks the Galaxy

(Continued from page 12)

stage for a rest on several new songs, such as the nine minute "Changin' My Time." A tune called "Always In the News" is often expanded in their live performances to include several solos. And very often, their sets will begin and end with their most popular songs "Turn the Other Way Around," the single from the first album, and the media favorite "Critic's Choice."

I had the privilege of speaking with the members of Quincy, primarily with Gerald Emerick and drummer Bob Holden. Quincy got their lucky break while playing CBGB's in New York. Hilly Crystal liked them a lot and helped them receive several recording offers from which they could choose. Gerry says the band enjoyed playing CBGB's very much, and, as opposed to Philadelphia, "in New York it doesn't matter if you're from out of town or not, it's just if they like you, they like you." Quincy played the Bijou Cafe March 20th and 21st without selling it out and the band much prefers playing to a packed crowd.

From left to right, QUINCY is Gerald Emerick, Steve Butler, Bob Holden, Brian Butler, and Metro Gnome, who isn't pictured.

But Gerry considers Jersey different from Philadelphia, "we show a lot better response in South Jersey." Touring the states and Canada, which they did with the Vapors, was a lot of fun. They were received very well from L.A. and San Francisco to New York and Montreal. However, while they were in L.A., artist Quincy Jones brought a suit against them which was settled out of court resulting in the name "Quincy" being legally changed to "The Quincy Band." They don't really place much importance on that, but the idea that they had to change it was a little annoying.

Nevertheless, there are more important things. The guys do get out to Emerald City and concerts and Gerry's favorite live performers are the Talking Heads and the B-52's. Gerry would like to see a lot more of the punk scene come to Philadelphia. Drummer Bob is looking forward to seeing XTC, that power-pop group that's reaching the public these days. I asked Bob what his favorite Quincy song was and it's a new one called "Do You Remember."

Quincy is a great dance band and now a band with something to say.

LIFEGUARDS
HEAD LIFEGUARDS
POOL MANAGERS

Needed for full and part time positions, in Montgomery, Bucks, Camden, Burlington and Delaware counties only. Lots of good summer jobs for responsible people.

Certification Required: Send qualifications and background info. to: Mr. Barnett, P.O. Box 64, New Britain, PA 18901.

THE GALAXY

In Somerdale Park
Somerdale, N.J.
609-435-1888

SALUTES
VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY STUDENTS!
No admission charge with this ad and college ID.

SPECIAL PRICES
Tuesday-Saturday

TUESDAYS
"PREACHER"
FRI. & SAT. - "FRENZY"
AND
"CREATURE"
Sundays
Columbia Recording Artists
"QUINCY"

Back when you had to beat it before you could eat it...

A TURMAN-FOSTER Company Production
"CAVEMAN"
starring
RINGO STARR · BARBARA BACH · DENNIS QUAID · SHELLEY LONG
JOHN MATUSZAK · AVERY SCHREIBER and JACK GILFORD
Written by RUDY DeLUCA and CARL GOTTLIEB Produced by LAWRENCE TURMAN and DAVID FOSTER
Directed by CARL GOTTLIEB Music by LALO SCHIFRIN Panavision® Technicolor®
PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED
SOME MATERIAL MAY NOT BE SUITABLE FOR CHILDREN
Copyright © MCMLXXXI United Artists Corporation. All rights reserved.
United Artists
A Transamerica Company
Starts Friday April 17th at a Theatre Near You.

Are We Reggae for Skatelites?

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

The British ska movement will soon influence our Stateside record market, which will probably lead American radio programmers to "discover" ska and reggae musicians who have been making music longer than the radio stations have been playing it. America will once again soon set her musical compass in England's direction.

This isn't the first time it's happened, either. Can anyone deny the Beatle's effect on bands like Todd Rundgren's Utopia or Cheap Trick, or how many American teens want to grow up to be like Keith Richards? Jimi Hendrix, who began his career over here, even had to leave the U.S., go to England to get exposure, before he could come back to Stateside acceptance. The Ramones are probably the most immediate example: Although their three-chord pop structures and bubblegum harmonics are more close to California's Beach Boys than to the Sex Pistols, it took punk, years after the Beach Boys, to make the right climate in which the Ramones could appear. What is most interesting about this current trend is that we are getting another country's musical forms through Britain's terms, instead of purer ska or rock-steady.

The Selecter, one of the two original Two-Tone Records bands, has just released its second album, Celebrate the Bullet. This release is much more solid than their first LP because the band takes more than a few chances with the ska/rock format to construct songs that aren't all rock, or pop, or reggae or ska, but are memorable and catchy enough regardless of the label you put on them.

The fact that the Selecter can not only conceive an excellent idea like Selling Out Your Future, but can execute that idea so well shows how they've matured as songwriters. Gaps Hendrickson on the chorus vocal sounds cooler than Sting of the Police, but benefits most from the heady three-note keyboard runs and guitar chords that set the scene for him. The same thing happens in Their Dream Goes On, where a tremendous sax solo, which sounds like it belongs in the soundtrack from In the Heat of the Night, strikes the listener because of the sparse two-note bass melody, light percussion and guitar tints from which it springs.

Tell Me What's Wrong is another display of the Selecter's maturity. If there is a song on this album that breaks the American charts, this is it. A rolling, deeply melodic, New Orleans-style piano passage closes this tune, but the real treat is at the very end, when Hendrickson wistfully adds: "After all's been said and done, I guess that's how it ought to be." One could find many ideas kicking around the heads of British skatelites, but this is one of the first introductions of stoic thought to ska's frantic dance beat.

Even though Celebrate the Bullet, is funky, rhythmic and accessible, Dance Craze is probably a better dance album, and British ska always sounds better from a dark, sweaty jungle of a dance floor than from your living room. Because Dance Craze captures the energetic performances of six British ska bands live in concert, it sounds much more joyous and exciting than the more thoughtful Selecter album.

Next week, this story continues, with a review of DANCE CRAZE and some inflammatory remarks.

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118

Easter Retreat
"FOR STRUGGLE TO REST"
APRIL 15 - 17
AT "KRIKRIDGE"
IN THE POCONO MOUNTAINS
Sign up in the Campus Ministry Center.

INFLATION FIGHTER SALE!!!
Featuring Select Group of SUPERSTARS
KINKS GREATEST HITS
ERIC CLAPTON
LAURA NYRO
VAN MORRISON
JERRY GARCIA BAND
KINGFISH
HEART
CHARLIE DANIELS
YES - TORMATO
ROD STEWART
AND MANY MORE
LP Formerly $7.98
2.99
SALE ENDS MAY 9, 1981
We Pay Cash For Your Old Unwanted Records
We Carry Largest Selection of Rock Posters.
JUST FOR THE RECORD, INC
ROSEMONT VILLAGE MALL
Rosemont, Pa.

CONESTOGA CLEANERS
907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA.
19010
LA 5-3431
PLANT-ON PREMISES
SAME DAY CLEANING
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

Holiday Inn
Valley Forge
Welcomes the families of the 1981 graduating class of Villanova University
CONGRATULATIONS!
- 304 Luxurious Guest Rooms
- Sentry Post Dining Room
- Enclosed Year-Round Swimming
- 20 Minute Drive From Villanova

260 GODDARD BLVD.
King of Prussia, Pa.
215/265-7500

EXPERIENCE THE THRILL OF FLYING
THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE OFFICER PLACEMENT REPRESENTATIVE WILL BE ON CAMPUS APRIL 23 AT PLACEMENT OFFICE.
TO CONDUCT INTERVIEWS FOR: FLYING PROGRAMS
ADVANCE SIGN-UP REQUIRED
AIR FORCE
A great way of life.

AIR FORCE ROTC
Gateway to a great way of life.

ATTENTION SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING MAJORS!
The Air Force has openings for young men and women majoring in selected science and engineering fields. Like Aeronautical, Aerospace, General and Electrical Engineering, Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology.
To help prepare for one of these, Air Force ROTC offers two and four-year programs of study which will defray some of your college costs.
After completion of the AFROTC requirement, and upon your graduation, you'll be commissioned an officer in the Air Force. Then comes responsibility, experience in your specialty with some of the best people and facilities in the world, and a mission with a purpose. You'll get excellent starting salary, medical and dental care, 30 days vacation with pay beginning your first year, and more.
Look into the Air Force ROTC program right away. See what's in it for you. See how you can serve your country in return.
Contact: Air Force ROTC Det 750
Saint Joseph's University
Philadelphia PA 19131
(215)879-7311, 7312

Cats Gain Revenge vs. Catholic U.

By JIM FEMIA

Sweeping a doubleheader from a team is always an accomplishment. But doing it against Catholic University is an even greater accomplishment for this year's Villanova baseball team. The Wildcats used tough pitching in the first game and explosive hitting in game two to temporarily give them a sense of revenge against the Cardinals.

Over the past six years, Catholic University has been a nemesis to Villanova baseball. Since 1975, a year in which Villanova beat Catholic, the Wildcats have managed only one other win, while dropping the remaining four contests. But after being edged out of the ECAC's two years ago and losing in the preliminary round of the playoffs last year, the Cats couldn't think of a better team to beat twice in one day.

In 1979, the Villanova, Catholic game was washed out and at the season's conclusion, the fourth and final ECAC playoff position was to be picked between Nova and Catholic. Catholic was selected due to a tougher schedule.

Last season, the Cards defeated the Cats in their first contest 11-9, which was marked by two controversial Catholic home runs, and in the preliminary round of the ECAC tournament, where Villanova was seeded first and Catholic fourth, upset Villanova 5-0.

Villanova entered the doubleheader on a five game win streak while Catholic had won three out of their last four. These were the two biggest games of the season for the Wildcats who hope to grab the number one seed in the tournament for the second consequtive season.

As in the ECAC playoff game last season, the pitching match up pitted Steve Skammer vs. John Sieve. Sieve threw a three-hit shutout at the Cats in the playoff game but was shelled for seven runs in 1-2/3 innings pitched and received the loss in Villanova's 11-4 victory. Senior captain Steve Skammer, redeemed his playoff loss pitching a fine, eight hit game. The Wildcats got three runs in each of the first two innings and never looked back as they coasted to the victory. Leading the 13-hit attack was freshman outfielder Jim White (4 for 4) and junior third baseman Dante Santoni (3 for 4, 3 RBI).

The second Villanova victory was a complete turnaround from the first. Senior speedballer Phil Sartori allowed only a seventh inning unearned run in Villanova's 2-1 victory. Sartori had three strike outs and only walked one batter. The first of Villanova's two runs came in the bottom of the third when sophomore Don Casey scored on a Bob Loscalzo RBI single, his 17th of the year. Senior captain Bob Sullivan provided the other Wildcat run with a fifth inning homer.

The rest of the season looks optimistic at this point with a large majority of the remaining games to be played on McGeehan Field. The Wildcats have won 19 out of their last 20 on their home turf. Seven of the team's next nine games will be played at home including key match ups with Temple, a doubleheader with Baltimore and the University of Delaware.

Hopefully for the Villanova baseball team they have temporarily knocked the monkeys off their backs in sweeping Catholic University last Saturday. But the real test will be May 14-17 when the Cats just might face the Cardinals once again in the ECAC Southern Division playoffs. If they win then, maybe a permanent sense of revenge will take over.

Wildcat catcher Bob Sullivan looks runner back in Saturdays doubleheader sweep vs. Catholic U.

The Week in Sports

RUGBY

The Rugby "A" team lost a heartbreaker against Princeton last Saturday, 6-4. Princeton's score was a controversial one as the members of the Nova club claimed that the Princeton rugger never touched the ball down. The point after was good and the Tigers escaped with a hard earned victory. Mike Terlizzi scored the only try of the afternoon on a nifty run and Mark Civil continued his outstanding kicking. Scrummer Al Donatio was a key factor all day in the Villanova effort.

The "B" team was not as fortunate as the A's, losing to Princeton, 24-0. The "C" team, which was marked by the return of past greats such as Jim Raitz and Jim Boggs, were upset by Princeton by a score of 6-3.

The Rugby season continues tomorrow as Villanova hosts Haverford and on April 25-26, they travel to Bucknell to compete in the Eastern Tournament.

MEN'S, WOMEN'S LACROSSE

The lacrosse team's record dropped to 1-5, losing last week to Drexel, 16-5, and Mt. St. Marys, 16-3. In the Drexel game, Villanova scorers were John Galloway with two, Kevin McHugh, Paul Grady and Chris Clark all with single tallies.

Leading scorers for the Wildcats this year are Paul Grady (12 pts), Chris Clark (10 pts) and Ken Delgato (10 pts). The Wildcat's season continues Tuesday afternoon as Villanova hosts Georgetown in a 3:30 game.

The problems were posed in the form of Bryn Mawr and Widener, but the Women's lacrosse team came up short in finding answers. The squad lost its first two games of the season, dropping a 6-1 decision to Bryn Mawr and a 9-2 verdict to Widener.

The tallies of the aforementioned games probably would have been much closer had it not been for one thing: the lacrosse team is beset by injuries. "We have a lot of key players missing right now," commented Coach Joan Johnson. "One player is out with a broken collar bone, another's out with mono," she added, and it's the little nagging injuries adding up."

Gradual but sure improvement is the immediate goal of the Women's lacrosse team. With only five seniors on the roster, it is basically a young, inexperienced team; a team of the future.

"We're 200% improved over last year," believes Coach Johnson, "hopefully, there'll be no more injuries and we'll start to play better."

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL

The Wildcats participated in the Penn Softball tournament last weekend. The Cats were beaten in the first game of the tourney by a strong LaSalle team. The second game of the tournament turned out to be the first victory for Coach Debbie McKee's young squad. The tournament ended for the Cats the way it began. The team lost to Lafayette.

Coach McKee is predicting better things in the near future. McKee said, "We have played two of the top teams in the area such as Penn and LaSalle, and as we mature we will become very competitive." McKee's squad is very young. There are only two seniors on the team, and no juniors.

The next game is tomorrow at St. Mary's Field. The game will start at 11.

I'll Try Anything Once

By PETER RUKSAKIATI

I've done two things this week that I thought I'd never do. First, I scrimmaged with the Wildcat's softball team. Second, I wrote about my experience for the Villanovan a la George (I'll try anything once) Plimpton. I've got a funny feeling that the dust I swallowed while playing won't match the crow I'll have to eat when my friends read this thing (that's if I still have friends).

Anyway, Sunday was an ordinary day for me until Debbie McKee, coach of the softball team and a friend of mine, asked if I could help the ladies scrimmage by filling the second base position. Forget the fact that I've never played fastpitch softball (Chicagoans live on 16" slowpitch softball). Forget the fact that I haven't seen any serious fastpitching since Little League. Forget the fact that I haven't played any type of ball in over a year. Forget the fact that I didn't even warm up. I'm a guy — they're a bunch of girls. Male physical supremacy and personal talent would make up for the absence of experience and warm up time. I was wrong — very, very wrong.

We took the field first. Two hits up the middle put men, excuse me, women on first and second. Another single was stroked to center and I went to cover second, looking for a throw. The runner beat the throw by an eyelash (no gender reference). The shortstop yelled that a runner was heading for home. With a reflex action, I threw towards the plate. But as I released the ball, I knew something was wrong. The ball started on track but it tailed away from the catcher and only by an act of God did the ball hit the backstop. E-4. The run scored and the runners advanced. Although the team was understanding, I felt so low I could've walked under a pregnant ant.

I knew I could redeem myself when I came to bat. How hard could it be to hit something 12" wide? It was a match made in Hollywood. Sophomore ace Shaula DeMarco, who last year had an ERA of 2.91 and 33 strikeouts in 45 2/3 innings against sophomore Peter Ruksakiati, with a lifetime batting average of .275. She wound up and threw. At this point, I noted a discrepancy within the law of the conservation of size. The ball may have left her hand as 12" but it came across the plate like Bayer aspirin. I was in trouble. My ego wouldn't allow me to strike out swinging, so I dug in and lashed a hard shot which nicked Shaula's glove and trickled to third. A bunt and a single later, I scored. Redemption!

The rest of the game was routine. I was 1 for 3, 1 run scored, 2 assists (I got my act together), and 1 error. Unfortunately, my team lost. But I appreciated and enjoyed the opportunity to do something I've never done (and probably won't do again). I have to plug the softball doubleheader this Saturday at 11:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. at Mt. Mary's field! Come out and cheer, catch the fever, and you might learn something to boot. McKee has a very young team (only 1 junior and 2 seniors) but they are strong, especially at the pitcher, catcher, third and shortstop positions. Injuries have also taken their toll on the team, but I think they can improve on their 6-6 record of last year. Finally, if you ever get invited to scrimmage with the softball team don't be cocky, these ladies are not pussycats. They play ball for keeps.

Nova to Host Jumbo Elliott Meet

By DAVE COSKEY

Preparations begin this week for the 87th annual Penn Relay Carnival which is slated for April 23 through the 25. at Franklin Field.

This year's field promises to be the strongest contingent in history to vie for the prestigious Relay Championships of America. In this year's relay events, every team that placed in last month's NCAA indoor championships along with the eventual champion, will compete on the Penn oval.

One change will occur this year, the Ben Franklin Mile has been renamed the Jumbo Elliott Mile in memory of Villanova's legendary track coach. There is an irony here, Elliott's athletes were always strongest in the mile. In the Wanamaker Millrose games, a world class indoor meet, Elliott-trained athletes have won 14 mile titles since Fred Dwyer first won back in 1953. Yet even with this world famous success Jumbo chose to hold out his men for the relay championships, which the Wildcats have won more of than even host Pennsylvania. The Delany's, Paige's, Liquori's ran as a team in the Penn Relays.

Elliott always held a special place in his heart for the Penn Relays which he displayed as high jumpers and pole vaulters became quarter milers in April when training began for the Wildcat dominance of this world famous track and field carnival.

Elliott made the Penn Relays his yearly ritual. But not one that was without controversy. "I've gone back in the Penn Relay newspaper clippings from the past ten years," says Herb Hartnett, publicist for the relays, "The only quotes I can find about Jumbo was when he complained about all the talent we were bringing in to beat Villanova. I think he thrived on it."

This year will be no different. Jim Tuppeny, meet director says, "Villanova may run their fastest times ever and not win a race, that's how good this field is." Relay powerhouses like Georgetown and Arkansas will attempt to dethrone the Wildcats next week. Arkansas Coach said, "we think that we've got a good shot to win quite a few races. We're proud to compete against Villanova outdoors, it's something we've never done."

The competition should be especially hard this year as Arkansas boasts an outstanding Irish contingent of runners. Villanova Irishman John Hunter feels that should make competition even more intense, "We know each other pretty well and some of us were even recruited by them, I know I'll want to beat them even more." Hunter was in fact recruited by Arkansas, however, they declined to offer him a scholarship.

There will be one other form of motivation pushing the Wildcats, after all this was The meet in Jumbo Elliott's mind. "I know we realize just how important this meet is and what it meant to Jumbo. It will make us try that much harder," said senior Sydney Maree.

Harder is what it will be, duplicating last year's feat of winning four out of eight Relay Championships of America. Chances are, things haven't changed as much as everybody thought they would. No, Jumbo won't be there, however, what he worked so long on establishing, his relay teams, will be, and chances are the Wildcats will keep the tradition going.

Track Notes: Plans are currently under way to stage a Jumbo Elliott Memorial Track Meet in Villanova stadium sometime in late May or early June. The meet is being planned and directed by track alumni Ron Stanko and Jim Elliott, Jumbo's son. Though details are still sketchy, the meet could blossom into one of the outstanding meets in the country this year drawing outstanding world class athletes in all events.

Villanova Victorious in Colonial Relays

By KERRY LYNCH

They wore black ribbons but they collected blue ones. They wore the black in honor of their late Coach Jumbo Elliott. They won the blue in the memory of the same man. Before, they had won because Jumbo taught them how and stood by and watched them do it. Last weekend they won because they knew the winning tradition must continue.

Interim Head Track Coach Jack Pyrah said that the Wildcats' performance at the Colonial Relays was "A pretty successful trip, the first meet the kids had without Jumbo." The success was measured in six individual firsts and two relay victories.

John Hunter, junior middle-distance runner, seemed to speak for the team when he said, "You miss him (Jumbo) a little, it's strange when he doesn't watch you."

"We entered two strong relay teams and they both won," Pyrah explained. The distance medley team of John Borgese, Carlton Young, John Hunter and Sydney Maree ran the two and one-half miles in 9:40.0. Maree cruised on the lead in the first part of his anchor leg then sprinted for his last 440 to finish two seconds in front of Richmond.

The sprint medley returned Young and Hunter to the track, teamed them with Rodney Wilson and Jim Adams and saw them edge North Carolina State for the victory. They ran the mile in 3:21.9.

The four by 100 meter relay team of Willie Sydnor, Adams, Young and Wilson ran 41.0 in the trails with the second fastest clocking. This time qualified them for the IC4A's, however, in the finals Sydnor was replaced by Al Graves because of a strained hamstring and the team finished fifth.

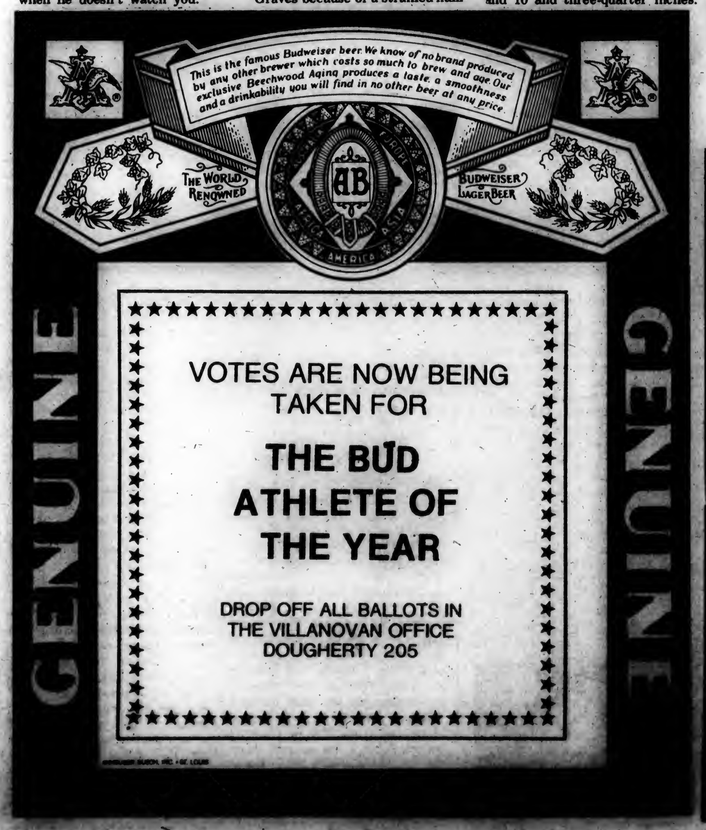
Sydney Maree took first in the 5000 meter run clocking 14:01.2 and qualifying for the IC4A's.

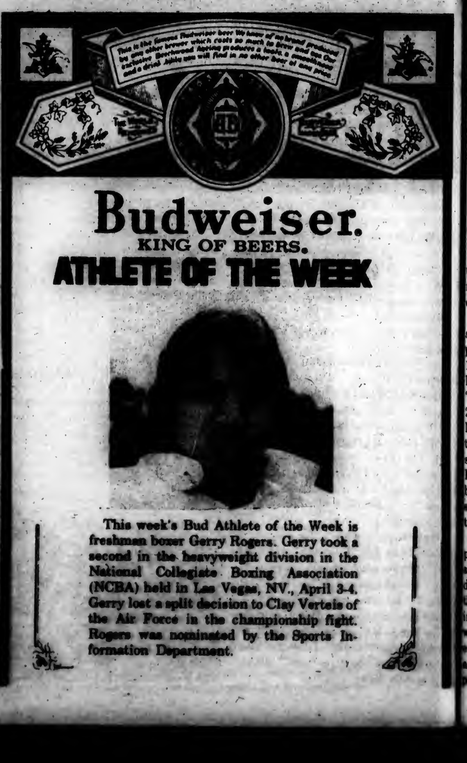
Sophomore Rodney Wilson hurdled to victory once again as he won the 110 meter hurdle race in 13.77.

Ross Donoghue, competing for NYAC while awaiting eligibility at Villanova won the invitational 1500. Pyrah looks forward to the fall when he will don a Villanova uniform in hopes of filling Maree's spot in the mile events.

Weight man Brian Dalatri collected two seconds over the weekend while making the second best ever Villanova discus throw. In the discus he finished ahead of all other collegiates with his 165 foot and eight inch throw. His mark in the shot put was again the first of the college competitors at 55 feet and 10 and three-quarter inches.

Villanova shotputter Brian Dalatri shows form at the Colonial Relays with a throw of 55 ft., 10.75 inches. Bill Andrews Photo - W.M.F.H.





This week's Bud Athlete of the Week is freshman boxer Gerry Rogers. Gerry took a second in the heavyweight division in the National Collegiate Boxing Association (NCBA) held in Las Vegas, NV., April 3-4. Gerry lost a split decision to Clay Vertels of the Air Force in the championship fight. Rogers was nominated by the Sports Information Department.

the Villanovan

Vol. 56, No. 25 — VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. — April 24, 1981

An 87-Year Tradition Ends

Football Program Dropped

By BILL CLARK

The Board of Trustees voted at a regular April meeting to discontinue the football program at Villanova University.

Father President Driscoll, speaking for the Board, said at a press conference on April 15 that financial considerations were the main cause for the decision. "Villanova's planning for the 1980's calls for intensified rededication to its academic mission as a private, church-related university of the first order," said Driscoll.

"The Board feels that the University cannot, in good conscience, do other that re-evaluate its priorities when a third of the buildings on campus require renovation, when up-to-date laboratory equipment and facilities need to be acquired and additional scholarship aid provided — to name a few unmet priorities," added Driscoll.

Neither Driscoll nor Dr. Ted Aceto, director of athletics, would comment on the amount of money spent on the football program each year.

Driscoll continued by saying that Villanova "will honor all commitments to Coach (Dick) Bedesem and his staff," and, "will also, of course, honor its full scholarship commitment to its student athletes.

"I'm sure that we shall do everything that is reasonably possible to help students obtain scholarship elsewhere," added Driscoll.

Bedesem said that his office would help students obtain scholarships elsewhere if they so desire. "I think that the traffic coming in to obtain our good players is going to be very heavy," added Bedesem.

Driscoll said that Villanova has offered Bedesem another position at the University. "His future here is up to him, but he is welcome," said Driscoll.

In response to reporter's questions, Driscoll said that the Board was not considering any other cutbacks in the athletic program. "This does not mean a downgrading or any kind of detrenchment in Villanova's athletic programs. At the moment, no other sports are in trouble.

"We intend to support the athletic program which we consider to be extremely important to our educational enterprise, to the extent that we can," said Driscoll.

Villanova's football program has been under review for nearly ten years. After a 1-8 start in 1972, President Rev. Edward J. McCarthy directed a committee to examine the football program after it was revealed that it was losing approximately $300,000 per year.

In December of that year, the Board gave the football program a vote of confidence and directed it to upgrade its competition and possibly join a new eastern football league. It was also the desire of the board to have some of Villanova's games televised.

"The formation of a league with Villanova as a member was under consideration briefly by some eastern college officials but it never materialized, nor did the opportunity to appear in televised games," said Driscoll.

(Continued on page 23)

Father President Driscoll announces the decision to discontinue football, as Joseph Walters, vice-chairman of the Board, looks on.

Charlie Guida Photo

Al Meltzer of Channel 10 News interviews Jim Still as team members and students look on.

Charlie Guida Photo

Students, Alumni Plan Football Rally

By BILL CLARK

Villanova students and alumni are planning actions to reverse the recent decision by the Board of Trustees to discontinue Villanova's football program.

Student government has organized a rally to restore the football program. The rally is scheduled for April 28 in the Field House. A letter writing campaign is also planned by Villanova students.

"We will have a letter from the students to the Board of Trustees," said Henry Amoroso, student body president. "We are asking the Board to reconsider their decision, because we feel that to drop football at this time is ill-advised and threatens the 'total' Villanova."

A "Committee to Restore Division 1A Football to Villanova" has been organized by Villanova alumni. In a letter from Douglas J. Murray, president-elect of the General Alumni Association, "Villanovans" are encouraged to send telegrams or letters to Father President Driscoll urging him to "participate in an emergency meeting of the Board of Trustees tentatively scheduled for April 30, 1981 at 10:00 a.m.

"It is the opinion of many alumni and friends of Villanova that this is an ill-advised and intemperate decision... Perhaps rather than questioning the value of intercollegiate football we should question the ability and management skills that find it necessary to start dismembering our University," said the letter.

The letter urges Villanova alumni and students to attend a meeting at the Covered Wagon in Strafford on Thursday, May 7, at 8 p.m. The letter also asks for a $50 contribution from anyone attending the meeting.

The letter continues by saying that, "The Trustees obviously expect an initial uproar followed by quiter protests until finally the sentiment dies away. With your help, we will not let that happen."

One member of the Board of

(Continued on page 5)

Alumni Voice Concerns

By ANNE SUYDAM and MARY ANNE GRANGER

Anger and concern are among the feelings expressed by Villanova alumni over the recent dropping of football.

"Basically, I'm completely shocked and bitterly disappointed," said Edward Lynam, a 1960 graduate and president of the Baltimore Alumni Association. "I've been involved in football for 25 years — it's a big chunk of my life." Discussing the reasons the team was discontinued, Lynam said, "I think Father President Driscoll really hasn't liked football and the whole tailgate party scene. I think this had something to do with it."

Rick Reed, a 1975 graduate and president of the Washington Club, said, "They really didn't need to drop it altogether. The better thing to do is to investigate ways in which costs can be reduced while maintaining the team. For example, not travelling as far, not as many scholarships and dropping a league."

"I think it is a very sad day for the university," commented graduate Thad Behm. Behm, who is the president of the Boston Alumni Club, noted, "It is going to be a bleak day up here when Boston College starts playing and there is no Villanova competition."

Mike Siani, a Villanova wide receiver from 1969-1971 was quoted as saying in the Daily News that, "I was involved there, saw the work that went into it, the care. Now, they just stand up and say, 'Well guys, it's over. We're not gonna do this anymore.'

"If they were in financial trouble, there are alumni who could have helped. They could have at least given us that chance," said Siani.

Bob Capone, the alumni director here, is also a 1962 graduate of Villanova. Asked about alumni feeling, he said, "It is a very unpopular decision with alumni; . No alumni is entirely satisfied with the decision, though some realize the economic problems."

(Continued on page 4)

VP for Student Life Named

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

Father President Driscoll announced last week the appointment of Dr. Richard A. Neville, director of Villanova's counseling services, to the post of vice-president for student life.

Neville, who came to Villanova in 1970, will succeed Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A., who is leaving on June 1 to assume the presidency of Merrimac College.

The formal appointment of Neville came April 14 when the Board of Trustees approved his nomination by Driscoll.

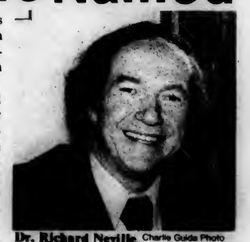
Outlining plans and policies for his forthcoming tenure as vice-president for student life, Neville said that he intends to stress continuity. "I'd like to carry on the work Father Deegan has so well started over the years. He's given student life a tremendous direction and impetus."

One of Neville's initial tasks upon taking up his new position will be to complete the reorganization of the dean of men's and dean of women's offices.

On the topic of co-educational dorms, Neville believes that they would have to be studied to determine if a sufficient interest in them exists. One of the questions he would want answered in regard to co-ed dorms is whether they can be set up in such a way as to respect privacy yet stimulate "interaction." As for the immediate future, Neville responds, "I don't think Villanova is at a point where co-ed dorms are feasible." He cites the architectural design of the dorm buildings as the reason for this.

Neville also intends to work with the Student Life Committee over the summer to come up with programs which he hopes will meet the extra-curricular needs of both commuters and residents in the fall.

"I would like to be a clear advocate of students' rights, but also their responsibilities, as well as working with students to set up programs to facilitate their maturing," Neville remarked in summing up his aspirations.



Dr. Richard Neville. Charlie Guida Photo

VILLANOVAN Takes Top Honors

The Pennsylvania Collegiate Press Association honored the Villanovan, newspaper of record for the University, with five writing and photography awards in its 1980 journalism contest.

For the second year in a row, Marianne Lavelle, senior English major and former Editor-in-Chief of the Villanovan was awarded First Place in Editorial Writing by the PCPA. Lavelle received the award this year for her editorial entitled "Who would send women to war?," which concerned the registering of women into the selective service.

The editorial was printed in the Feb. 15, 1980 issue of the Villanovan, and was reprinted on the Op-Ed page of the Philadelphia Inquirer, Feb. 22, 1980.

Vincent Hausmann, senior English major and former associate editor of the paper, was awarded first place in Review Writing for his essay on Lillian Hellmann's current memoir, Maybe.

David Coskey, senior Communications major and former Photography Editor of the paper received a Second Place writing award for his feature "Alumnus Battles Town, Courts," printed in the Oct. 31, 1980 Villanovan.

Coskey's story dealt with 1968 Villanova grad Tom Levin, who was elected mayor of the seaside town of Woodbine, N.J. after a $78.00 door to door campaign.

Coskey also received two awards for his Sports Photos. For a shot of Villanova defensive back Scott Hatchett batting down a pass from a Holy Cross quarterback, printed in the November 21, 1980 issue, Coskey received Second Place in Sports photos.

The PCPA awarded Coskey Honorable Mention in Sports Photos for a picture of Villanova defenders forcing one of Temple's five fumbles in the final game of last season.

Last year, the Villanovan won five awards from the PCPA. It received First Place in Editorial Writing, Second Place in Advertising, Second Place in News Photography, Second Place in Sports Photography, and Honorable Mention in Sports photo layout.

Dave Coskey won second place in the PCPA contest for this photograp

fyi (for your information)

Coffee & Donuts

Take a break from studying! Stop in the Day Hop for coffee and donuts. They will be sold Thursday, April 30 — Wednesday, May 6, from 9:30 p.m.-12:30 a.m. (except Saturday, May 2). Sponsored by the RSA.

Miss Villanova

Nominate that lucky lady to represent your dorm or group in the Miss Villanova Contest, April 27 in the Villanova Center. All nomination forms may be picked up in Student Activities Office and turned in Friday, April 24.

All contestants must attend a meeting Friday, April 24th, at 3:30 in the A.C.S. Office.

Special Olympics

The Special Olympics Steering Committee is accepting applications for the committee. We must fill positions immediately! Applications are available in the Villanovans for Life office, 108 Dougherty Hall. All applications must be returned to the VFL office by Friday, May 1. Applicants will be notified of all decisions.

Stocking Collection

During the week of April 27th, the sisters of DKN will be collecting torn and ripped stockings for a home of unwed mothers. Collection boxes can be found in each female dormitory. The stockings will be used to stuff pillows.

Coffee House

On Monday, April 27, at 8:00 p.m., Gerry Rooney, Michael Shea, and Karl Graf will be having a Coffeehouse in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. An evening of good times and music should be enjoyed by all. Admission is $1.00 at the door.

Belle Air

Anyone interested in joining the staff of the 1982 Belle Air is invited to attend a staff meeting on Monday, April 27, at 2:30 p.m. in the North Lounge. We need section editors, typists, artists, business manager, etc. Here's your chance to make it big in the publishing world.

Refrigerator Return

Please return your refrigerators to the designated room in your dorm on Monday, April 27, from 7 p.m.-9 p.m. Those not returning their refrigerators at this time and place will not receive their $12 deposit. See your RSA hall President for more details.

Dance Photos

Underclassman Dinner Dance photos will be available to be picked up beginning Monday in the Union office. Photos not picked up will be mailed in May.

Summer School

Rev. Kail Ellis, O.S.A., director of Summer Sessions, has announced the revised summer school registration procedure.

In order to be completely registered, the student must secure a registration form and have it signed by his or her academic dean. The Student must then take the form and payment, along with registration fee, to the Business Office.

As an incentive to complete the registration process early, the $15 registration fee will be waived if completed two weeks before the session.

Deadline for the first and evening sessions is May 2. Deadline for the second session is June 10.

Registration must be COMPLETED by these dates. No exceptions after these dates.

Any futher questions should be directed to the Summer Sessions Office, 2nd floor of Tolentine.

Connelly Ctr.

The Connelly Center Board of Directors would like to announce the opening of two student positions on the board beginning May 31, 1981, and running until May 31, 1983. The Board has set certain criteria for the positions. Information about the criteria can be found with student applications at the Connelly Center Information Desk or in the Office of the Vice-President for Student Life (Room 202 Dougherty Hall). Any further questions concerning the Connelly Center Board of Directors may be directed to the Connelly Center Administrative Offices (located behind the information), in the Office of the Vice-President for Student Life. All petitions must be filed by Monday, May 4, 1981, at the Connelly Center Information Desk.

Band Uniforms

All Marching Band uniforms will be collected on Wednesday, April 29th, in St. Mary's Auditorium at 6 p.m. All members must return their uniforms to avoid any problems with their records.

Sci-Fi

On Wednesday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cinema, Mr. Wes Shank will conclude the Science-Fiction Mini Series as he discusses technical aspects of Science-Fiction filmmaking and displays memorabilia from Science-Fiction, Horror, and Fantasy film genres. Mr. Shank's personal collection includes the original Blob, masks from Planet of the Apes, costumes from the Wizard of Oz and Forbidden Planet, along with numerous classic posters, books, records and movie stills. Admission is free.

RSA Concert

Enjoy the sunshine and good music at the same time. Come to the RSA's outdoor concert, featuring "Easy Street." The concert will be on Sunday, April 26, from 1:00-5:00 in Kennedy Mall.

Film Buffs

The Cultural Film Series announces:

Small Change — April 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cinema. This film revolves around the lives of several children in a small provincial town.

Children of Paradise — May 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cinema. This is the story of four men and their fatal attraction toward one woman.

Admission for students for each event is $1.00.

Yearbooks

The 1981 Belle Air will be delivered in the North Lounge on:

Thursday, April 23	12-4 p.m.
Friday, April 24	10-4 p.m.
Monday, April 27	10-2 p.m.
Tuesday, April 28	10-2 p.m.
Wednesday, April 29	Balloon Day No Deliveries
Thursday, April 30	10-2 p.m.
Friday, May 1	10-2 p.m.

You must have a Villanova ID and your receipt to receive your 1981 Belle Air.

Freedom Tour

Members of the Villanova Bicycle Club are invited to participate in the annual Freedom Tour sponsored by Delaware Valley Bicycle Club. The ride begins at approximately 9 a.m. from Ridley Creek State Park and is 65 miles in length with variable terrain. Cost is $4.00. If interested, call 645-7120 or 543-4664.

French Club

There will be a meeting of the French Club on Tuesday, April 28, at 12:45 for the election of new officers. All members please attend.

Graduation Info

Announcements for Commencement Exercises will be distributed starting Monday, April 13 through May 15. The Office for Student Life is open for distribution Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. until noon, and 2:00 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. The office is located on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Five Commencement announcements will be given to each graduate, with extra announcements costing $.20.

Passes are not required for Baccalaureate Mass or Commencement Exercises. In the College of Liberal Arts and College of Commerce and Finance, please encourage your friends to wait until parents and relatives are seated until they take a seat.

Caps, Gowns, and Hoods will be distributed at the Following Times:

Wednesday, May 13-9:00 a.m. to 4:0 p.m.

Thursday, May 14-9:00 a.m. to 7:0 p.m.

Friday, May 15-9:00 a.m. to 12:0 noon.

The gowns will be distributed Room 117 of Bartley Hall for the Co leges of Liberal Arts, Commerce a Finance, and Nursing. Gowns will distributed in room 188 of Bartley H for the College of Engineering, Univ sity College, and the Graduate scho

The Villanovan prints FYI as a ser service to the Villanova community fortunately, we cannot guarantee every announcement will appear.

Missionary Warns of Disaster

By BILL CLARK

It is indeed rare for Americans hear what takes place at the rass roots" level in El Salvador. st of the reports we receive me from either the military ts in El Salvador or the State partment. In an interview with Villanovan, Fr. Albert Reyn, a Maryknoll missionary has spent the last thirty years El Salvador and other parts of tin America, explained the nts in El Salvador from a different perspective — that of the r and marginated people of the ntry.

eymann claims that the rage American has little wledge of the true situation in Salvador because the American ernment has not accurately sented the facts. For instance, cites the reports when four erican nuns were killed last ember in El Salvador.

They were driving on a road to t up some sisters at the air-, when they were machine-ned to death," said Reymann. was reported in the press by lexander Haig that they were rmishing with troops. That is a n lie. It was also reported that y had run a blockade; another . It was also reported that they d come from Nicaragua, where y engaged in clandestine havior. Another lie.

Reymann feels that the event not been properly investied. He points to the fact that bert White, the former ambassador to El Salvador, was fired by President Reagan several days after he tried to open an investigation. Recently, President Reagan has "delinked" any aid to El Salvador from the investigation.

Reymann is particularly upset with how the American government portrays the revolutionaries in El Salvador. "They are called up here savages; they are called guerillas; they are called communists; they are called subversives. All of these words are loaded words. They paint these people as the scum of the earth, when they're not that at all. They are people simply trying to live as free men and women," said Reymann.

If anyone knows the truth about these people, it is Reymann. He said that he has worked mainly with the "marginated" people of Central America. He has also come in contact with many of the rebels. "In the thirty years down there, I did not meet one communist," added Reymann.

Reymann did acknowledge that the revolutionaries are receiving help from some communist countries. His explanation for this fact is simply that they cannot get aid from any other source, including the western countries. Reymann offers several analogies for this situation.

"Suppose you knew somebody killed your mother and raped your sister, and was out to destroy you and the rest of your family. Then, somebody came along and said, 'Here's a gun; defend yourself.' Would you take the gun, or would you say no because it was a bad guy giving you the gun?

"Let me give you another example. You're starving to death; and our people are starving to death; and somebody offers you a loaf of bread. Do you ask where the bread came from? That's absurd. You take the bread and eat it, because you want to live," said Reymann.

According to Reymann, the American people are unaware of the economic and political structrue of El Salvador. He explains that 60% of the population earns an average of $100 per year, while two percent of the population possesses over 60% of the wealth.

He could not over-emphasize the poverty he has seen in El Salvador. "In every way, shape, and form: the houses they live in, the food they eat, the education they get, the lack of health services, their transportation, their place in society; in every aspect, they're out of it," said Reymann.

Politically, the country is run by 14 powerful families, Reymann describes an "adulterous relationship" between the families and the army. "The army runs the entire state at all levels," commented Reymann. "The army is all over the place. One can do nothing without looking them right in the eyes. The ruling junta is merely a puppet of the army, including

(Continued on page 8)

"We must remember, though, that the church has always taught legitimate self-defense when all means to defend yourself have been exhausted. And certainly all other means have been exhausted down there."

Fr. Albert Reymann

President Reviews 1980-'81 Year

By BILL CLARK

Student Body President Henry Amoroso feels that this year's Student Government has "furthered itself" toward the goals of responsible representation and communication.

Amoroso feels that the Facilitating Committee (a group composed of the leaders of the major campus organizations) was the major accomplishment of his administration. "The Committee is a success because it has helped to break the barriers which kept various organizations apart," said Amoroso.

"It has broken the cliques that existed and has afforded an opportunity for student leaders to meet and help each other toward their individual goals," added Amoroso.

Amoroso believes that much of the work performed this year will be reflected in future years. "I had hoped to see a Student Bill of Rights before the Senate at its April meeting, but it ran into some problems. Nonetheless, we have submitted a rough draft to the Student Life Committee, who is working on it right now," said Amoroso.

Amoroso feels that another area of future benefit is the alcohol policy. "We have set up an alcohol information committee, which has worked in gathering information about the alcohol policies of various schools and about the possibilities of lowering the drinking age in Pennsylvania," said Amoroso.

"We have completed the first stage. Now, the Student Life Committee of the Board of Trustees can work toward alcohol education at Villanova, and at the same time we can work toward lowering the drinking in Pennsylvania.

"In a year or two, I am optimistic that with the support and the momentum gained, we will have a bill in the legislature which would lower the drinking age to 19, coupled with mandatory alcohol education in the high schools," said Amoroso.

Amoroso also pointed out that the majority of bills introduced to the Senate this year, including Senior Week legislation, came from the Student Caucus.

Other accomplishments of Student Government listed by Amoroso include the Financial Aid Seminar, carpools, the "Lottery Losers" seminar, and the improved appearance of Student Government at Villanova.

Amoroso did feel, however, that more could have been done this year to further the interest of the student. "I was disappointed that the budget was passed, because it did not represent the needs of Villanova. I wanted to see more money for financial aid and maintenance in dormitories and buildings. The student Senators did not oppose the budget merely because of the tuition increases," commented Amoroso.

"I really hoped to make Student Government more accessible to students this year," added Amoroso. "I think that the problem among students is apathy, but it is not entirely their fault. Student leaders must avail themselves more to students and work to find out what student needs are."

Student Government President Jeff Page Photo

Dean of Students Chosen

By MARY ANNE GRANGER

Father Robert Martin, O.S.A., has appointed Dean of Students. Martin is presently dean of student activities and will assume his new position next fall.

Martin has been at Villanova since 1977. He was associate dean of student Activities through 1977 and took over as dean of student activities in 1978. Previously, Martin was the Director of Student Activities at Biscayne College in Miami, Florida. Martin received his masters degree from Washington Theological Union in Washington and he graduated from Villanova in 1970.

The dean of students is a newly-created post within the University, replacing the dean of men and dean of women. Martin explained what the new job will entail, saying, "I will supervise the Student Activities office, the resident life office and the international students office. We've streamlined reporting process to the vice-president."

Martin has several goals for next year. "I want to become thoroughly acquainted with student life — the residents, student concerns, and also to become aware of international students' needs, concerns and programs."

"One of our goals will be to put competent staff in place. Beyond that, another goal would be to look at training programs such as R.A. and Orientation Counselor — seeing how well they meet students needs, and upgrading them"

Martin explained that he is "very sensitive to the need of women here to have an advocate," and he said he is planning to hire a female for one of his staff positions towards this.

Martin foresees no difficulties in assuming his new role, but expects to "take a full year to make all adjustments and learn all the goes on in the office."

As dean of student activities, Martin feels his major accomplishments include "taking what was a marching band and developing it into a music activities program. This is now a solid base for a good co-curricular program." Another accomplishment Martin listed was "helping the Union become a viable program which broke even. Also, we've put together a rather professional orientation program integrating activities, and making it university-wide."

"Personally, for me, it's a career step. I am hoping I will have the same on-going contact with students, which is important for the effective operation of the office."

Charlie Guida Photo

Rev. Robert Martin, O.S.A.

Senate Recommends Policies

By BOB HERMAN

A new parking policy was recommended by the Villanova University Senate April 10.

The policy stated that the main campus be kept as free as possible of traffic, that faculty, administrators, staff and service personnel pay the same fee for the same parking privilege, that authorization to park is to be understood to refer to the main parking areas bordering the south side of Lancaster Avenue, and the Spring Mill lot, that for a premium fee "preferred parking" is available for a limited number of vehicles in the lots on campus and that priority in the assignment of parking stickers for "preferred parking" will be based on the following: physical disability, job classification, seniority and location of office.

Father Rice, the vice-president for the administration stated, "The rationale behind the fee would be to encourage some people who park on campus to park off. Right now there is a capacity for 803 spaces on campus, we have issued 1207 stickers. In the allocation of student spaces we have a capacity for 2357 cars, we have issued 2500 stickers. We're doing a juggling act. Perhaps the student parking should be limited to seniors."

The resolution was passed by a 25-1-0 vote.

Another resolution discussed pertained to the present system of athletic advisement for scholarship athletes. In its report, the Athletic Advisory Committee stated that, "One person with no release time and no secretarial or staff help cannot hope to advise, monitor, and arrange tutorials and scheduling for 167 students."

Before accepting the report, faculty Senator Dr. Joseph George said, "I would hate to see our system changed. Maybe we are stressing the athlete more than the student. I'm not convinced that the athletes deserve the extra attention more than any other students."

The resolution passed by a 18-7-1 vote. The report from the Athletic Advisory Committee will now be forwarded to the President.

Also, Faculty Senator, Dr. Theodore Kondoleon, presented a motion stating that, "The Senate recommends that the President recommend that the Wednesday, the day before Thanksgiving should be a day in which classes will not be held beginning with the academic year 1982-83."

The resolution was passed by a 19-1-6 vote.

The last Senate meeting is scheduled on May 8 at 3:00 p.m.

Senate Chairman Warren Richardson Jeff Page Photo

Union Passes Resolution

By ANNE SUYDAM

The Political Union held its last meeting of the 1980-'81 school year Monday, April 13, in the West Lounge. The resolution: "This house favors the registration of handguns."

Robert W. Kotzbauer of the Citizens Crime Commission of Philadelphia was the guest speaker.

"Guns are fascinating to Americans. So long as Americans have guns, potential criminals will steal them," commented Kotzbauer. He stated that 50 percent of guns used in crimes are stolen. "Registration cannot stop stolen guns but can help (with crime)," he continued.

Proper training, denial of casual ownership and more graduated sanctions, such as confiscation, fines, and probation, are necessary steps, according to Kotzbauer, towards effective handgun control.

"Personally I don't think we are going to have a less violent society without banning of handguns," said Kotzbauer. He feels however that total banishment is impossible so that registration would be the most realistic step.

Kotzbauer stated statistics for Washington D.C., from 1977 to 1979, after the Firearms Control Act was passed: homicide dropped 26 per cent, assaults dropped ten per cent and robberies dropped 21-1/2 per cent. Kotzbauer feels that registration is necessary because handguns can kill so quickly and at such a minimal distance.

Kotzbauer stated that law enforcement agents, private security guards and in some cases, businessmen, should have ownership. "It is unrealistic ownership that permits crazies to pick up a gun today and use it tomorrow," he said.

Owen Evans, the liberal party speaker and Susyn Kurceba, the moderate party speaker, both agreed with Kotzbauer. Joel Renzo, the conservative party speaker, opposed Kotzbauer's ideas stating, "Registration is not the answer. The responsibility of the gun lies in the hands of the user, not in the beaurocracy."

The resolution passed with a 10-1 vote.

Kotzbauer worked for the Acryn-Beacon Journal in Ohio as a reporter and then went to The Bulletin in 1970. He began working with the Commission in 1980.

Robert W. Kotzbauer Jeff Page Photo

Alumni

(Continued from page 1)

"The football season provided opportunities for alumni to gather and meet. I have to find substitutes for that," said Capone.

Capone said he has received close to 300 phone calls from alumni since the decision was announced. "There is a great deal of alumni interest in the decision," admitted Capone.

1945 graduate Gerald A. Lee said that he had already sent a letter to Father Driscoll, and quoted from it, "I trust the decision to drop football was not an easy one to make. If it was, though, those who had a part in it know not what they have done; a rallying pole has been chopped down. For me, there is no adequate substitute."

The alumni the Villanovan spoke to felt that donations made to the University would be adversely affected by the loss of the football program. "I think the effect will be serious," said Behm. "I got 50 phone calls when it hit the Boston Globe. There will be a very serious effect on what alumni give the University."

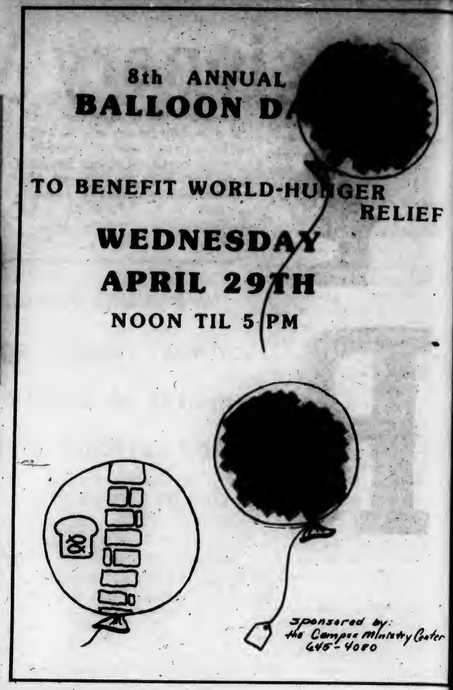
"I definitely do think donations will be affected," said Lynam. "Villanova athletics keep alumni thinking about Villanova. Without that, it will not be on their minds as much."

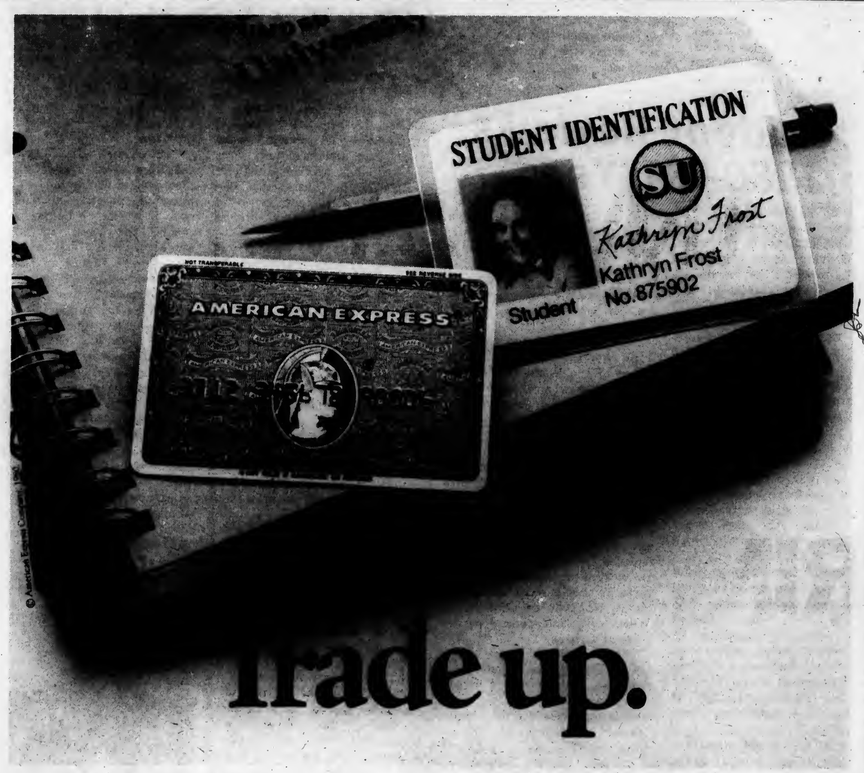
"Time will tell," said Lee. "It will be an awfully bitter lesson to learn that way, if donations are affected. I have not spoken to any classmates who do not feel alienated."

"Hopefully, there will be a counter-attack to reverse the decision," said Behm.

And, commented Lynam, "I don't think they touched all the bases — no last ditch effort was made to save the program . . . Fall won't be the same to me and I wonder if Villanova will ever be the same."

Teaching Opportunities in
Montessori
A.M.S. Approved 1981 Summer Teacher Training Program in Phila., PA & Ithaca, NY
CALL TOLL FREE 800-523-0874
PA CALL COLLECT 215-233-0141
AERCO Montessori
1400 E. Willow Grove Ave., Phila., PA 19118





If you have a $10,000 job waiting for you, you could have an American Express® Card right now.

Trade the card you've been using every day for the Card you'll be using the rest of your life.

You're about to leave school and enter a whole new world. You've got great expectations. So does American Express. For you.

That's why American Express has created a special plan that reduces the usual application requirements – so you can get the Card before you finish school.

All you need to apply is a $10,000 job or the promise of one.

You'll use the Card the wealthy and the well-traveled use for business lunches, buying clothes for work, paying for vacations – for all sorts of after-school activities.

One of the surest ways to establish yourself is to start out as if you were already established. And just having the Card gives you the chance to establish a solid credit rating.

So trade up now. You'll find application forms on campus bulletin boards. Or call toll-free 800-528-8000 and ask for a Special Student Application. And set yourself up for next year before you finish this one.

The American Express® Card. Don't leave school without it.

VILLANOVA
RINGS UNIVERSITY
SHOP
CLASS OF 1983
RING ORDERS
WILL BE TAKEN
APRIL 28, 29, 30
10 am TO 4 pm
FOR SEPTEMBER DELIVERY
$25 DEPOSIT REQUIRED

Scholars Appointed

By JACK DePIERRO

Two Villanova professors have been appointed Danforth Associates. Dr. Sterling F. Delano, of the English department, and Dr. Michael Burke, of the History Department, are two of 531 persons in colleges and universities throughout the United States who have been chosen to participate in the Danforth Associate Program.

The program involves the associates working directly with students on a personal basis in an effort to improve student-faculty relations and to strengthen the teaching-learning process.

Conferences are held for associates on various themes to carry out the program's objectives. In addition to being guests of the foundation at conferences, associates are eligible to apply for grant funds for special projects to enhance faculty-student relationships. Projects may involve efforts among faculty to develop new instructional styles and skills to renew themselves as more effective teachers and members of the teaching and learning community.

Rally

(Continued from page 1)

"I haven't talked to one alumni who is happy with the decision," he added. "I have talked to hundreds who are up in arms about it." The Trustee member said that the dropping of football effort will hurt future efforts to better Villanova University. "Some of the big supporters of football have been supporters of Villanova for over 50 years. You need alumni. Without them, who will go out and recruit students and help with monetary matters? They provide all the things a University needs," he said.

Trustees, who wished to remain anonymous, expressed hope that the decision could be overturned.

The Board member said that he was not at the Board meeting. "It never would have happened if I was there," he said. "Many of the biggest backers of athletics weren't at the meeting," he said.

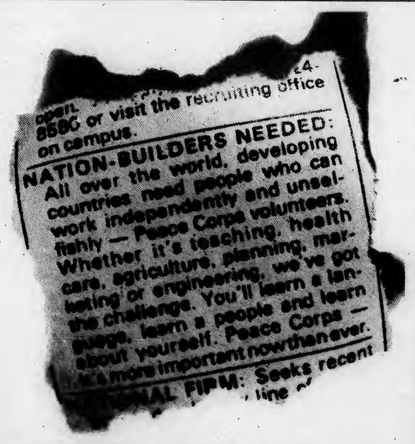
He said that he had no prior knowledge that football would be discussed at the Board meeting, he said that reports of large losses by the football team have been overexaggerated.

NURSES
$14,300 to $16,500 IS THE SALARY OF AN AF NURSE
PLUS: CHOICE OF ASSIGNMENT PRIOR TO OBLIGATION
5 MONTH INTERNSHIP
UNLIMITED SICK LEAVE
AUTOMATIC PAY INCREASE
CONTINUED EDUCATION

SPEC: PRACTITIONERS, MIDWIFERY, ANESTHESIA, FLIGHT, CRITICAL CARE, ENV PUB HEALTH RESEARCH, NEONATOLOGY, ONCOLOGY

BASIC TRAINING NOT REQUIRED
NO OBLIGATION WITH APPLICATION

AIR FORCE
A great way of life.



Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers
For information contact a recruiter, Mon.-Fri., 9-5pm: U.S.Customs House, Rm. 102A, 2nd & Chestnut St., Philadelphia, PA 16109. Toll Free (800) 462-1589 Ext. 66.

comment

A Tradition No Longer Lives

"The name 'Wildcats' is meant to convey the fighting alertness and skill of the animal chosen in vanquishing its enemies. This is the spirit of the Villanova athletic teams, whether upon the gridiron, diamond, court, or track. In victory or defeat the dogged determination to win is always present with the fighting spirit and alertness of the 'Wildcat'."

Villanova Media Guide

One day, the Villanova football team was practicing for the coming season; practicing to win for Villanova and themselves. The next day, the team stood on the Villanova Field House floor, shocked, disappointed and angry. But angry at whom; a group of 23 men they don't even know. All that they knew was that 87 years of a tradition was over.

The reasons given for dropping the program were not surprising. We have heard them all in the past. The football program was losing money. How much, we will never know for sure. It is safe to say, however, that the Villanova football program could have been kept alive; that is, if the Board members at the last meeting really wanted to keep it alive.

Apparently, the Board of Trustees did not feel that a football program was an important part of college experience. Apparently, they did not feel the commitment to the athletes, coaches, and students was worth keeping. Apparently, they did not feel that the "tradition" was worth keeping.

The decision to field a college football team involves many priorities, especially at Villanova. No one can argue with the need for academic development and building renovation. Academics, in fact, should be the "number one" priority of any institution of higher learning. We must remember, however, there is a difference between the "top" priority and the "only" priority.

On the surface, it appears that the Board's decision will affect about 100 people directly involved with the football program. Any athletic program, however, should extend itself to encompass the entire University community. Villanova's football program did just that.

Indeed, such events as Parents' Weekend and Homecoming will never be the same. Maybe the football program was losing money, but there are certain things to which one cannot attach a price tag.

Father President Driscoll's press release last Wednesday said that the decision to drop football was not "ill-considered." With reports claiming that the topic was not even on the original agenda, it is difficult to understand how the decision could be anything but "ill-considered."

It seems that a decision as historic as this deserved careful consideration and discussion with the people it will affect most; the students and alumni of Villanova University. Maybe the Board was correct in its decision to drop football. Then again, maybe they underestimated the importance of football at Villanova. No matter what the correct decision may be, Villanova students and alumni should feel slighted that they were left out of a decision affecting our University.

Next Tuesday, there will be a rally in behalf of the football program in the Field House. For students who are disgusted with the decision, this is a perfect opportunity to let the Board of Trustees know that you care about Villanova. Contrary to popular belief, student concern in reference to this decision can make a difference. Come on, you old Wildcat you!

letters

Jumbo Elliott

Dear Editor:

Congratulations on your fine article regarding Jumbo Elliott. He was a close and personal friend of mine and a marvelous individual.

Sincerely,
Thomas J. Burke '49
President
General Alumni Association

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to personally thank you for the tremendous effort your paper put forth in putting together the supplement on Jumbo Elliot. We all know Jumbo was a great man and one that certainly was responsible for helping Villanova gain a national reputation in athletics. In addition to the tremendous effort he made athletically to Villanova, your article accurately pointed out the strong character he built into many of his athletes.

He will long be remembered by the Villanova community and I believe the efforts of you and your staff helped to embed his memory into the minds of many people.

Thank you very much for all of your work and best of luck for the balance of your stay at Villanova.

As always, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
Robert S. Byrnes, '76
President,
Villanova Club of North Jersey

Dear Editor:

Thank you for The Villanovan. The tributes to Jumbo were outstanding, and may I congratulate you and your colleagues on the excellent supplement you produced, a fitting tribute to the late Jumbo Elliot.

With Best Wishes,
Yours Sincerely,
Ron Delaney, '59
Gold Medalist, 1956
Olympic Games

Sullivan Fires

To the Editor:

Although the Villanovan reported on the numerous dorm fires in Sullivan Hall, the insane schoolboy responsible for them has not stopped playing with his matches.

May I ask you, Mr. Pyro, what you are trying to accomplish? Is your goal a massive inferno resulting in injury and death . . . or is lighting fires your idea of a good time?

Can't you realize that if a resident doesn't awake to the faint smell of smoke, the fire could spread — leading to disastrous effects?

Please take the initiative to cure your problem. If you can't, then please don't let it affect the lives of others.

Sullivan Resident

El Salvador

To the Editor:

I am appalled by some of the recent comments in The Villanovan on the El Salvador issue. Regardless of whether or not "communists" are aiding the El Salvador freedom fighters and whether or not U.S. involvement in El Salvador leads to another Vietnam, the fact remains that the conflict there is primarily a broad-based popular uprising against a brutal murderous regime. Reagan administration foreign policy architects want the U.S. to intervene on the wrong side. It is hypocritical to condemn Soviet intervention in Afghanistan or Poland while at the same time condoning U.S. attempts to impose its way on weaker nations. In the long run the meddlesome foreign policy of both superpowers is doomed to failure.

Yours truly,
Robert "Flip" Ferrera
Class of '73

the Villanovan

BOARD OF EDITORS

Editor-in-Chief, William Clark
Managing Editor, Christine Kitzmann
Associate Editors, Robert Courey, Sharon Winters
News, Mary Anne Granger, Anne Suydam
Features, Kathi Iannacone, Laurie Almeda
Entertainment, Chris Slawecki, Amy MacLachlan
Sports, James Femia, Robert Conway
Photography, Charles Guida, Jeffrey Page
Business, Cindy Savarese
Advertising, Dawn Miller
Assistant News Editor, Sara Kelly
Assistant Entertainment Editor, Jerry Arth
Assistant Sports Editor, Kerry Lynch
Advisor, June W. Lytel
Typist, Marsha Santangelo

News: Carol Alkons, William Copperwaithe, James DeLorenzo, Richard DiStefano, Len LaBarth, Mary Claire Leahy, William McKernan, Drew Merrick, Laurie Miller, Kim Rushton, Kathy Scanlon, Anne Marie Urbinato, Dan Tiernan, Kietryn Zychal, Robin Gray, Sara Kelly, Douglas Earl, Marianne Lavelle, Vincent Hausmann, Jerry Dougherty, William Rock, Margaret Battistelli, Bob Herman.

Features: Marie Crossan, Diane Carroll, Kate McDonald, Diedre Flannigan, Mike Giammarco, Steve Runk, Sharon Mills, Philip Mudd, John Pace, Jr., Betty Rutkowski, Liz Schofield, Cathy Shells and Susan Welmarth.

Entertainment: Greg Anton, Paul Bern, Alice Fisher, Robert Ballard, Chris Radan, Michael Jones, Irene Smith, Susan Brehm, Fred Pescatore, Mark Kelly, Echelmeier Younger, Sara Kelly, Robert McGovern, Peter DiPesca, Kim Kingsland, Eileen McCaffrey, Sharon Connerton, Steve Helmetag.

Sports: William Beck, Stephen Fallon, Patrick Flynn, Jerry Ventresca, Larry Goenos, Michael Healy, Robert Walsh, Beth White.

Photography: Dave Coskey

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the Administration, Faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors. The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

letters

Football Announcement

Dear Editor,

I am speaking not only as a member of the now extinct Villanova football team, but as a concerned student. What has transpired here is a slap in the face to us all. It seems a cruel injustice that a few members of a board, can, in just a few hours, make such a powerful decision that so abruptly changes the immediate future for so many people. Further, this decision was apparently made without anyones prior knowledge.

Was there a reason for us to elect a student body president? Is this not a case where our president should at least be a part of the deliberation since such a drastic proposal does effect each and everyone of us? The fact is that our president found out after I did.

I wonder if everyone realizes that it's not just the members of the team that are being sacrificed. It's the coaching staff — forced to give up a job they have dedicated countless, unrecognized hours. It's equipment managers, trainers, and other personal directly involved with the team. It's cheerleaders and members of the marching band. It's alumni, who, more than any other sport, are attracted back to their alma mater to enjoy a Saturday football game, most notably homecoming. It's parents who take the opportunity to watch a game with their sons or daughters on Parent's Weekend. And of course it's us, the student body, once again deprived of one of the few on campus social events of the fall.

It's no secret that trying to maintain a football program here at Villanova was an expensive proposition. I suppose there aren't too many schools in the country that can boast financial rewards from their football programs, aside from those large, well established teams that receive television contracts year after year. Let's face it, football is not a money making endeavour in the college ranks. To make it so would only cheapen the game and take away from the glory and excitement which college football represents. There is something magic about a college football game in the way it creates a spirit of comradeship and pride for ones school. Something this school is definitely lacking.

What upsets me the most is the fact that those people who I am closest to, my teammates, will now be unwillingly forced to go elsewhere if they wish to pursue their athletic careers. This perhaps is the hardest fact for me to accept because to me the largest part of my college experience revolves around my friends. Now I face my Senior year with no football to look forward to and many of my friends gone. Needless to say I am deeply disappointed in the way the Villanova administration handled this whole situation. My bitterness and resentment will not easily be forgotten. We deserve an explanation.

Bruce R. Kullman
Junior M.E.

Dear Editor,

It was with great sorrow that we, alumni of not yet one year, noted the passing of intercollegiate football at our alma mater. Our feelings on the subject were mixed, and our comments twofold.

We realize that the prime focus of Villanova is to provide a quality education at an affordable price, and all moves consistent with achieving this objective seem justified. Yet the sudden and seemingly illogical nature of the decision to drop the football program makes us wonder about the thoroughness of the reasoning behind the decision and the exploration of possible alternatives. Astro-turf was installed and lights erected for night games; months later, the program is abruptly dropped. Talk of dropping the sport were frequent during our undergraduate days, and the financial statements may have been hard to argue. Yet, could we have cut back on the number of scholarships awarded, or limited our travel schedule to play local teams? Could cost-cutting measures, such as reductions in the coaching staff or elimination of the practice of taking players to a hotel before even home games, been tried? Many have raised the question of dropping to a smaller NCAA division.

Student body spirit was deteriorating, it seemed, during the end of our tenure at Villanova, and from all recent accounts we have heard, that decline is continuing. The elimination of one of the major social events of the fall cannot help. Villanova's relationship with its alumni has been tenuous in the past; elimination of one of the major post-graduate connections with the school hurts.

We have no doubt that Villanova will continue on its current course as a fine academic institution; we only ask that any and all possible alternatives be explored, and implore the administration and trustees to recognize the ability of intercollegiate athletics to enhance the reputation of the university and to offer tangible ties to the alumni.

We wish to address our second set of comments to the reaction of current Villanova undergraduates to the elimination of football as perceived by both alumni and the general public. Newspapers and local television carried quotes from Villanova students linking the move to the decline of the university, from football players saying that there was no reason to remain at the school, from others saying that the real harm of the move would be the elimination of tailgates and other parties. The real value of a football scholarship is the opportunity to receive a first-rate education — all else should be secondary. Players with eligibility remaining should be wished well in their search for other schools with football programs, but all should remember that the move was a financially oriented one involving an extracurricular activity, and the academic reputation of the university has not been tarnished; in fact, the administration's promise to recommitt the monies saved to finance the academic activities of the university should be the signal of continued academic excellence.

The elimination of football is regrettable. We only wish that some other alternatives be explored, that serious effort be made to reconcile the needs of a top-class academic institution with the ability to continue a tradition, perhaps the most collegiate of traditions.

Sincerely,
Terence M. O'Toole, '80
Ronald Triolo, '80
William Mezzanotte, '80
Robert Funk, '80

Father John M. Driscoll, O.S.A.

Dear Father:

I will get directly to the point which has resulted in my writing to you today as a former friend and alumnus of Villanova University (class of 1970). I am shocked and disheartened and most of all angry to hear that the Intercollegiate Football Program at Villanova University is to be discontinued.

The fact that I am a successful businessman is in great part a direct result of my overall collegiate development at your school (I don't think alumni can any longer call Villanova "their school). As a businessman I am familiar with the financial considerations which go into decisions of this nature, but I am also aware that Villanova University is not the only private institution which has been confronted with the problem of certain athletic programs "running in the red." Other universities (with some courage), however, have considered these athletic programs as an integral part of the development socially and academically and have gone to extreme lengths to preserve them.

Needless to say, as an alumni of your university I feel betrayed. I have been asked in the past, and have happily contributed to the annual alumni fund. The question I would like you to answer for me, and other (formerly) loyal alumni, is: Why did you not trust in the loyalty of your alumni enough to present the financial dilemma to us and ask for aid specifically to preserve the program? As a result of this "breach of contract" I will shortly be contacting other former alumni in the legal profession to pursue whether or not there are legal grounds for taking this "breach" to court for final resolution.

Your propaganda sheets in the admission booklets, and requests for aid can be considered nothing other than "lies." How in good conscience can a Catholic institution dishonestly claim that "we are a community at Villanova," on one hand, and then unilaterally (without prior notification to alumni who are part of the community) disband a program which thousands of us feel is an integral part of a young man or woman's collegiate development.

It should be clear to you that I believe you have made a serious mistake, not only in dropping the program, but in underestimating your former alumni families and in the long run hurt the University. How could you be so naive not to realize that many of those "dreamers" who had considered Villanova, (as they have seen it in the past) to be their school in the future will go elsewhere to fulfill their dreams?

Good luck in your future endeavors, but be sure to "debit" the loss of one loyal alumni and "credit" the almighty dollar.

Sincerely,
James J. Eller
Class of 1970

cc: R. Bedesem
(Villanovan)
A. Martin

P.S.: How much does "astro-turf" go for (cost) by the square yard? Has the Annual Blue/White Football Game schedules for May 1981 (as indicated in last week's "Spires") been cancelled also?

Dear Editor:

Whenever I heard Villanova University mentioned it was always regarded as a good institution which stressed academics and athletics, but can one honestly say this any more?

Last week when the Board of Trustees cut out football at Villanova it was an utter disgrace!!

By cutting out football, the Board of Trustees has hurt everyone in the Villanova community. One especially has to feel sorry for the dedicated group which comprised the Villanova football team; namely the players and coaches.

The Board cited money as the main reason for cutting out the program, but was this the real reason? Couldn't cuts have been made elsewhere? Will the alumni be so free to give money in the future? Will we, the students ever see an improvement in the academic facilities which is one thing we have been promised or will this money be put to use elsewhere?

The Board has done something which should have never been done; they put a dollar figure on an intangible. To express what football meant to the Villanova community would have been ludicrous; it was a total winning organization with character.

Last week at the University Senate meeting, there was a report submitted by the Athletic Advisory Committee which stressed the need of an advisor for scholarship athletes, but with the Board's motion, I guess this won't matter any more. Even the University Senate was not apprised of what was actually going on! This group includes members from the Administration, the faculty and the student government. Shouldn't this "governing group" have any say in the matter?

After witnessing the Board's latest action, one has to wonder what will be next. The Board of Trustees should feel ashamed for making a decision such as this — can we, the students still have good faith and respect for this group?

Sincerely,
Bob Herman
WKVU Radio
Football Broadcaster

Rev. John M. Driscoll, OSA

Father Driscoll:

I am writing to express my extreme dissatisfaction with the decision of the Board of Trustees to discontinue the football program. I believe that collegiate athletics are an integral part of the educational process. Football at Villanova should not be obliterated because of the inability of the Board of Trustees to provide adequate support and funding.

As a graduate of C & F, I sat and heard time and time again from my professors that there are always alternatives. I sincerely believe that this most recent decision, made at a "regular April meeting" of the Board, was completely irresponsible. Certainly, given the state of the economy, you are not without financial difficulties. Yet, to allocate 1.3 million dollars to renovate the field, and then to cancel the program indicates to me that the real problem rests squarely with the decision makers — the Board.

While my amusement and the amusement of the many students, alumni and friends of the University should not be your first priority, they should be considered. I am a marketing research director fully acquainted with the impact of change on a market. If you considered this decision at all, you certainly have not considered it's impact for the future. I promise you that I will not provide one cent to Villanova until a responsible reevaluation has been made of the people who determine where that money will be spent.

I love Villanova University. It will survive. The memory and the impact of this decision will also survive far longer than you can possibly imagine.

Sincerely,
Ann C. Pastore ('78)

cc: Editor, the Villanovan

Senior Dinner Dance

To The Editor:

I had the misfortune of attending the Villanova Senior Dinner Dance held at the Franklin Plaza Hotel last Saturday evening. Whose idea was it to take the low life, belligerent trash of the Villanova community out of the confines of their Radnor Township campus? At a first class hotel ballroom accustomed to catering for prominent national political figures and other dignified guests of the city of Philadelphia, Villanova students were conspicuously out of place.

For the benefit of those who did not attend I would like to recap the evening's highlights. Many guests finding the dance floor not adequate for their style of dancing decided to do their thing on top of the banquet tables. Glasses, desserts, and table cloths were no obstacle as they were kicked onto the floors spilling assorted beverages on chairs, suit jackets, and carpeting in the ballroom. At one point the situation was so out of control that the management asked the band to stop playing until order could be restored to the room. Waiters indicated that never before had they witnessed such "scum of the earth" behavior and that surely this would be the last Villanova engagement the Plaza would ever contract.

The Dinner Dance tickets suggested black tie optional, indicating a semi-formal event, but attire ranged from the ridiculous to the absurd. C & F girls, apparently running out of time at V.U., really outdid themselves with elaborate attention getting garb. By evening's end, drunken state and bare feet were commonplace.

At first, I thought the tickets were priced a bit too high. I mean $42.00 for a chicken dinner (not even boneless chicken). True, we did receive garter belts which retail at K-Mart for $.98. And yes, the band did play two slow songs yet, still it just didn't seem to add up. I was greatly relieved to find out that a percentage of every ticket sold went to rent suites 1001 and 1002 at the hotel. (Fact) What's that you say? What are suites 1001 and 1002? Why I thought everyone knew. There the plush tenth floor rooms reserved for members of the Villanova Union. Not only did our ticket money rent the rooms, we also stocked them with unlimited amounts of food and beverage (alcoholic that is). Surely anyone would agree that for a package like that, $42.00 was well worth it. (Interested parties might want to ask their union members if the banana girl cost extra.)

After witnessing the fiasco of last Saturday evening it would appear that Villanova University serves not to prepare students for life in the civilized world but rather to shelter them from it. In the future it might be a good idea to hold such gala affairs at Kelly's or the Gray Fox or anywhere else that Villanova students can do what they do best — flirt and flex. It's difficult enough to dress them up and you certainly can't take them out.

Respectfully Submitted,
Rudy Braccili '82

To Whom It May Concern:

It has come to our attention that various people feel that the Senior Dinner Dance ticket price was inflated to pay for two suites which were allegedly used for the enjoyment of Union members. The truth of the matter is we received one complimentary suite (a freebie) that was used for the purpose at the affair, and also, Union coordinators who volunteered at least one year of their time in planning events for the Villanova community. By our calculations, approximately 50 cents of your Dinner Dance ticket was used to fund this aspect of the Dinner Dance; whereas, approximately $1.50 of your ticket price was used to pay for many broken tables and glasses. Perhaps you should consider redirecting your concerns towards these controllable variables of your ticket price.

Susan Reiley
Charles Pannik

P.S. We would be more than happy to furnish you with a cost breakdown of the event should you so desire.

Priest Tells of El Salvador

(Continued from page 3)

Duarte, who is a figurehead president."

The Maryknoll missionaries have come into conflict with the government of El Salvador. For instance, an army unit shot down a Catholic magazine, Orientaciones, and then proceeded to beat the staff members. In fact, the Catholic Church counts nearly 100 assassinations of clerics and lay leaders, including three bishops, six nuns, and approximately 40 priests.

Reymann describes the inevitable conflict in terms of what the Church is trying to do for the poor in El Salvador. "They're making them conscious of their dignity, making them aware of the fact that they have a destiny other than slavery. The Church is trying to do something for these people," said Reymann.

"That puts them on a collision course with the government," added Reymann. "You tell a person that they have a right to live. You tell a person they have a right to all the other dignities that they deserve, and the one who is running the show doesn't like that."

Recent press accounts have portrayed the Maryknoll missionaries as aiding the rebels in their revolution. Reymann does admit that there are Catholic chaplains fighting with the revolutionaries. "That might sound repulsive to some people," commented Reymann, "but did we not send Catholic chaplains with our troops to Vietnam to offer support to the line soldiers?"

Reymann defended the missionaries, however, against the charge of instigating violence in El Salvador. "We have never preached violence. I know of nobody who does it in the Catholic Church. We must remember, though, that the Church has always taught legitimate self-defense when all other means to defend yourself have been exhausted. And certainly, all other means have been exhausted down there," said Reymann.

"I think if you are faithful to the teachings of Christ, you teach liberation and salvation, dignity, community and destiny. If you do, they're going to crucify you. Because Christ did these things, he was crucified. And I think it is significant to remember that Christ was a failure. There is no way he was a success. His own friends left him. He was all alone.

"Anyway, you teach something, and whatever happens to that something you teach is not your responsibility, because the student carries the ball as he will," said Reymann.

If anything, Reymann is exicted about the role of the Church in Latin America.

"On the level of the clergy and lay leaders, the Church is vital and alive. It's not afraid to speak out," said Reymann. "We cannot consider ourselves as piles of dung that are incapable of anything. We must remember that little people can often do great things."

Reymann feels El Salvador is a no-win situation.

In addition to praying for the people of El Salvador, Reymann is not hesitant to offer suggestions on United States' policy. "What can we do in the United States to erase this bleak picture and help to end the hostilities and to aid the freedom of these people? My answer is simply — do nothing. Stay out. Why should we go in there indirectly, with our military might. Let us not pretend that these people are children. They are not. They are fully capable of governing themselves," said Reymann.

While this idea may sound naive to some, Reymann feels that any other course of action will lead to disaster, because he understands the thoughts and sufferings of the people of El Salvador.

"The administration in Washington says that this is not another Vietnam. We have heard this until it comes out of our belly buttons. It seems to me that they are trying to affirm too much. It is another Vietnam, and it will affect the students at Villanova if it escalates. You'll be going down there, as some 56 green berets are already down there. And God knows how many are in Honduras and Guatemala right next door, and we don't even talk about them," said Reymann.

"We can kill 10,000; we can kill 20,000; you want to kill 50,000; you want to kill 100,000; you want to kill a half-million, we cannot win. There's no way we can win," added Reymann. "These people have suffered so much that their attitude is 'Give me liberty or give me death,' and they mean it. They're willing to die, men and women across the board.

"And to me, it's the most horrendous thing I've ever seen in my life. That we, as a free people here in the United States, can take it upon ourselves to destroy the legitimate aspirations of a marginated people in a country that is not our own, in the name of liberty, and under the guise of destroying communism," said Reymann.

United States pours in military aid to El Salvador.

The false image of American aid to El Salvador also upsets Reymann. He said that the vast majority of aid is, in fact, military aid. "There's some other aid, but only a trickle of it. And whatever aid we send down there isn't being given away. We're selling it, and the money goes right back to the United States. So the aid is phony. You're not aiding anybody.

"You're helping in the destruction of El Salvador, which means something between 9,000 and 13,000 people last year alone," he said. Reymann also added that no one knows the exact number of casualties, because neither the government nor the revolutionaries keep track of the number killed.

Indeed, the facts backup the claim that the United States has sent millions of dollars in military aid to El Salvador. The most recent figures show that we have sent 343.2 tons of military aid since January 1, which includes 265.3 tons on arms and ammunition, 24 tons of helicopters and spare parts, and 53.9 tons of "non-lethal" equipment, such as helmets, flak jackets and communications equipment.

While the American press is reporting of dimishing resistance to the government, Reymann alleges that these reports are attempts by the government to assert that the guerillas' January offensive has been defeated. In fact, Reymann is confident that El Salvador will remain in the news for quite some time.

"This thing is not going to end. They're not going to give up. No matter what happens, there's no way they can lose," said Reymann.

Even though Reymann is unsure of the eventual outcome in El Salvador, he feels it is inconsequential. He admitted that no plans exist for a new government in El Salvador, but he expressed confidence in the people of the country to govern themselves. "These are highly intelligent people; not highly educated in a formal sense, but very intelligent. I simply think we have to believe in them, and hope and trust that they will forge their own destiny in dignity," he said.

"Somebody has said to me that they're going to become communists. That's absurd. Why can't we say that they're going to become free and decide their own destiny?"

SUMMER AT IONA COLLEGE FOR CREDIT & FUN!

REGISTRATION FOR ALL SESSIONS BEGINS MAY 11

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

DOUBLE SUMMER SESSIONS

Return Coupon To:
DIRECTOR OF THE SUMMER SESSION IONA COLLEGE 715 NORTH AVENUE, NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. 10801
Please send me further information about SUMMER AT IONA COLLEGE FOR CREDIT AND FUN!
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____
TELEPHONE_____STATE_____ZIP_____

Telephone call you will never forget. Call 765-5999.

AEROBIC DANCE
"Chorus Line To Better Health"
Increases Cardiovascular Endurance • Trims - Shapes - Firms to Music • Provides More Stamina and Mental Relaxation
8 one-hour sessions $27.00 Twice Weekly
Registration required - Fridays 9 P.M.
Call Mary Ellen McMonigle, M.Ed.
Peter Kadel Dance Studio 964-1610
28 Lehigh Avenue, Devon 19333

THESIS WRITING?
Tired of paying for entire retype revisions?
Because word processing has memory storage, large reports - 100 pages or more - can be simply, effortlessly and cheaply revised without retyping.
Attention Faculty and Students
Free Pick-Up and Delivery
Call
WORD PROS
674-9800
For pricing info and how to use "drop off point" at Tolentine Hall

Soaps Are In Another World

Actors Play For The Moment

By SHARON WINTERS

The word "acting" conjures up the immortal theater, the epic film and recent prime time television efforts. However this portrait of an art omits the oft-forgotten soap.

The soap opera began on radio. The stories and characters captured the imaginations of listeners who sat, chairs close to the cabinet-media marvel, entranced. Images were portrayed in those days by the voice, the dialogue or script and the imagination of the listener.

Progress ensued and the soaps transferred to the new medium, television. Vocal inflection, body movement, appearance as well as the storyline were the modes of titillating an audience.

Since these engaging stories were on in the afternoon, the soaps were looked down on by many critics; indeed, television itself often did not fare well with film and theater lovers. Some still view the daytime dramas with disdain — as something to keep lonely housewives amused.

"It's not a lower class art," said Irene Baird of the theater department. "The soaps are not training for Greek or Shakespearean drama though," she explained. Baird went on to characterize acting in the soaps as, "moment to moment playing." Baird added, it will task your repertoire of life, the experience that you have."

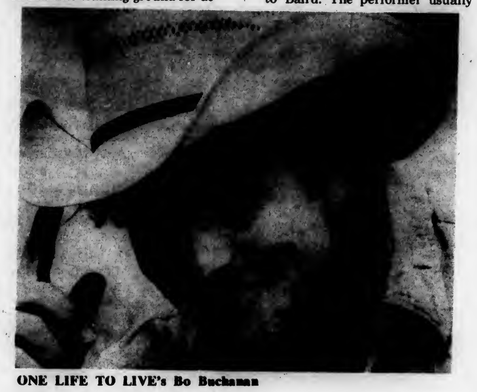
"There are some very good actors in the soaps," Baird said. However, even though the serials can be fine training ground for actors; they can also be limiting, she noted. "It can be limiting to the psyche if you have a seven-year contract. Usually the contracts for soaps last from two to seven years," she said.

Acting in a soap opera is a full commitment. The actor starts his day at 5 a.m. or 6 a.m., according to Baird. The performer usually must be at the studio at 7 a.m., she continued. The day ends at approximately 4 p.m., after several dry runs and the taping session, she said. Then the actor leaves to begin studying the next day's script in the evening, she explained.

The soap actor must have the discipline to create over night, noted Baird. Further, the actor must have the ability to change emotions quickly in response to the other players in the series, she said.

In the last five or six years the soaps have been characterized by ambiguous roles for performers, according to Baird. It is more difficult to distinguish between the good and bad characters, she noted. "They are more real as far as society is concerned," Baird added. The characters are richer; they grow on you because they are multi-dimensional, she continued.

There is an element of escapism in the soaps, commented Baird. They are absorbing and appeal to the romantic nature in people, especially women. The actors practice "therapeutic role playing," acting out viewers' fantasies while making them feel better.



ONE LIFE TO LIVE's Bo Buchanan

Showdown In Port Charles

By SUSAN WILMARTH

If you find yourself glued to your TV set every weekday afternoon from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., you may be a victim of the General Hospital craze which has struck the campus. As hard as it may be for those who don't watch GH to believe, there are some students who won't let a day go by without tuning in to see how their favorite characters are faring.

"I re-arrange my schedule so I can watch it . . . It's a good way to relax in the afternoons," Nancy Pensick confesses. Her roommate, Barb Zabielski, is also hooked on the show. A six-year veteran viewer, she claims that her mother got her interested, ". . . it was always on . . . I used to hurry home from school to watch it." Another diehard fan claims, "You get really involved with the characters after you watch something every day."

Not everyone is as faithful to the popular soap as these fans. Many students tune in every few days to catch up on what is going on. Karen Miller says, "I watch it every other day because if you watch it every day, it gets boring." Pete Phillips reluctantly admits he watches it, "every three weeks or so, but I don't miss anything."

The GH craze is not confined to the female population. There are also guys who are devoted GH watchers. Bill Loretan confides, "I know a lot of guys who watch it but won't admit it." Loretan confesses, "I watch it once in a while, but I think it's stupid the way it drags on and on and how the doctors never have any patients."

Although the show has been on for over twenty years, its surge in popularity is a recent phenomenon. Debbie Nachajski is typical of many Villanova students; "I've been watching it for about two years; since I came to college. It helps to think about other peoples' problems." Lisa Grafstrom started watching because "my roommates and friends are always watching it and talking about it." Karen Miller says she got hooked on the soap "a year ago when I walked into someone's room and was attracted to it. Everyone talks about it and I wanted to know what was going on."

Individuals have their own particular favorites on "General Hospital." Maria Sabia admits that she's "infatuated with Luke Spenser because he has good moves, but I'm in love with Joe Kelly." Karen Miller "admires Rose because she's strong willed and determined . . . but I hate Alex, I think everyone does." Nancy Pensick claims that "girls watch because the guys are hunks!" In particular, Pensick likes Robert Scorpio. Her roommate, Barb Zabielsi is hooked on Noah Drake and Hutch. Bill Loretan and Pete Phillips both cite Annie Logan as their personal favorite.

Some students aren't caught up in the popularity of GH. "I think the show is over-rated. I don't understand the big deal with Luke Spenser . . . I think he looks like something that crawled out from under a rock," says Linda Bickert.

Mark Reeth is another critic of the soap. He "thinks it's ridiculous the way people thrive on it . . . I have better things to do with my time than watch it." Jim Snyder adds, "I think it's absurd that people re-arrange their lives to watch it — it's smut. General Hospital has turned the Villanova community into a bunch of piddling little housewives."

Even though she criticizes the show, Linda Bickert still sneaks a peak at it now and then. "All in all, it's a pretty stupid show, but it's a goof to watch. Everybody watches it; I think we all need our heads examined."

Leslie Reynolds and Tom Geary as Luke and Laura of GENERAL HOSPITAL.

The dividing line between daytime and nighttime drama is not as exclusive as one might think. Actors from soaps are really known to many night-only television viewers.

Dennis Cole is the alumnus of The Felony Squad, The Bearcats and Bracken's World. Yet, he is also known for his day work on The Young and the Restless.

Larry Hagman, a rather famous, if not infamous, villain for evening television once played Ed Gibson on Edge of Night.

Viewers of Benson know Caroline McWilliams as a zany secretary; however, she was a regular on Guiding Light as Janet Mason.

Superman Christopher Reeves, now an accomplished film star, began on the small screen in Days of Our Lives.

Some nighttime stars became so devoted to their favorite stories that they just had to be on them. Comedian Carol Burnett appeared on All of My Children and multi-talented Sammy Davis Jr. guest starred on One Life to Live.

Loving In The Afternoon

By MARIE CROSSAN and LAURIE ALMEDA

If Villanova students could live as explicitly as characters portrayed in daytime soaps, undoubtedly, there would be a cold water shortage on campus.

Within the 13 daytime serials there are 350 actors and actresses revealing vices of lust, greed, vanity, and ambition that almost make J.R. Ewing seem like a regular nice guy.

Characters living from crisis to crisis without reprieve is a common theme throughout the soaps. Producers intensify this theme by introducing steamy sex to the daytime drama.

A multitude of variations are found in the theme "love in the afternoon." Each soap has its own approach to depicting this theme. However, these approaches can be narrowed down into certain general categories.

The mother-daughter-single young man-love triangle is becoming increasingly popular on the daytime drama. Something more ordinary to the modern American is the younger man-older woman syndrome. In dealing with the bitter side of love, soaps often depict the frustrated husband stuck with the institutionalized wife. Doctor-nurse and doctor-patient relationships reveal the more professional aspect of working America.

The intensity sexual ethics have on creating critical life experiences can be exemplified in the character of Laura Webber Baldwin. Laura lived in a commune at age 14. She had an affair with a forty year old man, and then proceeded to murder him. By age 18, Laura had married her true love. Laura had been raped and was separated from her husband by the age of 19. Last summer, Laura was fleeing from hit men with her one-time rapist and professing her undying love to him by age 20.

The consolation found from all these intriguing situations? Even though daytime dramas are heating up the airwaves and advocating afternoon delight, keep the faith — there is always little Annie Logan.

Fantasy Becomes Reality

By KATHI IANNACONE

Fascinated by films at an early age, Wes Shank frequented the Suburban Theatre each week to see the double feature horror films. Each Tuesday, Shank would stop at the local candy store, pick up the newest in comic books, skim through them for the classifieds, and through which he began a collection of science-fiction, horror and fantasy memorabilia. What started as a small hobby soon mushroomed into a large collection and investment.

Shank began his interest by seeking out the original 5 x 10 publicity stills of the movies which he liked. Later, he continued his hobby with the quickly growing collector's item of original film posters. Finally Shank accumulated his memorabilia with the addition of original film props.

Years after its premier release, Shank saw The Blob and "knew it was a good film" — contrary to the belief of other critics. Shank investigated the film's background and discovered that The Blob was filmed in the local Valley Forge Studio in Chester Springs. Shank arranged to tour the studio. During his visit, Shank spotted a black can hidden in a corner and labled "The Blob." Long after the tour, "thrilled at what he had seen," Shank "kept thinking about the object and thinking that it would be something fun to own."

Within days, Shank called the studio and made an offer for "The Blob." The director quoted him a price of $200. Shank saved his money and in November of 1965 Shank purchased the first of his movie props. Upon purchasing the prop, the director threw in a bonus copy of The Blob's shooting script along with one of the miniature sets used in the picture.

Shank doesn't see himself as a new collector but rather as a "film historian. Film is a 20th century art form. I see it as preserving some of this form," commented Shank. "I hate to see these things thrown out; if I could open up a museum, I would."

Shank soon furthered his collection by attending an MGM prop auction in California for two days. Here, he purchased a few more pieces of memorabilia. At a 20th Century Fox auction in 1971, a friend in attendance purchased an original statue used in Planet of the Apes. "Now people know what I'm looking for and they call when things go up for sale. The demand has risen on some of these items so that it makes it a great, as well as an exciting investment." Shank continued, "Once I bought a poster for $2.50 that's now worth $250."

The entirety of the Shank's collection is located in the Shank home. The room houses at least 1000 objects. Shank concentrates only on what object he likes and on those he believes will be classics.

Included in his vast collection are: the original flying saucer, the original ray gun and costumes used in one of Shank's favorite classics Forbidden Planet. He possesses a huge statue used in the trial scene of the original Planet of the Apes, along with the extra's ape masks. Shank noted that when he first saw the "Apes" film and the statue in it, he knew that someday he would like to own this object.

On a rack located on the far wall of the collection room, Shank has neatly stored a number of costumes used in the Oz scenes of The Wizard of Oz. Shank has two file cabinets which hold over 13,000 publicity stills. Comic books and original posters fill the shelves covering the walls.

Decorating Shank's walls are the posters with which he began his collection. Among them are King Kong, Dracula, The Ghost of Frankenstein, The Thing and of course, The Blob. A large three sheet poster from a favorite film of Shank's in which Lon Chaney advertises The Phantom of the Opera, covers one wall of this room. Shank had no idea of its value, but commented, that "it is one of his proudest possessions."

The pride which Shank's collection brings to him is expressed in the plaque which is placed on the door leading into his collection room: "The only difference between men and boys is in the price of their toys."

On Wednesday, April 29, at 7:30 in the Connelly Center Cinema, Shank will lecture on his unusual collection and its origin. He will also discuss the technical aspects of science fiction film making. Shank will bring pieces of his memorabilia to display during the lecture.

While Shank dabbles in memorabilia, he also establishes his profession within the film industry. Shank's occupation encompasses working with the finished film product. "Cinicure" is the name of Shank's business. He prides himself on the fact that it is the only film rejuvenation outfit within nearly 100 miles of the Philadelphia area.

"Rejuvenation is an unglamourous side of film." It is the permanent removal of black scratches and abrasions done through a chemical process.

Although Shank began his film career as an editor of news film and slide mounter for Channel 10, Shank is "happiest when he is physically working with the film."

Check Out Harcum This Summer

EXCITING NEW PROGRAMS

EXPERIENCE '81
A Summer Program for College Bound Students
July 1 to July 31
A unique experience for young men & women in grades 10-11-12 to get a preview of college life. It will be a month of academic, recreational & social activities to interest & challenge the high school student.
EDUCATIONAL RECREATIONAL SOCIAL

EXTENDED SEMESTER
For All College Bound Freshmen
July 1- July 31
The Extended Semester program is for all students accepted to college for 1981-1982 academic year. It is a program for students who need to develop their reading, writing and study skills.

English 100e - Study Skills Seminar
In this course emphasis is placed on developing effective listening, organizational and test-taking skills along with improvement of reading and vocabulary performance.

English Composition 101
Here is a course which will provide the student with instruction in the techniques of written & oral expression. Emphasis is placed on writing, clear & effective themes, and term papers.

SUMMER SCHOOL AT HARCUM

- Business Administration
- Humanities
- Science
- Social Science

Summer Session I & Twilight Term — May 26 to June 25
10-Week Term — May 26 to July 30
Summer Session II — July 1 - July 30

CALL 525-3554
HARCUM SUMMER PROGRAM
Dr. Richard J. Cooper, Assistant Dean of Instruction of Harcum Junior College
Bryn Mawr, PA 19010

the Villanovan Classifieds

APT. FOR SUBLEASE — Summer months, 1 bdrm., sleeps (2). Haverford location. 10 min. from Villanova. Call 896-7134 or 789-7017.

Female Roommate needed to share apartment in Haverford from June 1 to August 31. Beautiful apartment one block from the train station. Reasonably priced! Contact Jennifer 525-9085 or 525-9424.

COUNSELORS, over 19 who like to have fun and make fun at unique overnights boys' summer camp in PA. Able to instruct either one of the following: watersafety, waterskiing, boating, soccer, basketball, arts and crafts, rock climbing, riflery, ham radio, rocketry, science, archery, track, tennis, golf, pioneering or general athletics. Write Camp Director, 138 Red Rambler Dr., Lafayette Hill, PA 19444.

Apt. Mate needed to share rent in 2 bdrm., Havertown location. Rent through August. Only 15 min. from Villanova. Call eve., 789-7017.

FOR SUMMER SUBLET: 5 bedroom house, Bryn Mawr, 1 mile from school. Call 527-4664.

OCEAN CITY, N.J. One double room for 2 girls. $50 per week, includes breakfast and laundry. (restaurants feed waitresses dinner) first come .... 525-4875.

Wanted: Female roommates to share large apartment in Bryn Mawr Courts for the months of May, June, July, and August. Call Jacqui or Shirley, 527-3146.

DISABLED U. PENN PROFESSOR offers FREE APARTMENT in lovely Penn-Valley home, partial board, trans. arrangements and negotiable weekly stipend — in exchange for attendant care services. Any responsible student or young faculty member may contact: Michele MacKinnon, 243-8108 from 3-5 weekdays. Driver's license preferred.

SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE
Applicants are now being considered for the 1981 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts, Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Theater Director, Piano Accompanist and Singing, Archery, Tennis, Trampoline, Gymnastics, Photography, Cheerleading, Jazzercize, Scouting and Nature Study, A.R.C. Swimming instructor, Boating, Canoeing and Water Skiing instructor or General Athletics. COUNSELOR UNIT LEADERS must be college graduate experienced in camping. Able to plan schedule for activities, evening programs, etc. Supervise large staff. Write Camp Office, 709 Ardmore Ave., No. 102, Haverford Village, Ardmore, Pa. 19003 or phone Miss Sherman, 215-649-9022 or 215-687-7901.

ATTENTION SENIORS — If you or someone you know lives off-campus alone in somebody's house or garage and is graduating, please call Kurt, 527-3536.

GRADUATING FEMALE to work in Newark, Del. area desires to share apartment with same. 446-7840.

ACTIVIST — Summer and Permanent positions available with Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition, building the progressive movement. Join nationwide Summer of '81 grassroots drive to stop the biggest corporate rip-off to date — natural gas decontrol. Do community education/fundraising. Call for interview, 568-0830.

LOST
Gold chain necklace approx. 45" on or around dance floor at senior dinner dance. Sentimental value. Reward. If found call 825-7675.

Personals

John D. (alias BCAU bridges),
I'm glad you picked that weekend to visit your friends at Lehigh. Has "clue less" spread around V.U. yet?
Janet with the pink outfit at Lafayette

Bird,
Here's to the "12 o'clock fold" who is generous with his floor space, the "Best of Broadway's" fine producer and a vital contributor to the success of project: SUNSHINE; to the "team" that's just begun and to the person who's friendship is invaluable.
L.W.

Ches,
Project: SUNSHINE's most competent publicity director and the most dedicated Union member I know, in addition to being Villanova's "Video Vitalizer." You are a true friend in "sunshine" and "rain", and that's where you'll leave your real "mark."
L.W.

For Hire:
1 university marching band. Available any Saturday next Fall. (weddings, bar mitzvahs, maybe a football game?)

Dear Jim C.;
I worship the slippers you shuffle in; and I'm sure that together we could make beautiful music ..... let's shuffle off into the fourth dimension.
Love,
Cindy — The Pinball Wizard
(P.S. I'm closer than Camden)

Dear Colleen,
Just wanted you to know that you're more than awesome to me.
Love,
From someone who knows more than D.Z.

WALTER — We miss you. Come over and eat ice-cream with us.
Debbie, Jamie, Ashley

Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers
For information contact a recruiter, Mon.-Fri., 9-5pm: U.S Customs House, Rm. 102A, 2nd & Chestnut St., Philadelphia, PA 19106. Toll Free (800) 462-1589 Est. 66.

Miss Villanova

APRIL 27 IN THE VILLANOVA CENTER

Don't Delay - Any Group
Or Dorm Can Nominate
Some Lucky Lady!!

NOMINATION FORMS MUST BE TURNED IN TODAY.

All contestants must attend a meeting on Friday, April 24, at 3:30 in the A.C.S. Office.

Well, those brilliant old men on the Board of Trustees have finally confirmed the rumors about senility . . . first they spend 1.3 million to up-grade the football stadium . . . raise the tuition . . . and then cut out the football program . . . logical, isn't it? . . . and now for their next trick . . . at least it gave Henry Amoroso another worthless rally to organize . . . Henry, haven't you learned anything in a year? . . . but what will we do without a football team? . . . What excuse can we use now to congregate in the parking lot and drink ourselves into comas on Saturday afternoons? . . . and without a Homecoming, who's going to buy all of the worthless junk they sell at the bookstore? . . . anyway, a new Vice-President for Student Life has been announced . . . Dr. Richard Neville, formerly of the Counseling Center . . . and after dealing with Villanova students . . . he'll probably be returning as a patient . . . and kudos to Father Martin on being named Dean of Students . . . hey Tony, too bad, better luck somewhere else . . . and speaking of congratulations . . . congratulations to the Class of '81 . . . after the recent dinner dance debacle . . . you've succeeded in getting Villanova students banned from every hotel except the Budget Lodge . . . and even there they won't let us use the vibrating fingers . . . We understand that parking on-campus next semester will be "preferred parking" . . . one of the priorities is for the handicapped . . . does that count mental infirmities? . . . and does that mean that most of the faculty will be littering the sidewalks with their cars? . . . and that the Trustees will have personal garages? . . . nominations are now open for Miss Villanova . . . The RSA asks that all entrants send names, addresses, and cheap Polaroids of what really comes between those Calvins . . . Buffoon Day is also upon us . . . God, won't those people ever go away? . . . Finals are approaching fast, too . . . We're sure the quick energy for studying isn't going to come from Easter candy . . . unless your candy comes from Villanova drugstore

Good-bye, Henry . . . who will we have to kick around now? . . . and to all of you we missed . . . don't worry . . . we'll slander you next year . . . Who knows, who cares . . .

BE A CAMP COUNSELOR

A fun experience

CAMP SWAGO - CAMP SWATONAH
1410 EAST 24th STREET
BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11210
WRITE FOR APPLICATION

All college students eligible.
A Brother-Sister Camp
Prime location on beautiful lake in the Pocono Mts. of Penna.
All water, land, cultural and social activities
Eight week season. Room & board plus salary related to skills & experience.

CONESTOGA CLEANERS
907 CONESTOGA ROAD
ROSEMONT, PENNA
19010
LA 5-3431
PLANT-ON PREMISES
SAME DAY CLEANING.
WE CLEAN AND PRESS ON SATURDAYS
WE CLEAN SLEEPING BAGS DOWN JACKETS
ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS

☆ ATTENTION ☆

All interested in serving on University Senate Standing Committees, there will be applications available in the Student Government Office (Room 204 Dougherty Hall) for seats on the following Committees for the 1981-82 Academic year:

Academic Policy Committee
Athletic Advisory Committee
Budget Committee
Rank and Tenure Committee
Rules and Review Committee
Social Action Committee
Student Life Committee
University Planning and Priorities Committee

The procedure for selection of these Committees includes review of applications and interviews, so please complete and return the applications to the Student Government Office as soon as possible.

LET YOUR VOICE BE HEARD!

CASH FOR YOUR BOOKS

We Will Buy Any Current Edition Textbook

SUNSHINE BOOKS, LTD. BUYS AND SELLS
TEXTBOOKS AT PENN, TEMPLE, AND DREXEL.
WE PAY UP TO 50% OF THE CURRENT LIST PRICE
FOR NEW, USED, OR COMPLIMENTARY BOOKS
NO MATTER WHERE YOU PURCHASED THEM.
OUR PRICE DEPENDS UPON THE CONDITION OF THE BOOK AND ITS FUTURE RETAIL VALUE.
SO FOR QUICK CASH, PACK UP YOUR BOOKS AND HEAD TO SUNSHINE.

809 LANCASTER AVE.

(BETWEEN THE ARCO GAS STATION AND THE CAMPUS CORNER HOAGIE SHOP)

APRIL 30th - MAY 9th
8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.

UNION PAGE

CAMEL & ELEPHANT RIDES

IN THE QUAD
50¢

APRIL 30
10 - 4

Play
"SIMON SEZ"
with
BOB SCHAFFER
DATE APRIL 28 TIME NOON-1:30
PLACE IN FRONT OF THE CONNELLY CENTER
FINALISTS WILL BE AWARDED T-SHIRTS AND TROPHIES !!!

SPRING FEVER WEEK

BEST OF BROADWAY

Monday, April 27 in the Cinema an original composition of the most famous of Broadway tunes. Two large production numbers open and close the show. In between, talented students will perform their favorite songs. Some highlights are scenes from:

A Chorus Line
Sound of Music
South Pacific
Oklahoma
Annie
and more!!!

THE BIG EVENT

APR 28
8:00 PM
at kennedy mall
a variety talent show

The Fabulous

Greaseband
ROCK 'N' ROLL REVUE

Thursday, April 30, 1981 8:00 p.m.

Villanova University Field House

— General Admission $2.00 —

Tickets available at Connelly Center ticket office.

For more information call: 645-7280

Wednesday, April 29
at 9:00 in the Day Hop

MAHUMBA BAND

A Rock Band. A band organized by a group of Villanova students who play original works as well as other artists work.

Admission in 50¢

CULTURAL FILM SERIES

April 26 at 7:30 in the Cinema

SMALL CHANGE

In this film director Francois Truffaut constructs an intricate and graceful mosaic around the lives of several children in a small provincial town. Truffaut masterfully elicits moments of raucous hilarity and genuine trauma while demonstrating a vision of childhood that is profound and wise, realistic and entertaining.

CHILDREN OF PARADISE May 3

Marcel Carne, director, observes the melancholy masquerade of life and the riddle of truth and illusion in this story of four men and their fatal attraction toward one woman. It will be shown in the Cinema at 7:30. Admission is $1.00 for students for each event.

SCI-FI MEMORABILIA DISPLAYED

On Wednesday, April 29 at 7:30 in the Cinema, Mr. Wes Shank will conclude the Science-Fiction Mini Series as he discusses technical aspects of Science-Fiction filmmaking and displays memorabilia from Science-Fiction, Horror, and Fantasy film genres. Mr. Shank's personal collection includes the original BLOB, masks from PLANET OF THE APES, costumes from the WIZARD OF OZ and FORBIDDEN PLANET, along with numerous classic posters, books, records and movie stills. Admission is Free.

Cinema

A MARK RYDELL FILM THE ROSE

Friday, April 27, 1981
at 7:00 and 9:30
in the Cinema

Villanova Wishes Father Deegan Best of Luck

The VILLANOVAN Staff Extends Its Best Wishes to Father Deegan as President of Merrimack College.

Congratulations
Father Deegan

Good Luck and Best Wishes

The Campus Ministry Staff

WHISKEY COMPANY
SALUTES
FR. DEEGAN
for all his help to the University.

Best Wishes from the Brothers and Sisters of Beta Gamma Tau

The ITALIAN CLUB of Villanova University would like to express Congratulations to Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A. on his recent appointment as president of Merrimack College.
We would all like to wish him the best of luck.

"Fair be all thy hopes, and prosperous be thy life. . ."

HENRY VI, PART ONE

Summer Shakespeare Repertory Company

&

VILLANOVA THEATRE DEPARTMENT

James J. Christy
Artistic Director

Villanova, Villanova
When we leave your sheltering walls
We will leave an echo ringing
Through your treasured halls
We will leave an echo ringing
In the silent night
While our memories are singing
Of the Blue and White

The Villanova Singers wish
Fr. Deegan
The Best of Luck
at
Merrimack College

Fr. John E. Deegan, O.S.A.

Best regards in your new position as President of Merrimack College

The Office of Student Activities
Villanova University

LUCY, CHRIS, JOHN,
JEANNE, MARY PAT AND BOB

Congratulations
Fr. Deegan
On your new position as President at Merrimack College.

The Small Business Development Center wishes you the best of Luck!

Dear Father Deegan —
Thank you for the support and encouragement you gave our club. It was very much appreciated and will be greatly missed. Congratulations on your appointment and best wishes for many happy and successful years at Merrimack.

Villanova Women's Glee Club

connelly center

Thank you for making the Connelly Center a reality.

Best wishes in your new position.

THE CONNELLY CENTER

Dear Father Deegan,

Thank you for all your help and dedication you gave to our organization and to the entire student body of Villanova University.

We wish you the best of luck at Merrimack College.

Congratulations,

The Student Government

villanova union

Dear Father Deegan,
The Villanova Union would like to thank you for your constant support and guidance. We greatly appreciate the commitment you have made to student involvement and student development while at Villanova. We wish you success at Merrimack College and we know you will approach your position with the same enthusiasm we have seen in you at Villanova.

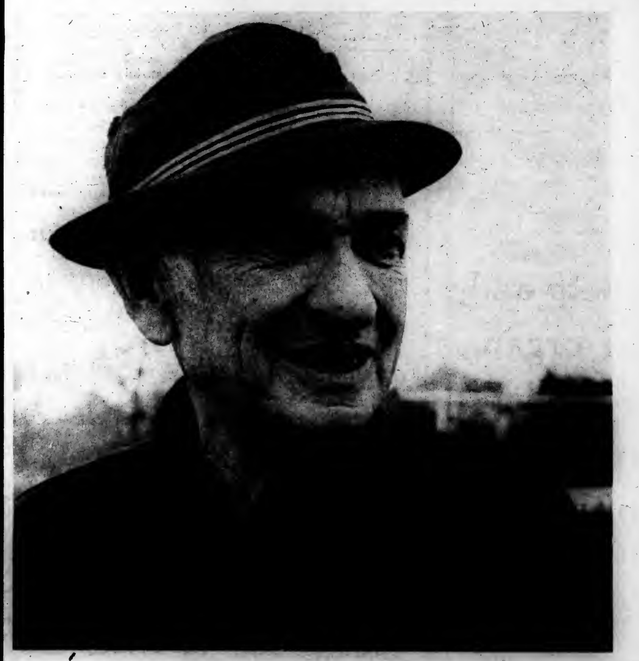
With Much Thanks,
The Villanova Union

JUMBO ELLIOTT INVITATIONAL TRACK MEET

SATURDAY, MAY 30
VILLANOVA STADIUM
1:30 P.M.

15 Running Events

Featuring the Top Names in World Track:



Renaldo Nehemiah
Eamonn Coghlan
Steve Scott
John Walker
Don Paige
Sydney Maree
Amos Korir
Rod Dixon
Mark Belger
Francie Larrieu

Proceeds to the Jumbo Elliott Memorial Fund
Tickets: $12 and $8 reserved, $4 students (18 and under)

Tickets can be purchased at the Villanova Field House Ticket Office, at the Franklin Field Ticket Office (during the Penn Relays) and at all Ticketron outlets.

Critics Choose Year's Top Five

By JERRY ARTH

Talking Heads: Remain in Light

Year after year, the Talking Heads prove to be the leading band of the New Wave. This album is no exception, and further enhances the Heads' reputation for courage in exploring and developing the boundaries of modern music. A somewhat radical daparture from the normally jarring Talking Heads style, Remain in Light draws heavily from African tribal rhythms, which David Byrne and producer Brian Eno masterfully weave into the Heads' quirky sound. The result is an energetic, enigmatic dance album, primal and ultra-modern at the same time. Remain in Light will probably replace the Talking Heads '77 as the benchmark on which to judge all other future Talking Heads' creations.

David Bowie: Scary Monsters

David Bowie returns to the music scene, not only to "eat his young", but to fully relish the task. Savaging his own past changes yet delighting in re-creating them, on Scary Monsters, Bowie offers the definitive anthology of his many styles and periods. Yet, on this album, there is a mature Bowie, a more pensive and jaded one. With bleak and stark lyrics combined with an alienated, almost disembodied sound, one gets the distinct impression that this is Bowie's last hurrah, his good-bye to rock and roll. And perhaps his branching out into the other arts, theatre and painting, signifies that Bowie has grown up and grown out of music. But even if it is not his last, Scary Monsters is Bowie's finest effort in years and must be considered as one of the year's best.

B-52's: Wild Planet

What can be said about the best dance band around? As a follow-up to their surprisingly successful debut, Wild Planet is just a hell of a dance album from the band from Athens, Georgia. Never veering too far out of bounds, the B-52's produce nothing as memorable as "I'm not no Limburger" here, yet the album is solid "get happy" music from start to finish, and never misses a beat. For sheer mindlessness and an instant cure for depression, Wild Planet has to be placed in this year's Top 5.

Adam and the Ants: Kings of the Wild Frontier

Bursting out of obscurity from somewhere in England, the Ants have recently become all the rage, and with good reason: on Kings of the Wild Frontier is some of the freshest music to come out since Elvis Costello. And what's so amazing is its accessibility to those of all musical tastes. Ant-music is happy and hedonistic, not for sexpeople only. Will Adam and the Ants last after this impressive debut? Perhaps not, but at least on this album, they do offer the truth and a fairly good suggestion: "that music lost its taste/so try another flavor — 'antmusic'." Everyone should be tasting it this year.

Clash: Sandinista !

This monumental work from The Clash is destined to not be fully understood for years to come. Much like the Beatles' White Album, Sandinista! is so rich, so complex, that to wind through its labyrinth would take an intensive analysis. Suffice it to say that this is a "must have" collection for every serious music lover. Suffice it to say that London Calling pales in comparison. Suffice it to say that Sandinista! is the most important work of the year.

By AMY MacLACHLAN

Dire Straits: Making Movies

Masterpieces are rarely released. When a music lover has the good fortune of stumbling upon one when least expected, the delightful feeling experienced is vaguely comparable to a child's first ice cream cone or a job offer starting at 100,000 dollars. This album is a masterpiece.

Dire Straits began their career with a few fair albums. Nothing worth noting other than a totally different sound and a totally different type of vocalist. Making Movies was sure to be another mild hit appealing to the few who developed a taste for vocals. Surprise! With the addition of Roy Bittan on piano, the music clicked. The result — the best album this year.

Bruce Springsteen: The River

The Boss returned this year with a double album and a thundering set of fabulous concert experiences. The album, The River, was greeted by eager fans as an instant success. Baffling millions as to how this seemingly — more than a human — could acquire a brain so large as to hold so massive an imagination. He must be several people in one. Possibly a Bach, a Handel, and a little Mozart rolled onto one greasy native of all unlikely places as New Jersey? One surprise after another. If any one deserves fame more than this giant of the music industry, he would probably be merely a mass of brilliant jelly. No one could be as exceptional and still remain in human form.

Steve Winwood: Arc of a Diver

Steve Winwood's Arc of a Diver exemplifies the talent of the musician. He participates completely in his creation, playing almost all the parts. The result is an easy listening, beautiful collection of melodious arrangements. Although he did not participate in the composition of the songs, it is highly unlikely that any other musician could have done justice to these selections other than this artist. This album reads as if it were a page out of a diary. Steve Winwood has matured into a butterfly.

The Pretenders: The Pretenders

The Pretenders debut album titled simply, The Pretenders, was an innovative while marketable success. Highlighting spunky Chrissie Hynde, this release captures the "punk" sound in all its sometimes offensive glory. The release still manages to remain within the pleasurable bounds on the narrow scale of pleasant audio-sensation.

Selections worth mentioning include Kid, a melodious new wave number followed shortly by the FM hit Brass In Pocket. This is Chrissie's little reminder that she is certainly not a poor, poor, pitiful Linda. She personifies the rough and tough female that has come to be expected from the women in this brand of music. Precious drives the vivid description of Hynde's personality home.

The Clash: Sandinista!

The Rude Boys are back. They have learned how to play their instruments and have even written a few melodies to compliment their sometimes offensively base lyrics. This band deserves mention as this years new group that has come the farthest in their field without sacrificing any of their original standards. Built on a concrete foundation of revolution-type rock, this sound resembles the Beatles activist days. Their first notable market success, London Calling, contained a more catchy selection of songs than the totally brash sound captured on the vinyl of Sandanista! The cult following of this group alone suggests that there is something here that is extra special. The Clash are not easy to forget.

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

Dire Straits: Making Movies

Dire Straits weld sound and meaning more consistently and profoundly than any other band around. Little scenes drift in and out of songs almost exactly like the way Mark Knopfler sings and the band plays; sometimes, like In The Gallery or Skateaway from this LP , they ride a song with a phantomlike quality that is interrupted only by Knopfler's ability to stun you with a red-hot guitar lick or a verbal bullet from a shout or mumbled phrase. Making Movies is powerful, yet not overpowering because it doesn't lose any of its thoughtful and somber touches by allowing the listener to breathe. That makes Making Movies music for young people, because, to a young person, it is very important to be thoughtful and somber and allowed to breathe.

Talking Heads: Remain In Light.

Like all previous Heads releases, Remain in Light quickly became one of the most important musical events of the year. The fantastic tour with which they supported this LP included Busta Cherry Jones, ex-Roxy member and Eno alumni, on bass and Nona Hendryx on backing vocals, and didn't hurt; nor did the impending release of My Life in the Bush of Ghosts, the collaboration between Eno and the most talkative Head, David Byrne, and most of which was actually recorded before Remain in Light. Often, this is chilling, breakneck, alienated music reflecting a chilling, breakneck, alienated world. The Third World influences are the most important thing about Remain in Light not only because they make the work so volatile but also because they have broken grounds for a new music that seems limitless.

The Jam: Sound Affects

This one should have been Sandinista!, which unfortunately committed the ultimate punk sin, long-windedness, and ran at least one side too long. Sound Affects is clean, tight and forceful, which is what being a mod is all about. If the Clash's London Calling was last year's Exile on Main Street, the most definitive statement by a prominent band of their ideas and abilities, then Sound Affects is this year's model. The Jam have become one of England's most important bands without Top o' the Pops hype, by writing honest songs that jolt the listener into confrontation with love, money, embarrassment, pain, helplessness and anger. And they've been doing this for years now. Some of Sound Affects is rock and roll, some is serious rock and roll, and some is just serious.

The Police: Zenyatta Mondatta

This is the best pop album of the year, written and performed by the world's best pop band. The Police are well-equipped for the stardom that Zenyatta Mondatta has deservedly thrust upon them: Three blonde heads (one, a genuine sex-symbol who not only plays the sexiest of instruments, the bass, but who also sings quite well), wonderful and catchy melodies, and an acute awareness that the best pop songs have always been about girls, add up to make the Police 1981's archtypical pop band. The first side of Zenyatta Mondatta is 25 minutes of uninterrupted pop genius unrivalled by anything in recent memory except for, of course, Roxanne from the first Police LP. Music this unforgettable should be policed closely, no?

Steely Dan: Gaucho

Gaucho is a puzzle that is not as compelling as Countdown to Ecstacy or The Royal Scam, yet what it sacrifices in immediacy it more than regains in wit and sophistication. It is technically flawless music that holds onto its soul rather than sounding cold and calculated. Becker and Fagen have always been masters at the great tease, and the female vocals in Babylon Sisters and the rhythm guitars churning behind My Rival prove that less is sometimes more. Gaucho is the Dan's tour-de-force, and they take it through a formidable array of styles; swing, gospel, funk, reggae, and disco all have moments here, yet nothing is overdone. And the lyrics, as with all previous Steely Dan albums, make a fine collection of poetry even without the music. But, you shouldn't throw this record away and just keep the words.

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

David Bowie: Scary Monsters

After a significant artistic link with German music (Kraftwerk and the synthesized wizard Brian Eno), David Bowie put his past three efforts (Low, Heroes, and Lodger) and a flash with Dadaism into perspective with the release of perhaps his most comprehensive, impressive, and accessible work to date — Scary Monsters. Major Tom of the late sixties now wants to return to earth: "The shrieking of nothing is killing me. I want to come back right now." Bowie, too, wants to return to new musical expression. This time what is new is Bowie's experiments with vocal distortions and pain (It's No Game, part 1), his chronicling the futility of social protest (It's No Game, part 2), and a standard of production and aesthetic values not seen in many releases this year.

Pete Townsend, Roy Bittan, and Robert Fripp compliment Bowie's sometimes complex and dense tunes and create significant power to sustain Bowie's driving work. Scary Monsters, inspired by Bowie's recent performance as the Elephant Man John Merrick, captures the rushing, restless quality Bowie has always possessed. That quality dominates this release.

Gary Numan: Telekon

Aside from a top ten single Cars, the majority of Gary Numan's work and his most recent effort, Telekon, are not known by large segments of American audiences.

The cover of Numan's latest album, Telekon, is a version of one of the surrealistic painter, Margritte's works. Like Margritte, Numan details a stark, horrific, polarized world replete with alienation, despair, and longing for death. Numan perhaps is music's modern with acknowledgements to Neitzche: "So what if God's dead . . . we must have done something wrong." Numan's vision is not a pretty one and he puts forth images both cold and suffocating; "Now I'm behind glass . . . It's all over." Numan also attacks increasing mechanization and indifference: "We went to work by proxy . . . I plugged my wife in just for show." Indeed, many of his lyrics are clipped responses and suitable for feeding into a computer. The music is hauntingly beautiful and danceable though the lyrics are despairing and alienating. Yet, one dances along with Numan, listening for his powerful expression of man as a wreckage with no hope left.

B-52's: Wild Planet

The B-52's followed up their wild and successful first release with an equally impressive effort — Wild Planet. Songs like 53 Miles West of Venus and Private Idaho are nice follow-ups to Planet Claire and Rock Lobster. The album possesses an unbound energy with impressive vocals and production values. The best thing about the B-52's is their lack of pretension, their sense of humor (evident in Quiche Lorraine, a song about a man who has lost his

(Continued on page 19)

The Kings Are Here To Stay

By PAUL BERN

One of the newest and rockingest albums out is the Kings' Are Here. The album rocks out to the fullest without being just a load of noise. This band from Canada has the knack of keeping a clear crisp sound even with the volume turned up all the way.

Bob Ezrin, the producer, had heard the Kings just after he finished producing The Wall for Pink Floyd when he offered to mix the album. When he heard more of their work, he said, "The bottom line is the music, and you guys have it," and decided to produce the album.

The Kings' early career included opening for bands like Bob Seger, Jeff Beck, and Gary Numan, as well as putting out their first single with Switchin' to Glide and This Beat Goes On. Later on, they played at several large concerts in Toronto that starred other greats like Elvis Costello, The B'52's, and the Talking Heads.

The songs on the album are about the happy side of life, which consists mainly of partying. This Beat Goes On is a mildly rocking tune about the fast life. Written by lead vocalist, David Diamond, and guitarist Aryan Zero (not Sonny and Cher), this song proclaims that the only way to be happy is to "rock till our strength is gone" and don't care about what other people think when you're having fun. This Beat Goes On continues into Switchin' to Glide and begins to put out some heavier Rock 'n' Roll.

Ace keyboardist, Sonny Keyes, makes his imprint on the album in Go Away. A song about the desires of a young man whose girlfriend's parents go away on vacation, Keyes mixes a spacy jam on his Farfisa organ with the traditional rock sound. If all the songs on the album are about life, then this one is the most true: the girl's parents come home early.

The album also has the theme song of V.U. life. Partyitis is, by far, the best song on the album; Zero turns into a madman on his guitar while the rest of the band "grabs some beer and shows 'em how to rock."

(Continued on page 21)

The Kings: David Diamond, Sonny Keyes, Max Styles and Aryan Zero

'MODERN ROMANCE'

By ALICE FISHER

Albert Brooks' latest film Modern Romance is for those people who enjoy viewing pathetic, strung-out, hypersensitive, self-pitying characters attempting to get their act together. In a word Modern Romance is dull. Unlike Albert Brooks' successes such as Real People or his films made for Saturday Night Live this film never gets off the ground.

In his first acting role, Brooks portrays Robert Cole, a film editor who is preoccupied with Mary Harvard (Kathryn Harrold) a customer relations person at a Savings and Loan. The audience reluctantly gets involved with Roberts' never ending search for the perfect women at the expense of his sensible, sensitive girl friend who for some reason puts up with his childish and possessive nature. He blatantly expresses his never ending questions, doubts, and anxieties of being male and over thirty. The thought of settling down and making the proverbial life long commitment is prominent in his mind. Only by breaking up with Mary can he look for the perfect woman, but at the same time, he is liable to lose the best relationship he has ever had. Any respect one builds for Mary's tolerance goes down the drain when she agrees to marry Robert and any hope for the film is lost when the old cliche is flashed on before the credits: "Robert and Mary were married three weeks later . . . Six months afterwards they were divorced."

Perhaps the film doesn't work because the concept of two people avoiding a life long commitment has been driven into the ground, or possibly because the acting was poor, or maybe because the best this so-called comedy could muster up is a smirk.

As a director Brooks was conservative and unoriginal. As a writer he was shallow and narcissistic, but Brooks' worst mistake was that he chose to do his own acting. There was a potential for an introspective, sensitive character which Brooks turned into an overbearing, overly jealous, know-it-all with whom one quickly loses patience.

In short this reviewer compares the film to paying good money to listen to a complete stranger endlessly expound upon life's difficulties. One is tempted to reply, "Life's tough, buddy, but you don't have to tell the whole world your problems."

DISCOUNT TYPING
Quality typing at discount prices. Reports, manuscripts, editing. Mail us your work — and save $.
Quick and Dependable (Mon.-Sat.)
7126 Germantown Ave.
Phila., PA 19119
Phone, 247-2267

SPRING SPECIALS

Authentic or surgeon's scrubb suits. Great for summer wear. From the beeches to the bars. (can even be cut for shorts). We want to thank Villanova for a great year of business. Since this is the last issue of the Villanovan - we'd like to offer our 100% cotton, colorful, reversible and roomy scrubb suits at reduced prices. Colors: O.R. green, I.C.U. blue, misty grey green, white, pink and yellow.

Tops $9.95, Pants $10.25, Complete set $18.00.

Send check or money order to Scrubbs, by Raphael, Dept. V. Box 756, Havertown, PA 19083. One week to 10 days delivery. $1.50 handling & postage.

The quickest way to get emergency money.

An emergency stop for repairs can wipe out even the best-heeled traveler. Luckily, all you need is the price of a phone call to get you the money before your car gets off the lift. Here's what to do when you need money in a hurry.

1. Call home. Report the situation, and tell the folks they can get emergency cash to you fast by phone.

2. Ask them to call Western Union's toll-free number, 800-325-6000 (in Missouri, 800-342-6700), anytime, day or night. They charge the money and the service fee to their MasterCard* or VISA† card. A Western Union Charge Card Money Order, up to $1,000, will be flashed to the Western Union office or agent nearest your emergency.

3. Pick up your money—usually within two hours—at the local Western Union office or agent. There are 8,500 nationally, except in Alaska. Conveniently, about 900 locations are open 24 hours. It's that easy.

Be sure to remind your parents about our toll-free number. It's all they need to call Western Union to the rescue.

*The MasterCard name is owned by Interbank Card Association.
†The VISA name is owned by VISA International.

Western Union Charge Card Money Order.

What We Liked This Year

(Continued from page 17)

love, a French poodle, to a Great Dane), and the fact that they are one of the best dance bands around. They are equally responsible for a resurge in sixties type dancing and plain old fun.

The Pretenders: The Pretenders

In a relatively short period of time and with one powerful release, the Pretenders have established themselves as possibly the premier talented new wave band.

With Chrissy Hines on vocals and solid musical support and writing, the band creates impressive rock and roll. Mystery Achievement and Precious are perhaps the strongest and sustaining tunes on the album and capture Hines sensuous vocals and sometimes indifferent pose.

XTC: Black Sea

XTC is a new wave British band, and like the Pretenders, possess talent and put forth quite literate musical compositions. The album has a distinctly British flavor to it, mixing rock, melody, and reggae in such driving tunes as Living Through Another Cuba, Generals and Majors, and Respectable Street. The band is possibly the most interesting one to come out of Britain this year and perhaps the most promising.

HONORABLE MENTION

Garland Jeffreys: Escape Artist

Bunny Waller: Bunny Waller Sings the Wailers.

Pete Townshend: Empty Glass

The Rolling Stones: Sucking in the 70's

Rolling Stones: Emotional Rescue

REO Speedwagon: Hi Infidelity

Pat Metheny: 80/81

U-2: Boy

You'll be amazed at all the opportunities and advantages the Army offers men and women with BSN degrees:

- Excellent starting salaries and benefits, including a liberal vacation policy.
- Real opportunity for advancement and professional growth—every Army Nurse is a commissioned officer.
- No basic training for nurses; just a basic orientation course to familiarize you with the Army Medical Department.
- The chance to travel; time to do the things you enjoy.
- Opportunity to qualify for specialized roles, teaching or additional education.

See if you qualify. Call collect to 301-677-4891
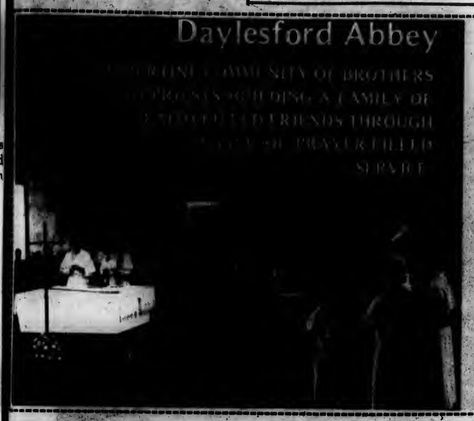
The Army Nurse Corps.

For more information, write:
The Army Nurse Corps.
Northeast Region, U.S. Army Recruiting
Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755
Name
Address Apt.
City, State, ZIP
Phone Age
CASS-NERRC



I am considering a religious vocation. Please send me information about the Norbertine way of Life.
Name
Address
City/State/Zip
Telephone (___)
Mail to:
Fr. Francis Dorff, O.Praem.
Daylesford Abbey
220 South Valley Road
Paoli, Pennsylvania 19301
OR Call: (215) 647-2530

HESPE'S of Philadelphia
115 Strafford Ave.
Wayne, PA.
Open for Lunch
Mon.-Fri., 11:30-3:00 pm
Dinners, Mon.-Thurs., 5:30-10:00 pm
Fri. and Sat., 5:30-11:00 pm
Banquet Facilities Available
We'll be open Sunday,
May 17th for graduation.
MAKE RESERVATIONS EARLY!

Holiday Inn®
Valley Forge
Welcomes the families of the 1981 graduating class of Villanova University
CONGRATULATIONS!
- 304 Luxurious Guest Rooms
- Sentry Post Dining Room
- Enclosed Year-Round Swimming
- 20 Minute Drive From Villanova

260 GODDARD BLVD.
King of Prussia, Pa.
215/265-7500

LIFEGUARDS
HEAD LIFEGUARDS
POOL MANAGERS
Needed for full and part time positions, in Montgomery, Bucks, Camden, Burlington and Delaware counties only. Lots of good summer jobs for responsible people.
Certification Required: Send qualifications and background info. to: Mr. Barnett, P.O. Box 64, New Britain, PA 18901.

PART-TIME
EVENINGS
Major investment firm in King of Prussia is hiring individuals who would like to work as investment representatives. You will receive an excellent background in investment and financial planning. If you are a responsible individual and interested in communicating with investors, please call C. Kurtas or L. Harker at 964-9340 for further info. or to arrange a personal interview. Begin to plan your career with us.

Celebrate Graduation
AT THE GREENHOUSE
RESTAURANT
Luncheon
Dinner
Sunday Brunch
Call for Reservations Now!
Belrose La. & King of Prussia Rd.
687-2801 • Radnor, Pa.

What Are We Gonna Do Now?

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

This is the conclusion to a story in the last issue about the influence British bands have had on America's music.

Dance Craze is the soundtrack from the soon-to-be-released film of the same title, which should be a killer. Most songs on this album grab you by the throat and shake you like someone jammed you into the three-minute rinse cycle of a Calypso washing machine. These bands heat up the stage until it smokes, and despite themes and styles that are similar, all of them have their own distinct styles.

Bad Manners contribute two titles: One is an exceptional idea that gets adequate treatment (Inner London Violence); the other, Lip Up Fatty, is just silly. Inner London Violence is somewhat saved by a torrid sax solo that sounds almost like Iggy the Pop's 1971, but there is nothing exceptional in either of these cuts. This could be a band just riding the fringes of a more powerful movement.

The English Beat released their first single on the Specials' Two-Tone label, then formed Go-Feet, their own company. Although their songs sound as simple as Bad Manners' or the Bodysnatchers', this is deceiving because a lot more is happening in them. The English Beat plays dirty, hard-driving numbers, taking advantage of the basic ska format (bass plays rhythm, percussion punctuates underneath guitar, keyboards chirp in melody) in Mirror in the Bathroom, or ripping off a riff from the Stones, like in Big Shot.

The debut album from Madness, One Step Beyond, went top 10 in England and stayed in the top 30 there for six months. Madness and the Specials are probably the two best examples of the sense of humor that the punk ethic brought into popular music, the first principle of which being that there are no rules. The whimsical piano melody behind Razor Blade Alley is absolutely Chaplinesque, and One Step Beyond, closing the first side of Dance Craze, combines a relentless rock beat with outrageous vocal effects and a sax that jumps like a cricket in a skillet. No one will ever accuse Madness of taking any rule too seriously.

Out of the three Selecter tunes on this LP, the most memorable is Missing Words, introduced by Terry of the Specials as, "yet another song dedicated to the Tory government and the s--t they're leading us into." The Selecter, like the Specials, put more thought into their music than most British ska bands, and the beginning of Missing Words is a subtle and delicate reminder to disco fans that dance music need not be mindless to be good.

The Specials would be the highlight of Dance Craze even if they didn't open and close the set (which they do), or their songs weren't the best (which they are). Much of the ska resurgence can be directly attributed to the Specials. At a time when record companies were apprehensive about signing ska bands, the Specials had the insight to start their own label, Two-Tone. Their debut record was produced by Elvis Costello, and went to the top position in the British charts within weeks of its release. Their slowed-down introduction to Nite Klub is the best playing on the entire LP, with a ripping blues piano and guitar that recreates the hot feeling of a late night Memphis session. It closes Dance Craze with a passion.

But the Specials have been most influential in England because of their politics, and this makes the relationship between the current ska movement and the punk craze of three years ago clear. Punk was political above all, and in their songs, the Specials, like the punks, present alternatives to nationalism and racism and hate. The National Front (a British right-wing youth movement of which some members are avowed Nazis and most are admitted racists) once showed up at a Specials' gig to shout, "Sieg Heil!" from the dance floor. Terry Hall, the lead vocalist, dared them to come up to the stage to have it out, and when they refused, the band dove into the audience to drive them from the arena.

One can hardly imagine Styx or Molly Hatchet doing anything except cranking up their amps to drown out the dissenters. In America, we tuck our heroes away inside El Lay where they beckon to us like vinyl images; in England, bands like the Clash cry from the alleys and the doorways of their Concrete Jungles. Until both our musicians and their audiences become more involved in what is really happening today, we will continue to follow England's musical lead instead of discovering new directions.

Attention Villanovans
CENTRAL PARK
GRAND LARCENY
Monday
DRINKS ARE HALF PRICE
Monday SHOTGUN

VINCENTIANS
BRING THE GOSPEL TO THE POOR

Fr. Vince O'Malley, C.M.

St. Vincent de Paul

Brother Mike Rively, C.M.

A LIFE YOU CAN BUILD A FUTURE ON
- Preaching
- Home and Foreign Missions
- Teaching in Universities, Seminaries and High Schools
- Parishes

VINCENTIAN SEMINARIES ARE LOCATED THROUGHOUT THE U.S.A.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CALL OR WRITE:
Phone: Area Code 609
452-1940 Office
452-2144 Seminary

VINCENTIAN VOCATION CENTER
c/o Fr. Charles Strollo, C.M.
Box XXX, Princeton, N. J. 08540
Name _____
Address _____
City & State _____ Zip _____
9

CONTEMPORARY VISION ASSOCIATES
BAUSCH & LOMB SOFT CONTACT LENSES
$59.00
• CONTACT LENSES Fitting, Orientation, and Follow-Up. $25.00
• CHEMICAL STARTER SOLUTION KIT $6.00
• THERMAL UNIT $35.00
• ONE YEAR CONTINUOUS CARE AND SERVICE AGREEMENT $25.00
One Day Service in most cases
No additional charges.
30 Day Money Back Guarantee on Cost of Lenses.
CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
896-7520
ARDMORE WEST SHOPPING CENTER
ARDMORE, PA.
20/20 OPTICAL CENTER

In Concert:

David: Not at His Best

By AMY MacLACHLAN

David Bromberg appeared to a baffled Villanova audience in the Connelly Center. Those who had seen him before appreciated the talent of this great musician even though he performed well below what he could do and has done in the past. Why? There are a number of possibilities. Maybe he was as shocked about coming to Villanova as his fans were at seeing him here. Maybe he was tired from a long day of class at violin-making school. Maybe he just didn't care what Villanova thought. The David Bromberg of the ten o'clock performance was not the David Bromberg of his days of touring folk festivals with his old band.

Concerned mostly with what ever came into his head, he put on a rather dull and sleepy show. He played one love song after another, a still hard-to-get-used-to format from his earlier days when he was renowned for his blatent hate and comical mistrust of women. One must make an attempt to understand the apathy felt when a performer works hard all week and can only look forward to a series of one night stands at local colleges. He could have been good. His fans know it. Those who were seeing him for the first time were probably disappointed. But unfortunately anyone who is the least bit familiar with Mr. Bromberg will agree that he probably doesn't really care what anyone thought.

David Bromberg at the Connelly Center. Jeff Page Photo

Paradise Regained

By SUE BREHM

The five-piece rock band Styx appeared before enthusiastic sold-out crowds at the Philadelphia Spectrum on April 3 and 4th, to promote their tenth album Paradise Theater. Since forming in Chicago in 1968, they have become enormously popular among American teenagers.

Their two hour show offered a wide variety of songs highlighting every phase of their career. Styx theatrically opened with a hit from their new release Rockin' the Paradise into Blue Collar Man from Pieces of Eight, followed by the title song from Grand Illusion and then Lights from Cornerstone. The band's last three lps. — Cornerstone, Pieces of Eight and Grand Illusion — all went triple platinum. Styx is one of the few bands ever to earn three platinum lps. in a row. So, despite the critical neglect/abuse often received in the past, Styx has become one of the most respected and successful rock bands to date.

The members of Styx consist of three lead singer/songwriters, Dennis DeYoung (keyboards, piano and frontperson), Tommy Shaw (lead guitarist) and James Young (lead guitarist and keyboards). The rhythm section is handled by twins Chuck Panozzo (bass guitarist) and John Panozzo (percussionist). The individual members of Styx have the talent to combine their different styles into a solid piece of music that is unique. Their music is a complex balance of hard-rock blended with romantic melodies and rich tenor vocal harmonies.

Styx continued to energetically perform well-know favorites such as: Lady, Crystal Ball, Suite Madam Blue, Snowblind, Miss America and Babe to name only a few. They expertly correlate the light show and professionally choreographed stage moves, to dynamically emphasize certain sections or beats of a song.

Paradise Theater uses the image of an old movie theater as a symbol of American decline. Lyrically this album contains messages of social value. The members of Styx are conservative, patriotic and optimistic and they urge everyone to be dedicated, hard-workers and to be the best one can be. They eventually want to take the concept of Paradise Theater and extend it into a rock musical/theatrical production.

Review

(Continued from page 18)

The flip side begins with Run Shoes Running which is much on the order of This Beat Goes On in being one of the quieter songs on the album. The Kings continue with their bright look on life even though things are not always that great.

Anti-Hero Man is the song that really says what the Kings are thinking. The Kings hold to the maxim "Let's not get too serious, there's no time to waste." They are the anti-heroes because they don't play the game of changing the truth to suit their needs or not taking the responsibility for their actions. The Kings believe in partying so long as you can keep control.

The last song, My Habit has a very New-Wave sound to it, much more than the others. The band puts their all into finding the things they like and turning them into music. This album proves that The Kings definitely Are Here.

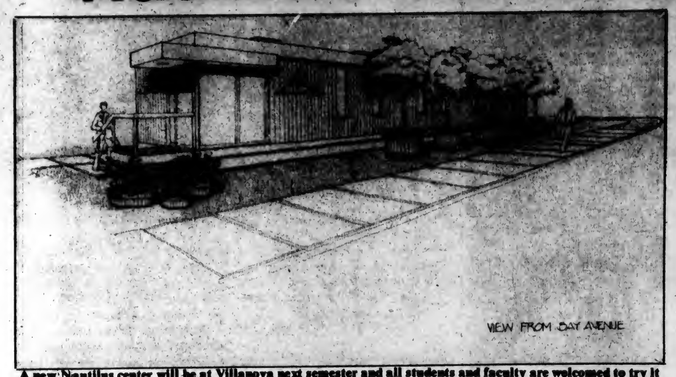
EVEN IN SPACE
THE ULTIMATE ENEMY IS STILL MAN.
OUTLAND
SEAN CONNERY in
"OUTLAND"
PETER BOYLE
JAMES B. SIKKING KIKA MARKHAM
Executive Producer STANLEY O'TOOLE
Written and Directed by PETER HYAMS
SPECIAL ENGAGEMENTS BEGIN MAY AND JUNE

THE GALAXY
In Somerdale Park
Somerdale, N.J.
609-435-1888
SALUTES
VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY STUDENTS!
No admission charge with this ad and college ID.
SPECIAL PRICES
Tuesday-Saturday
TUESDAYS "PREACHER"
FRI. & SAT. - "FRENZY" AND "CREATURE"
Sundays
Columbia Recording Artists "QUINCY"

Nautilus Comes to Villanova



A new Nautilus center will be at Villanova next semester and all students and faculty are welcomed to try it out.

By JIM FEMIA

The first mobile Nautilus training clinic in the country will be at Villanova next semester for the use of all students and faculty. ATRA, Athletic Training/Research Associates, which is the largest and oldest training center in New Jersey, will set up a mobile station at the rear of the field house. The 70-foot long, enclosed training center will house 20 Nautilus machines, or two full circuits of training.

Peter Halsch, representative from ATRA, was at Villanova this week explaining that, "Many colleges and universities have the Nautilus system but do not know how to properly use it. This system is the first fully supervised operation which makes the difference between using the machines right and wrong. Halsch stressed the point that supervision is the key to the system.

"Each time a person wants to use the Nautilus,he makes an appointment. Upon arrival, there will be a staff member waiting for you to properly supervise and guide you throughout the workout. This supervision is the key to success," Halsch continued.

The key to the ARTA program is the 30 to 40 minute workout. In just three sessions a week, you will work all the major muscle groups. Remember, whether your sport is tennis, golf, football, basketball — or all of these — ATRA can help improve your condition for that sport.

Now for what will interest you all the most. Athletes in season will have the right to use ATRA for no cost. Athletes out of season will receive a reduced rate. All other students and faculty must pay a fee of $85 per semester. When compared with other Nautilus centers, which usually charge somewhere in the vicinity of $135 per three months, the ATRA system is also the cheapest way to go.

Halsch explains, "The ATRA system's main goal is to prevent injuries. If the ATRA system is used smartly and properly, muscles will become stronger which will prevent the most common injuries such as pulled muscles and stretched ligaments."

The appointment system is much more effective than any other. Instead of athletes using any machine they like, with the end result in mass confusion as with the universal system in the field house, the ATRA system will be much more organized and allow the student to complete a workout in just 30 to 40 minutes.

Preregistration is a necessity for the ATRA program. By tearing out the coupon below and turning it into the field house ticket office or mailing it to ATRA, East 26 Park Place, Paramus, N.J. 07652, telephone 201-265-5450, the student will be ready to go in September.

ATRA COUPON

Name:
Home Address:
Grade: (fall semester):
Phone:
Check one:
——on campus undergrad
——off campus undergrad
——faculty
——grad student

Important: Tear out coupon and bring to ticket office in the field house or mail to ATRA, 26 Park Place, Paramus, N.J. 07652, (201) 265-5450 by May 15 for preregistration information.

The Week in Sports

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL

April 15 was a painful day for many people. The nation's taxpayers said good-bye to part of their paychecks. What was left of the Villanova community bid a bitter farewell to our football team. And the softball team hit it on the chin in extra innings. The Cats led 5-4 after six innings of play, but they could not hold onto the lead. UPenn won the game 6-5.

The Cats picked up a victory against Navy to split the two games they played over break. Shaula Demarco pitched the shutout, while Ann Hannigan had the big hit. Hanniagan hit a bases clearing double, which was more than enough for Demarco.

MEN'S TRACK

The Villanova track team will be heading to the Penn Relays without Jumbo Elliott for the first time in maybe 60 years. The Cats do not intend to let a legend die. Even without several key runners, most notably Mike England and Anthony Tufariello, the Cats are content to enter three strong relays in the hope they can capture three firsts.

In all three relays, senior Sydney Maree will be the hub. The Cats have won the 4 x 800 relay six consecutive times. On that team, Lucks or Borgese will lead-off and hand the baton to O'Sullivan, Hunter and Maree, in that order.

Rodney Wilson will defend this 110 meter hurdle championship that he won last year.

Villanova is heading into the Penn Relays with a great deal of momentum. Villanova was superb in the Dogwood Relays, which were held at the University of Tennessee.

Villanova's 15:02.91 timing in the 4 x 1500 meter relay set a new Dogwood Relay record. Sydney Maree anchored three of Villanova's winning relays and was selected by Dogwood officials as the meet's outstanding runner.

The 4 x 800 meter relay team also captured a first place finish. Borgese, Lucks, O'Sullivan and Maree turned in the top time of 7:28.16.

May is Track Season at Villanova

THE BIG EAST CONFERENCE

INTERCOLLEGIATE ASSOCIATION OF AMATEUR ATHLETES MDCCCLXXVI

2nd ANNUAL BIG EAST CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Sunday, May 3

105th ANNUAL IC4A CHAMPIONSHIPS

Saturday and Sunday, May 23 and 24

Tickets available at the Field House Ticket Office

Driscoll's Prepared Statement

It is with genuine regret that I annouce this morning, in behalf of the Board of Trustees, the discontinuance of football as a major sport at Villanova University.

This action was taken yesterday during the regular April meeting of the board.

I say regret because participation in intercollegiate football has been a proud tradition at Villanova for nearly 87 years and the decision to discontinue such a tradition was difficult for all of us on the board.

But even the most cherished of endeavors must be seen in the harsh light of reality.

Villanova's planning for the 1980's calls for intensified rededication to its academic mission, as a private, church-related university of the first order. Providing the programs, facilities and salaries that are absolutely necessary to further that mission demands increasingly careful allocation of limited internal resources and the obtaining of greater external support from those who have benefited from and who value that mission. The willingness and the courage to make difficult decisions are signs of Villanova's institutional strength and integrity and a pledge of faithfulness to those who believe in all that it stands for.

Needless to say, however, in taking this action the university will honor all commitments to Coach Bedesem and his staff, whose dedication and competence have never been called in question and who are owed a debt of deepest gratitude; the university will also, of course, honor its full scholarship commitment to its student athletes, and we share with true concern and affection their understandable feelings at this moment.

The decision to discontinue football at Villanova was not easy nor was it ill-considered. For nearly 10 years, the expenses connected with fielding a major college football team have come under periodic review.

Eight years ago, in a stable economy, the board, evaluating football, decided to continue the program with the proviso that Villanova seek membership in a league and try to obtain additional revenue by seeking to have some of its games televised.

The formation of a league with Villanova as a member was under consideration briefly by some Eastern College officials but it never materialized. Nor did the opportunity to appear in televised games.

Meanwhile inflation began to ravage the economy and the costs of education rose alarmingly. Externally generated expenses which the institution cannot control such as energy, social security taxes and compliance with government regulations have been skyrocketing.

In order to balance the operating budget alone, Villanova has had to focus on controlling costs internally through short-run economies. More recently, the budget cuts in education proposed by President Reagan promise an even greater strain on the fiscal resources of private independent institutions like Villanova.

The board feels that the university cannot, in good conscience, do other than re-evaluate its priorities when a third of the buildings on campus require renovation, when up-to-date laboratory equipment and facilities need to be acquired and additional scholarship aid provided — to name a few unmet priorities.

I share the deep disappointment of students, alumni, and other followers of Villanova football. It is my hope that they will not see it as a capricious, hasty decision, but rather see it for what it is, a step reluctantly taken, to achieve a goal by insuring the financial stability of Villanova University and its 138-year commitment to quality education.

Thus it was a deepened sense of mission and under this combination of circumstances that the decision to discontinue football was made.

Bedesem Responds to Football Decision

(Continued from page 1)

"They (the Board of Trustees) have run almost seven years of a yearly study of football; its costs and how it fit in with the University as a whole," added Aceto.

With the football program being eliminated, Boston College, Notre Dame, and Holy Cross are the only private Roman Catholic four-year institutions which field a major college football team.

Players and coaches experience "shock" over announcement

The announcement to discontinue football at Villanova shocked virtually everyone connected with the program.

"Right now, my feeling is one of extreme disappointment," said Bedesem. "We had an exceptionally fine recruiting year and everything was going in our direction, and that's honestly how we felt. We felt that in the six years that I had been here, that this was our most gratifying year.

"I just feel badly right now for our players and our coaches. As long as I take care of them, I'll feel much better," added Bedesem.

The football team held a meeting in the Fieldhouse during the press conference. At this time, Bedesem told the players about the decision.

"I think at their age level, this is shattering. This is something that happened and they're crushed," said Bedesem. "By the same token, they're going to learn that tomorrow they'll get up, the sun's going to shine, and they're going to have to get on their own two feet and make some decisions and continue their life. I think we have many good players that are going to have to do that.

"My concern are the fringe players, the kids that love the game but maybe aren't good enough to receive a scholarship somewhere else at this particular time because of the time of year we're in. What's going to happen to them?" asked Bedesem.

Spencer Prescott, an assistant football coach, was upset with the quickness of the decision. "The thing that got me was there was no warning. I was just in complete shock. It was like a bombshell that dropped on us."

Prescott was unsure about his future at Villanova. "They told us our contracts would be honored. I don't know what the means. I guess I'm looking for a job," said Prescott.

During the press conference, approximately 200 people, including many football players, were gathered on the Fieldhouse floor. Chants of "We want football" came from the crowd.

The Wildcats will no longer be running their offense as they ended their 87 year old football history with the surprise announcement.

What Some Others Think

"I feel it is a tragedy and I am very disappointed. I think such a major decision as this should not be an overnight decision. I just feel sorry for the players and coaches who were having such a successful spring."

Joe Archidiacono
Senior, Offensive Tackle

"I just can't believe that people who are supposed to be of overwhelming intelligence and also have great concern for 'student athletes' could make a spur-of-the-moment decision of this magnitude. This decision affected 100 people's lives in a negative way. Personally it is probably the biggest disappointment in my entire life."

Bill Conners
Junior, Halfback

"I think that the University will regret this later on down the road. They really didn't think of the players when they made this decision. It's a damn shame."

Mark Spencer
Junior, Defensive Tackle

"I feel that Villanova University made a decision last week that it will feel for years to come. I think that Villanova forfeited a major part of itself in the process. And I can only add my heartfelt thanks for a great four years and a deep sorrow for Villanova classes in the future."

Joe Makoid
Senior, Middle Guard

"I was initially very surprised and shocked, now I'm just very disappointed. I just hope it all works out for the underclassmen who were caught quite off guard. I feel it is a tragedy and I think the Villanova community has been the recipient of a poor, damaging decision."

Don Ziesel
Senior, Fullback

"My first reaction was that I was extremely shocked. Hopefully everyone involved with the program will be able to relocate at other schools if they want to. As it turns out, some football players will move on to better football programs so for them, the decision by the Board of Trustees was very beneficial. I just wonder whether the Board exhausted all of their alternatives before making this decision. Villanova just won't be the same without a football program. The alumni will be adversely affected."

Roy Remsberg

"I just think it's typical of the administration. The Trustees haven't given us full support in the four years I've been here, which is evident by the number who showed up. I think it's a pretty heavy decision to make with only half your board members there."

Pat O'Brien
Senior, Quarterback

"I think it is stupid. I don't believe they (Board of Trustees) looked at the overall picture. They haven't taken into consideration how much football added to the already non-existent social life."

Mike Gold
Senior, Running Back

"This is the end of a long tradition of football at Villanova. Eighty-seven years, I believe. It was a shock to the people who were close to the program. It was heart-breaking to me. I hate to see it go. I hope the kids get taken care of."

Howie Long
Senior, Defensive Tackle

"I really had no idea this was coming. I'm in total shock. I'm very bitter. I came here to get a good college education and I made a commitment to the University. But it looks like they turned around and back-stabbed me."

Steve Tagye
Sophomore, Offensive Guard

"Even if Villanova had a valid reason for dropping the program they should have done it after last season. It was terrible timing. It forces a player to make decisions in very short periods of time. If the decision was made in January a lot of people could be playing spring ball right now."

Scott Hatchett
Junior, Defensive Back

"I do not believe the Board of Trustees knew what they were doing. I don't think they took into consideration the effect of such a decision not only on the football players, but the community and the band. This decision will also hurt the track team. No longer will Villanova be getting athletes like Timmy Robinson and Willie Sydnor."

Joe Borajkiewicz
Junior Punter

"It hurts me to see an 87 year old tradition end on such a saddened note. But the one thing I would like to do is wish all of members of the Villanova football team the best of luck in their futures."

STEVE PASQUARIELLO,
FRESHMAN LINEBACKER

"I think it is a decrease in the athletic standards of Villanova. Not only will the whole football program be effected by the situation but the whole student body and alumni in general will be effected by the decision."

KEVIN FOYE
FRESHMAN RUNNING BACK

Football News Rocks Villanova

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Imagine you're a football player. Imagine you're good enough to be offered a scholarship at a Division I college. Also imagine you're in your second semester — it doesn't matter which year — and you're sleeping in your dormitory room after a tough day of spring practice. Everything is fine and dandy, so far.

But wait.

Now imagine two assistant coaches knocking on your door at 3 a.m. and telling you, "They dropped the program." After you question what the heck they're doing up in the middle of the night and tell them to stop joking they tell you that they're serious.

After 87 years on the college football scene, Villanova will no longer be represented on the gridiron. It will no longer be on anyone's schedule. There will not be spring practices, Blue-White intrasquad games, parents' weekend games or homecoming games.

The Board of Trustees decided it and there was no room for renegotiating. According to the press release, it was done "to achieve a goal by insuring the financial stability of Villanova University." But releases don't convey the feelings of the players or the entire body.

Billy Conners has worked hard in his grid career at Villanova. The former All-Catholic running back from Bishop Kenrick High persevered through a red-shirted season with a broken wrist and three years as an understudy. Looking toward his senior year in September, he expected to be one of the leading ball carriers.

According to him, "Backfield coach Spencer Prescott said, 'Billy, I hate to tell you this, but they've dropped football,' I was stunned, I couldn't believe it," said the Norristown area athlete. Shocked, Conners went on to say, "I don't know how in God's name they (The Board of Trustees) could do this."

For defensive coordinator and line coach Lou Ferry, his 21 years of coaching at Villanova has suddenly ended. "Villanova's been a great part of my life; I'm saddened," stated the former pro footballer. Ferry has no plans presently, stressing most colleges are set with their coaching staffs for the 1981 football season. "(Head coach Dick) Bedesem called last night, around 12-12:15, and informed me the decision the board made to drop football. We had no idea it was being considered," said the puzzled coach yesterday before a press conference.

Although all scholarships will be honored, including those of recruits who opted for Villanova next fall, tough decisions will be made by the players, thanks to the sudden move taken by the board. Should they transfer and start somewhere else or remain on the Main Line and on a scholarship? And should the recruits attend Villanova or choose another college on such late notice?

"You're faced with a decision you thought you'd never have to make," argued junior linebacker Anthony Griggs. Griggs was informed of the bad news at 3 a.m. Wednesday in his dorm by teammates Jim McCarthy and Kenny DeFeo. "Ten minutes later (defensive linebacker coach Joe) Clark and Spencer asked if I heard (about the board's action), and I asked, 'Is it true?' The administration took a vote and dropped the program just like that, murmured the bewildered linebacker.

Griggs is not certain now whether he'll transfer or stay at Villanova, but he summed up many of the players reactions best by saying, "They pulled the rug from under us, we had our feet solidly planted." Not able to hold back his emotions, he continued, "I don't understand why it's sort of like a death. Villanova is always doing something like this. Yeah, I feel bitter."

The Villanova Football Stadium — seen today as it will be seen in September. Charlie Guida Photo

Sitting next to Griggs in the Field House bleachers prior to the press conference was close friend John Cason. Cason, a freshman runningback from Roman Catholic, was informed of the decision at 3:30 a.m. Wednesday by Coach Prescott. "I don't think I'll stay here," said Cason. "You're too good an athlete," claimed Griggs. "I'll beat you if you stay here."

"At a top rate school you have to mold yourself (to fit the football program)," pointed out Cason. Similar to Griggs, Cason felt bitter towards the board's action. According to Cason, most players will transfer. "They should (transfer)," concluded Cason.

Although Cason has three more seasons by NCAA rules, Griggs and Joe Borajkiewicz, a junior and classmate of Griggs at John F. Kennedy in Willingbor, N.J., have only one season left. "And not too many colleges want a one-year player," said Borajkiewicz. Although confused, the punter expressed bitterness also, "I'm here four years to play, and football is gone in less than a day."

Meanwhile, in the background, more than 300 students and football supporters had gathered on the Field House court waiting for an official word from the administration. "Perfect timing for Villanova," yelled one student. Could he have meant most students were on their way home for the Easter break and couldn't express their dissatisfaction on campus or did he mean all players, including recruits, had made plans for the '81 season and suddenly the board "Pulls the rug from under their feet?"

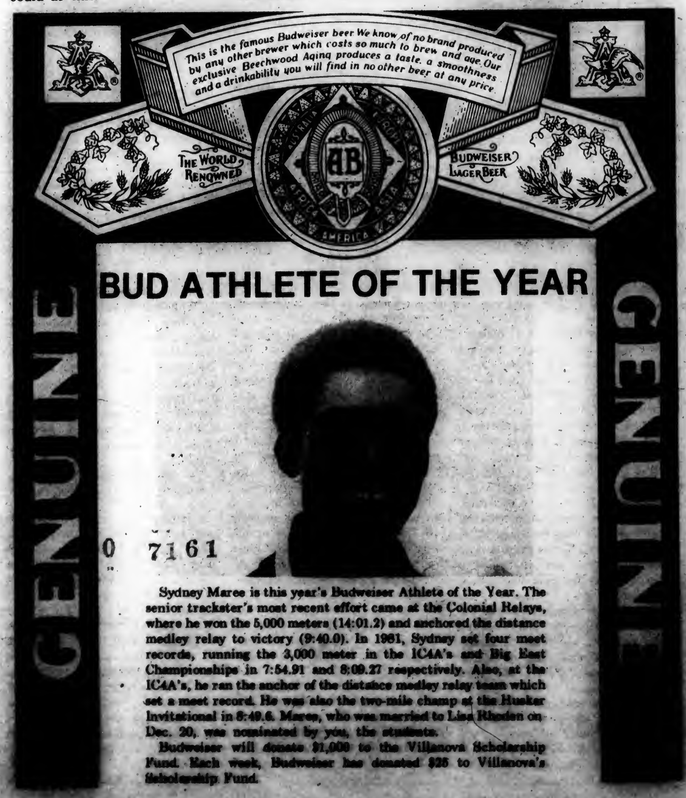
Many players may opt for transferring. "Transferring is not an easy thing," claims Dave Femovich, "You're an outsider having to get comfortable again," said the offensive tackle Femovich, who already transferred from Virginia, will remain at Villanova for his senior year.

Citing the financial reasons for the board's action, Borajkiewicz declared there was no need for a recent guard house built on campus at an estimated cost of $90,000. "Was that needed, was that really needed?" Borajkiewicz continued, "They should've never put in the astroturf — that's $1.3 million they could've saved. I don't understand it at all."

Yesterday morning there were hundreds of people who couldn't understand what was happening. And soon there will be probably be hundreds, maybe thousands more who don't understand.

A boisterous Villanovan summed up the frayed feelings on campus when he yelled in the Field House yesterday, "Villanova 1, students 0."

(reprinted by permission of Times Herald)



Top Field at Elliott Track Meet

By DAVE COSKEY

Many of todays athletes are frowned upon as money misers. A professional athlete in the Philadelphia area costs upward of $300.00 for a personal appearance. This on top of their already spiralling salaries.

The sport of track and field still takes a backseat in the United States. The reasons are hard to figure. But consider the chances of having the greatest names in football, baseball or any major sport all together for one athletic performance. The cost would be phenominal.

This is what makes track so special.

The perfect example is the Jumbo Elliott Invitational Track Meet. The meet, which is slated to premiere at Villanova Stadium on May 30th, might very well develop into one of the outstanding meets in the country this year. What is so different about this particular sporting event is that each person connected with the production is donating his or her time to honor Jumbo Elliott.

All of which says something about Jumbo Elliott and the sport which was such an intregral part of his life.

The current field lists a who's who of track and field; Don Paige, Steve Scott, John Walker, Rod Dixon, James Robinson, Renaldo Nehemiah, and a cast of world and Olympic champions will make this the sports event the outstanding caliber that Jumbo stood for.

Currently meet promoters are hoping that the Jumbo Invitational will develop into an annual event benefitting the Jumbo Elliott Memorial Fund here at Villanova. "What we are hoping to do is establish a Millrose Games of the outdoors," said Jumbo's son Jim Elliott.

Several races are currently under sponsorship from major corporations. The mens 800-meter run and the womens 3,000 — meter run are two designated races that Mobil Corporation has included in their format of Grand Prix Competition which will culminate with the sponsorship of the USA/Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships in Sacramento California, on June 19, 20 and 21. The Mobil Corporation will offer a six meet circuit, with athletes to qualify for prize money for their respective track clubs. Ten different events will be scored on a preliminary basis before the USA Championships, which will determine the final scoring.

Other meets which will participate in the two meet scoring are the UCLA/Pepsi Invitational in Los Angeles, The California Relays in Modesto, the Tom Black Track Classic in Knoxville, and the Track Federation Association national Outdoor Meet in Wichita.

The 800 field should be especially strong with Villanova's Don Paige rated first in the world last year, and James Robinson rated second behind Paige in the United States last season.

CONTINUED

ON

NEXT REEL

END OF

REEL

PLEASE

REWIND

TOP

Film Identification

Fort Road
A&D
557 Fort Road
St. Paul, MN 55102

LEFT

RIGHT

150 MM

6″

PRECISION RESOLUTION TARGET™